"A charming little book. The chapters on shoeing, roughing, going to cover, and coming home, and half a-dozen minor points connected with sport, are very good, and they are the more valuable because they are the remarks of a practical man."—Baily's Magazine of Sports.

II.

DOG-BREAKING; the most Expeditious, Certain and Easy Method, whether great excellence or only mediocrity is desired. By Colonel HUTCHINSON. With Woodcuts. Post 8vo, 9*s.*

"A more useful book to the sportsman than this has not been published. The author is a practical man, and has forgotten nothing: and the many things he teaches, he teaches well. The breed of dogs is not overlooked, and all things are taught that may make every man his own dog-breaker."—Bell's Life.

"One of the clearest and most comprehensive works upon dogs and shooting that the age is in possession of. Colonel Hutchinson has abundantly studied the subject on which he has written, and proves himself to have been an attentive observer of the canine species; thus his remarks are solid and worthy of attention, and highly calculated to answer, in no small degree, the author's most useful intention."—Sporting Review.

News of the Week.

In the House of Lords on Tuesday, the Post Office Savings Banks Bill was read a third time and passed. The Mutiny Bill and the Marine Mutiny Bill passed through committee. The Select Committee on the Augmentation of Benefices Bill was nominated after a discussion, in which Lord St. Leonards, the Earl of Derby, and the Lord Chancellor took part. On Thursday the Alkali Works' Regulation Bill was read a second time. The Mutiny Bill and the Marine Mutiny Bill were read a third time and passed. In answer to the Earl of Malmesbury, Earl Russell said that Her Majesty's Government had proposed Prince William of Denmark as a candidate for the throne of Greece, with the sanction of the King of Denmark, and with the assent of the Emperor of the French and the Emperor of Russia. They had also determined to cede the Ionian Islands to Greece after the other Powers which were parties to the Treaty of Vienna had consented to that step. On the motion of Earl Granville a select committee was appointed to inquire into the merits of the several schemes before Parliament for the construction of lines of railway within the limits of the metropolis.

In the Commons on Monday the House went into committee on the Civil Service Estimates, Class 3, and agreed to the various items without a division. The Local Government Act (1858) Amendment Bill passed through committee. The Telegraphs Bill, as amended, was considered and agreed to. The Lords' amendments to the Salmon Exportation Bill were considered and agreed to. On Tuesday, before the House entered upon public business, Mr. Walpole moved that out of respect to the memory of Sir George Lewis, the House should then adjourn. Lord Palmerston seconded the motion, which, after a few words of sympathy from Mr. Disraeli, was unanimously agreed to. On Wednesday Sir M. Peto moved the second reading of the Burials Bill. Lord R. Cecil moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. The Chancellor of the Exchequer and Sir George Grey supported the motion for the second reading, Mr. Disraeli opposed it. On a division the amendment was carried by a majority of 125, the numbers being 221 to 96. The Bill was therefore lost. The Gardens in Towns Protection Bill, and the Oaths Relief in Criminal Proceedings (Scotland) Bill passed through Committee. The Lords amendments of the Births and Deaths Registration (Ireland) Bill were considered and agreed to. On Thursday the Chancellor of the Exchequer made his financial statement. In a speech of three hours he entered into an elaborate detail of figures showing that he had the large surplus of 3,874,000*l.* to deal with, of which he proposed to apply 3,343,000*l.* to the remission of taxation, keeping in hand a balance of 531,000*l.* He proposed to remit 2*d.* in the pound on the income tax, and at the same time allow a deduction of 60*l.* from all incomes ranging from 100*l.* to 200*l.*, before they are submitted for assessment. He also proposed to reduce the duty on tea to 1*s.* per lb., to repeal the small commercial charges in the shape of the penny and other imposts on dock entries, and the 1*s.* 6*d.* stamp on bills of lading outwards. He also proposed to advance the duty on chicory to the same proportion as that charged on coffee; to require Clubs to take out licenses for the sale of spirituous liquors, and to grant licenses to sell beer in small quantities to certain classes of persons who are at present precluded from obtaining them. He further proposed to abolish the exemption which corporations and charities have hitherto enjoyed from the payment of income tax; to subject carriers, travelling under four miles an hour and conveying passengers, to one-half the duty now paid by stage carriages, to abolish the exemption of excursion trains from duty, and to commute the present payment on railway trains of 5 per cent. with exemptions into a payment of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. without exemptions. He also proposed to pay off 1,000,000*l.* Exchequer Bonds when they fall due, retaining power to re-issue them, if such a step be rendered necessary by the continuance of the Lancashire distress. He concluded by referring with great satisfaction to the result of the commercial treaty with France, which had, he said, more than made up for the falling off in our trade with the United States. After a short discussion, in which a general approval of the leading features of the Budget was expressed, resolutions giving effect to the proposed changes were agreed to, and ordered to be reported. The second reading of the Assurances Registration (Ireland) Bill was adjourned. The Thames Embankment (South Side) Bill was read a second time. The Office of Secretary at War Abolition Bill passed through committee.

A despatch from St. Petersburg states that on Sunday, being the Russian Easter Sunday, an Imperial manifesto was issued, granting a full and entire amnesty to all Poles in the kingdom who shall lay down their arms and return to their allegiance by the 13th of May. The manifesto also announces that the institutions granted to the Polish people shall be maintained, and, after practical experience of their working, shall be developed according to the necessities of the age and the country. The accounts from Poland concur in stating that the proffered amnesty has been everywhere rejected, and that the Revolutionary Government has announced that the insurgents will not lay down their arms until they have obtained the independence of their country.

Admiral Seymour, of her Majesty's yacht Victoria and Albert, arrived at Sandringham Hall, on a short visit to his Royal Highness, and left Sandringham on Wednesday morning for Barwick Hall. According to present arrangements their Royal Highnesses leave Sandringham to-day, and proceed by special train to Windsor, through Lynn and Wisbeach, where great efforts have been made by all classes to give their Royal Highnesses a cordial reception. After receiving an address from the corporation, the special train will proceed to March, and thence to Windsor, where the Prince will stay on a visit to the Queen for a few days, after which his Royal Highness will take possession of his town residence, Marlborough House. Immediately after their Royal Highnesses leave Sandringham the Hall will be partially unroofed, and a large number of workmen, under Messrs. Holland & Son, will proceed to make the extensive additions that have been decided upon.

The Wedding Presents.—On Thursday the wedding presents to the Prince and Princess of Wales were exhibited to the public, in the new court at the South Kensington Museum. They include all the bridal cadeaux which their Royal Highnesses have received, from the simple little gifts of children up to the regal offerings made by the Queen, by the Prince himself, or by Continental Powers. Not a single gift made has been omitted. Shawls, laces, dresses, cloaks, are all lent without restriction as to time; in fact, for as long a period as the public show any interest in seeing them. The gifts are divided into five classes—jewellery and goldsmith's work, silver plate, porcelain, textile fabrics, and miscellaneous; but, except in the matter of jewellery, no actual division is attempted, and the plate and china, shawls, laces, and works of art, are grouped together with beautiful effect as to form and colour. The jewellery makes a magnificent display. There are whole suites of gems, with bracelets, rings, brooches, lockets, and even tiaras, for almost every day in the week. The most magnificent of these are, of course, those given by the Prince himself, by her Majesty, and by the King of Denmark. The latter is a truly Royal gift—a gorgeous necklace of five rows of brilliants and pearls, terminating in the centre in an enamel facsimile of the famous Byzantine ornament—the much-revered cross of Dagmar, beautifully executed. Still more beautiful and tasteful is the parure of diamonds and opals presented by the Queen in the name of the late Prince Consort, and made from a design drawn by his Royal Highness himself. Near it are a superb pearl and diamond necklace and earrings, the gift of the Prince to his bride, and one of the most costly of them all. The most costly, however, is the grand diadem of 11 fine brilliants, also given by the Prince to the Princess the day before the marriage. In another case is a suite of Indian ornaments, consisting of corsage, pair of bracelets, and armlet, entirely composed of pearls, emeralds, and diamonds, the gift of the Queen. An exquisitely beautiful gold necklace, given by the Prince, is in the Etruscan form. The young Princes and Princesses of the Royal family make a joint present of a noble brooch of brilliants and sapphires; the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse a bracelet of turquoises and brilliants; the Duchess of Cambridge a magnificent diamond and emerald brooch; the Princess Mary a diamond bracelet; and the Duke of Cambridge a diamond and enamel bracelet. The Landgrave William of Hesse and sisters give a beautiful parure of solid gold, of a fine old Danish design; and the Chamberlain Juel, another suite of the same richness; while the inhabitants of the two islands Laaland and Falster also send a gold suite of ancient Scandinavian design, consisting of a massive diadem, armlet, brooch, hairpin, button earrings, and finger-rings, all of massive gold, and of quaint old Runic design. One of the most interesting presents in this part of the collection is that made by the bridesmaids—a bracelet in eight compartments, each one containing a miniature of a bridesmaid, with her initials set in diamonds on the cover of the portrait. The ladies of Liverpool give a cross composed of eleven large and superb brilliants, suspended from a row of pearls; the ladies of Manchester, a very fine opal and brilliant bracelet; the ladies of Leeds, a fine diamond bracelet in a white and gold casket. In a case by themselves are three bouquet holders, one from the Maharajah Dhuleep Sing, one from the Lady Mayoress, one from the ladies of Gravesend. That given by Dhuleep Sing is a most massive and costly ornament, of rock crystal and gold, jewelled over with diamonds, emeralds, rubies, and pearls. The Highland Companies of the Edinburgh Rifle Volunteers gave a beautiful and characteristic plaid or shawl brooch, with a Gaelic inscription, and Lord Harris a massive chased gold Indian bangle, set with rubies and emeralds. In the silver plate the most conspicuous ornament is the noble silver-gilt toilet service presented by the Royal Household, which is said to be the most costly present of the kind ever made. Near it is a magnificent silver-gilt and jewelled vase, in the style of Holbein, the gift of the Duke of Buccleuch. Among the porcelain gifts there is a vase almost large enough to bathe in, given by the King and Queen of Prussia, from the Royal factory at Meissen, the middle portion containing a portrait of the King. Near this are a ewer and plateau in the style of the 16th century, an imitation of the exquisite Limoges enamels, from the Royal Worcester Works, the gift of Lord Spencer. The Dowager Duchess of Sutherland gives a china service and a beautiful pair of beakers, made by Minton, which will bear favourable contrast with the Sèvres clock and turquoise porcelain candelabra presented by the members of the Household of the Prince. The textile fabrics include the Indian shawls and pieces of satin and velvet for dresses, given by the Queen and the Prince, and the exquisite fairy-looking webs of lace from Belgium, Norwich, and Ireland. The city of Norwich sends crape shawls, opera cloaks, and dresses. The three shawls from Norwich are hung close by the gold-woven tissues of Delhi which the Queen has given, and do not suffer by comparison. The laces given by the King of the Belgians are wonderful triumphs of this species of art manufacture, though not superior of their kind to the laces that have been sent from Ireland. A Paisley shawl woven of Cashmere wool and silk, the gift of the Queen, is another illustration of the strides with which this branch of native industry is outstripping all competition. The Committee of the British and Foreign Bible Society give a very magnificent Bible; a very pretty Bible and Prayer-book are given by the children of Windsor, and a Bible is given by the children of Whippingham School. Lord Hinchinbroke, the travelling companion of the Prince during his American progress, gives the Prince a cigar box of Algerian onyx, richly mounted. In the centre of the cases devoted to fabrics are the portraits of the Crown Prince and Princess of Prussia, presented by themselves. The rules for admission next week will be in accordance with the usual regulations of the Museum—namely, free on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Saturdays, and by payment of 6*d.* on Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays.

The Cabinet.—A Cabinet Council was held on Wednesday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street.

Parliamentary Movements.—Mr. Hans Hamilton, member for the county of Dublin, has retired from ill-health. In compliance with a requisition from the Conservative Society, Mr. Ion T. Hamilton, son of the late member, has offered himself as his successor, and at present he is the only candidate in the field.

The Army.—The Colonelcy of the 35th Foot, vacant by the death of General Sir G. L. Goldie, has been conferred on Major-General Baynes.

The Navy.—Rear-Admiral H. R. Yelverton, C.B., has been appointed second in command on the Mediterranean station.

Order of the Bath.—The Queen has given orders for the appointment of Major John Clayton Cowell, R.E., the Governor of Prince Alfred, to be a Companion of the Bath.

Foreign.

France.—Lord Cowley has remitted to the Emperor a letter from Queen Victoria, thanking his Imperial Majesty for the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honour sent to the Prince of Wales. It is asserted that the Prince and Princess of Wales will visit the Emperor at the Palace of Fontainebleau towards the middle of May. An Imperial decree has been published proroguing the Corps Législatif to the 30th of April. The Moniteur of Monday in its bulletin, says:—

"The Austrian Government having displayed views upon the Polish question in conformity with those of the Western Powers, an understanding has been established between the three Courts for acting in concert towards the Cabinet of St. Petersburg."

The despatches from the three Governments were to have been remitted to the Cabinet of St. Petersburg on Wednesday. No reply is expected for about ten days. The Emperor of Russia's amnesty is the subject of warm discussion in the Paris papers. The Constitutionnel of Thursday, in an article signed by M. Limayrac, asks what will be the consequences of the amnesty, and says:—

"Blood continues to flow in Poland. Europe has not ceased to be uneasy. Will those who were the victims of the conscription be amnestied? The amnesty testifies to the noble sentiments of the Emperor Alexander. We are willing to believe it to be the first step in the path amicably advised by the Great Powers—namely, the pursuance of a policy which would insure the tranquillity of the interior of Russia and the repose of Europe. The amnesty is not a solution, but the hope of a solution."

The other papers are unanimous in condemning the amnesty, and the language of many of them is so violent as to lead to the apprehension of war. The Presse accuses the Emperor Alexander of wishing to deceive Europe, and of having no real intention of carrying out the amnesty. The Patrie says that the diplomatic action of the Powers is engaged, and will be carried out, without being arrested by the feeble obstacle which this ill-disguised ruse seeks to throw in its way. The Siècle and the Temps do not think that the manifesto will satisfy either Poland or the Powers. The Opinion Nationale says that France will never allow herself to be misled respecting the value of the amnesty, which it considers nothing but a delusive mystification—a mere diplomatic manœuvre, by which Russia wishes to place herself in a position to reply to the note of the three Powers, by saying that what they ask is already done, adding that neither Poland nor Europe will allow themselves to be duped by such a comedy. The Débats, without employing such harsh language, says that the development of the institutions which the Czar promised to maintain, has produced during two years the arbitrary recruitment, the most odious act ever imagined by any Government, while the imperial manifesto is completely silent as to political rights. La France and the Nation find in the manifesto the commencement of the satisfaction accorded to the wishes of the Powers. The International Commission appointed to fix a mutual tariff on sugars passing between England, France, Belgium, and Holland, held a meeting on the 9th inst. They arrived at a decision on several points, and then adjourned in order to give time to the Belgian representative to demand further instructions from Brussels. It is asserted that Prince Napoleon and the Princess Clotilde will embark on Monday next for Egypt. The splendid Pompeian mansion, constructed by Prince Napoleon, at an immense expense, in the Champs Elysées, is to be offered for sale by auction on the 9th of June next. The upset price is fixed at 36,000*l.* The Duke of Beaufort arrived in France a few weeks since with his splendid pack of foxhounds, for the purpose of hunting the wolf, which commits great ravages in the agricultural districts of France. On the 7th inst. his Grace took the field with his whole pack in Poitou; but the expectations of the numerous sportsmen who had assembled were disappointed at the result. The Badminton hounds not being accustomed to the scent of the wolf, refused to follow. A second hunt took place on Friday in the forest of Verrière. An unusually large wolf having been found, the Duke's dogs again refused to follow it. Thereupon 16 dogs of Poitou, belonging to MM. de la Besge and Maichin, were set on the scent, and killed the animal after a magnificent run of two hours. It is said that in order to obtain any success it will be necessary to train the Badminton dogs for a short time, by setting them on the scent of a tame wolf belonging to a gentleman in that part of the country.

Spain.—In the sitting of Friday the Minister of Finance requested authority to collect the taxes until the 1st of July next, and declared that if it were not granted the Government would withdraw the Bills for reforms in the Customs' Tariff presented by the late Government. In the sitting of Tuesday Senor Vahamonde, in reply to a question by Senor Gonzales Bravo, declared that the moderate section of the Liberal union and the Progressista party being at variance, they would not be able to form a Ministry. The present Ministry will not continue the policy of the former Cabinet, but will act in accordance with a policy of its own. It is asserted that M. Odilon Barrot, the French Ambassador, who has arrived at Madrid, is the bearer of a request to the Government to grant an amnesty to the persons convicted of having attempted to make converts to Protestantism. One hundred and twenty-eight members of the Chamber of Deputies held a meeting the night of the 9th inst. to discuss their future conduct. They resolved to remain faithful to their former political organisation, called the Liberal Union.

Denmark.—The Danmark of Thursday says that on the 14th inst. the question of Prince William's candidature was the subject of an animated debate in the Privy Council. It is asserted that Prince Christian abandoned some of the conditions he formerly required for his son's acceptance of the Crown, but still positively insisted upon the abdication of the ex-King Otho. The Fadrelandet of Thursday states that the difficulties which have hitherto opposed the acceptance of the Greek crown by Prince William were removed in the last sitting of the Privy Council.

Frankfort.—In the sitting of the Federal Diet on Thursday, the communication of the Danish Government relative to the Royal Ordinance of the 30th ult. was referred to the United Committees. The President put in a protest against the assertion of Denmark that the Federal Government had no right to interfere in the question of the Duchies. The Diet gave its assent to this protest. The representative of Hanover stated that he reserved a special motion against any arbitrary proceeding on the part of Denmark.

Prussia.—The Minister of War at Berlin has just issued a rescript concerning the Polish insurgents who have taken refuge on the Prussian side of the frontier. The refugees are to be treated according to the "cartel" concluded between the Cabinets of Berlin and St. Petersburg in 1857, in other words are to be sent back into Poland, and when that course is not practicable they are to be arrested and imprisoned in a fortress. The Minister indicates the fortresses at Neissen, Posen, Cosel, Grandeus, Castrin, Pillau, Weichselmund, Schmeidnitz, and Dantzic, as able to accommodate 3000 prisoners. Those belonging to the educated classes are to be sent to Posen, and to enjoy the privilege of a room instead of being thrust into a common gaol. They are all to be handed over to the Russian Government if it be proved that they have committed any offence, political or otherwise, against Russia. The "Progress" party held a meeting at Berlin on Friday, in which, on the proposition of Herr Twesten, it was resolved that, in a future sitting of the Chamber of Deputies, the Government should be asked whether it considers the recent acts of Denmark as a fulfilment of the engagements entered into by that country after the negotiations of 1850 and 1852, and also whether the Government still considers itself bound by the said negotiations, seeing that Denmark had evidently violated its engagements.

Austria.—The Allgemeine Zeitung of Friday publishes a letter from Vienna announcing that an understanding has been brought about between Austria, France, and England in reference to the notes to be sent by those Powers to St. Petersburg. The Austrian note will be immediately despatched. This note does not formally express any distinct request, but contains a hope that the Czar will restore tranquillity, not only to Congress-Poland, but to the whole of the Polish provinces. The Augsburger Zeitung adds that the Western Powers have made use of more energetic language, but that their notes do not contain any formal programme. It is semi-officially announced that Austria has energetically protested to the Danish Government against the Royal ordinances of the 30th of March relative to Schleswig and Holstein. The Reichsrath will assemble in the middle of next month. The Transylvanian Diet will meet shortly afterwards. Langiewicz has declared to the authorities that he can no longer be bound by his parole. It is expected that he will, therefore, be placed under a stricter guard.

Russia.—In reply to the recent address of the nobility the Emperor said:—

"As one of your own body, I fully participate in the sentiments you have expressed. I am persuaded that your feelings are common to the whole Russian nobility, and that you will transmit them to your children. I understand the love of our native country by which you are inspired. This patriotism has constituted the strength of Russia for centuries, and will remain the guardian of her power from one generation to another."

The Journal de St. Petersbourg of Tuesday publishes an address presented on Easter Day to the Emperor by the Municipality of St. Petersburg. Like the address of the nobility, the document expresses the devotion of the Municipality to the Czar, and its desire to promote by every means in its power, the integrity of the Empire.

Poland.—On Sunday, being the Russian Easter Sunday, an Imperial manifesto was published, granting a full and entire amnesty to all Poles in the kingdom who shall lay down their arms and return to their allegiance by the 13th of May. The same term for laying down their arms and giving in their submission is also fixed for the insurgents in the western Polish provinces. The only exceptions are with regard to ordinary crimes and to such offences as have been committed by the army. The manifesto further announces that the institutions granted to the Polish people shall be maintained, and, after practical experience, shall be developed according to the necessities of the age and the country. The proposed amnesty has produced a bad effect among the insurgents, and has been universally rejected, on the ground that it leaves Poland in the same position as before the insurrection. A manifesto of the Central Revolutionary Committee of Warsaw has been published, rejecting the amnesty, and declaring that the insurgents will not lay down their arms until they have obtained the independence of Poland. The manifesto also forbids the inhabitants to pay taxes to the Russian Government, and orders the Poles in the Russian army to come over to the insurgent ranks. The Revolutionary Committee has divided Poland into 23 districts, each of which is to furnish 400 men and to pay taxes; Lodz is to supply 25,000 and Czenstochow 10,000 roubles. Branches of the Central Committee are to be established in each district for the purpose of collecting taxes and raising recruits, and for the administration of the penal law. The Jewish community in Kalisch have been compelled, by a secret summons of the revolutionary party, to pay 5000 roubles to the National Committee. Those who refused to comply were notified that they would be declared outlaws. The Czas, in an extraordinary edition issued on Monday evening, publishes despatches stating that notes were despatched to the Powers from St. Petersburg simultaneously with the issue of the amnesty. It says:—

"This step of Russia was taken with the object of preventing intervention. The manifesto does not promise to change the state of things which brought about the revolution. It only returns to the position existing before the 22d of January, neither more nor less—the position which drove the Poles to arms. How will the country and the Powers accept the manifesto? It is not for us to reply, but it is doubtful whether the Powers will be content. The insurrection will reply in the name of the whole country. By fixing the term of the 1st of May for laying down arms, the amnesty, in fact, recognises the insurrection, imposes upon the Powers the obligation of recognising it as a belligerent party, and may raise hopes of an armistice."

The Breslauer Zeitung publishes a telegram from Cracow, stating that intelligence had been received there from Warsaw that the amnesty was not to be extended to political prisoners. A serious engagement has taken place near Suwalki, in which 3000 insurgents participated. The Russians lost 200 killed and seven guns. At Konin the insurgents have gained a victory over the Russians. At Straszow an engagement has taken place between the Russians and a detachment of Poles under Major Polacki. Three fresh bodies of insurgents have been organised in the government of Plock, under the command of Podlenzki; and Major Lapazki has escaped from the Russian pursuit, and now occupies a strong position with his force. Another large detachment of insurgents under Andusziewicz has appeared in the district of Marianopol. The rising in Lithuania, Augustowo and Podlachia continues to extend. The committee of the revolutionary Government in Wilna has issued a manifesto stating the abuses of the Government, calling upon the inhabitants to rise in insurrection, and declaring that Lithuania and Little Russia are inseparable portions of Poland. In consequence of this manifesto the peasantry and the younger portions of the nobility have taken up arms against the Government. The Governor of Grodno has reported to the Russian Government that 4000 peasants in his district have expressed their intention to return to the United Greek Church. It is now stated that neither the Grand Duke Constantine nor the Marquis Wielopolski will leave Warsaw. On the representation of the Grand Duke Constantine, the Czar has accepted the resignation tendered by Archbishop Felinski as a member of the Council of State in the kingdom of Poland. On Saturday the Grand Duke summoned to his presence M. Walisgorski, late member of the Council of State, and after severely blaming the general conduct of the Polish nobility, concluded with these words:—

"The Poles trust in the aid of the West, and reckon upon a Congress; let them not deceive themselves, the West will not help them. The more sensible among the citizens should endeavour to suppress the insurrection, and lend their hands to the pacification of the country; my benevolent brother would give them much more than any Congress could give them."

The superiors of the Carmelite and the Reformed Convents at Cracow have been placed in confinement. The reasons for these arrests, as well as for those of Herr Bentkowski and of M. Chrzanowski, one of the writers for the Czas, who are still in custody, have not transpired. Another small party of seven Cossacks passed the Austrian frontier on Thursday. They were stopped and disarmed, but allowed to return to their quarters upon proof of their having crossed the frontier through inadvertence. A subsequent attempt on the part of some Cossacks to violate the Austrian frontier was frustrated by Austrian Hussars. Several of the Cossacks were taken prisoners. A great number of horses and waggons, laden with arms, ammunition, and provisions, destined for the Polish insurgents, have been confiscated in the Prussian district of Pleschen; and 40 persons who intended to proceed to Poland, have been prevented from so doing by the authorities. 200 Poles from Ostrowo have crossed over the frontier into Poland.

Italy.—The Minister of Justice on Saturday issued a circular, calling upon the public prosecutors to keep a vigilant watch upon the subversive tendencies of the Federalist and Radical press, and stating that every attack upon the principles of constitutional and united monarchy should be energetically repressed. The Italian Ministry had previously informed the Swiss Government of the preparations that were making by the Party of Action, with a view of warding off from the Federal Government the unpleasant complications which might have ensued in the event of armed bodies from Swiss territory invading the neighbouring country. The report that the Italian Government had warned Austria against the attempts which had been set on foot against the Italian portion of the Tyrol, is contradicted.

Greece.—Advices from Athens to the 5th announce that the French Ambassador in that city has communicated to the Government the adhesion of France to Prince William's election. The deputation commissioned to offer the crown of Greece to Prince William of Denmark has left Athens for Copenhagen. The National Assembly have appointed a new Ministry, composed as follows:—President, M. Koriaku; Foreign Affairs, M. Delyani; War, M. Botzaris; Marine, M. Buduris; Justice, M. Paleologos; Finance, M. Kumundurus; Interior, M. Petmetzas; Public Instruction, M. Kalophronos. The National Assembly has also voted an address of thanks to England for the proposed annexation of the Ionian Islands to Greece.

Egypt.—Since his arrival in Cairo, the Sultan, accompanied by the Viceroy Ismail Pasha, has offered up his prayers at the Sepulchre of Mehemet Ali, and has visited the tomb of Said Pasha, the Pyramids, and the environs of Cairo, and made an excursion some little distance up the Nile. His Majesty has also given magnificent presents to the Princesses, and has conferred the rank of High Officer of one of the Turkish orders upon the chiefs of the Jewish, Greek, Armenian, Coptic, and Catholic persuasions, observing in a letter written on the occasion that he made no distinctions on the score of religious belief. It is asserted that the Sultan still regards himself as the guest of the Viceroy, and has abstained from any act tending to display authority. His Majesty was expected to leave Cairo yesterday, on his return to Constantinople. The French Consul was not present at the reception of the Foreign Consuls by the Sultan in Alexandria, and was also absent at an audience given by His Majesty to the Consular Agents in Cairo. It is asserted in explanation that the French Consul has expressed his opinion that the Sultan's visit to Egypt constituted a danger for Europe.

China.—From Hong Kong we have the particulars of the attack made by the combined force of Ward and the Imperial troops on the city of Tai-tsan and its disastrous defeat. The loss consists of about 500 killed, wounded, and missing. Twenty Europeans were killed or wounded, Captains Maunder, Macarthy, Macleod, and Bosworth were killed, and twelve other officers, besides four marines, wounded. Among the former are Captains Graham, Murray, Tapp, Silverton, and Dunn. The latter is shot through the groin, and it is feared will not recover. The retreat, it appears, was orderly, and only a portion of the mandarins' troops fell into confusion. Captain Holland, who commanded the Ward force, has been replaced by Captain Gordon, R.E. A subsequent despatch from Shanghai, dated the 9th ult., states that the Imperialists have been again defeated at Shaoushing (?) for want of besieging materials. General Tardiff and Lieutenant Tinling were killed. Shanghai was quiet.

Japan.—The destruction of the new legation building at Yeddo is confirmed. It was fired and demolished with bags of gunpowder. The hostility of the Japanese is described as being on the increase. Admiral Kuper has proceeded with the English fleet to Japan, where the outbreak of military hostilities is reported.

United States.—Letters from New Orleans of the 15th ult. bring more intelligible accounts of the state of affairs at Port Hudson than have been received by telegraph from Cairo and Cincinnati. They confirm in the main particulars the Confederate report of the withdrawal of General Banks and the repulse of Admiral Farragut. Two vessels, the Hartford and the Albatross, alone succeeded in passing the batteries. The Lancaster had her bow entirely shot away, causing her to sink immediately. The Switzerland, having received a shot which disabled her machinery, drifted rapidly down the current, and was towed by the Albatross out of range of the Confederate guns. The Mississippi, as previously reported, was burnt. All the others were more or less injured, and returned to Bâton Rouge. General Banks withdrew his troops immediately on learning that Admiral Farragut had got beyond the reach of the Confederate guns, and is now at New Orleans. Fears are entertained for the safety of the Hartford and Albatross, as the Confederates now have three rams between Vicksburg and Port Hudson. The reports from Vicksburg and the Yazoo from Federal and Confederate sources are still too greatly at variance with each other to receive much credit. The Confederates claim to have sunk one and riddled another of four gunboats that attempted to run the blockade at Vicksburg on the 25th, and to have defeated and driven back the Sunflower River and Deer Creek expedition. The Federals, who at first asserted that they had really forced the passage of the Sunflower River and landed two divisions of troops, under the command of General Sherman, near Haines Bluff, now admit that General Sherman's expedition has returned, and is disembarking at Young's Point. The expedition is said at one time to have been hemmed in by the river obstructions placed in the front and rear of the transports, and to have been extricated with difficulty. The canal opposite Vicksburg is abandoned, the Confederate cannon commanding two-thirds of its length. It is said that General Grant has now placed a battery of 84-pounders beyond the levee in a position to reach Vicksburg easily, and is about to open the bombardment. The Federal soldiers in the occupation of Pensacola burned the town when ordered to evacuate it by Colonel Dyer, their commanding officer. Both the men and officers are represented to be in a state of great demoralization. Colonel Dyer in vain attempted to stop the work of destruction. General Rosencranz is still at Murfreesborough, maintaining a defensive position against General Bragg, who has concentrated a force of 60,000 men at Tullahoma. A great battle was believed to be imminent at or near Murfreesborough, Tullahoma, or Chattanooga, at which place the Confederates are building immense fortifications, and already have between 50 and 60 siege guns in position. Considerable anxiety is felt for the safety of General Rosencranz. On the 26th ult. the Confederate General Forrest attacked the Federals at Brentwood, five miles from Nashville, in the rear of General Rosencranz, and captured 800 prisoners, with a large quantity of military stores. They also destroyed the railroad track and bridge. The Confederates under Van Dorn are crossing the river at Palmyra, and are endeavouring to flank General Rosencranz on the left. Van Dorn has a heavy supply of artillery, and his movement is supposed to be aimed against Kentucky. General Price is reorganising the Confederate forces in Arkansas preparatory to the invasion of Missouri. General Joe Johnston has his head quarters at Atlanta, Georgia. Official depatches from Generals Burnside and Gilbert report that the latter defeated the Confederates under General Pegram, at Somerset, Kentucky, on the 30th ult., and forced them to retire across the Cumberland, leaving behind them a large number of the cattle they had seized. The Confederate loss is named at 50 killed and 400 prisoners, and that of the Federals at 30 in killed, wounded, and missing. General Gilbert states that by this victory he has driven the Confederates entirely out of Central Kentucky. Frankfort and Lexington have been placed under martial law by the Federals, who report that they have recaptured Danville. According to despatches from Fortress Monroe, the Confederates attacked Williamsburg, Virginia, and Wingfield, North Carolina, on the 29th, and were repulsed in both assaults. General Saxton, in his official report of the recent negro expedition to Jacksonville, Florida, under Colonels Higginson and Montgomery, for the purpose of arming and inciting the slaves to revolt, states his belief that no incident of the war has caused a greater panic throughout the whole Southern coast. He adds that the negroes are collecting at Jacksonville from all quarters. The captain of the steamer Peterhoff is said to have laid the facts of her capture before Lord Lyons, who, it is reported, will make a formal demand upon the Government for the release of the vessel and indemnity to the owners. Private letters from Port Royal of the 22d ult. state that no movement against Charleston was likely to take place for several weeks, and that the land force was totally inadequate for the purpose. President Lincoln, in compliance with the request of the Senate, has designated Thursday, the 30th of April, as a day of national humiliation, fasting, and prayer. The New York Times says that the majority of the Cabinet oppose the issue of letters of marque, and it is reported that the Government will not at present take any action under the Act. General Butler had attended a meeting at New York, at which his denunciations of England, and the predictions of retribution for the wrongs she has committed, were received and echoed with the utmost enthusiasm. He advocated the extermination of the Southern "rebels," the confiscation of the estates of the planters, and their partition among the soldiers of the Union. He said that at the time of the Trent affair it was perhaps wise not to provoke England, but he thanked God that the country was now getting into a condition to remember that case. He advised retaliation for the depredations of the Alabama and the Florida, and recommended that non-intercourse with England be proclaimed, so that not an ounce of food from America should get into an Englishman's mouth until those piracies were stopped. He also advocated the prohibition of the export of gold into England. President Davis is reported to be suffering from an abscess in the eye, by which it is feared he will lose his sight. The schooner Laura Ann, which arrived at Bermuda on the 24th ult., was boarded on the 21st by the Florida, and received on board the crew of the ship Star of Peace, 980 tons, which vessel the Florida had recently captured and destroyed. She was on her way to Boston from Calcutta, laden with saltpetre, hides, and wool.

Mexico.—The Mexicans at Puebla numbered 18,000 men, under Ortega; 4000 more, under Comonfort and Carvajal, were between Puebla and the capital. At the capital Juarez had no force of importance, and on the fall of Puebla would take refuge in the State of Morella. General Forey, with 12,000 men, was advancing by way of Orizaba, and General Bazaine, with 11,000 men, by way of Jalapa. They would meet at Amozoc.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Tuesday.—The House re-assembled after the Easter recess. The Post Office Savings' Banks Bill was read a third time and passed. The Mutiny Bill and the Marine Mutiny Bill passed through committee. On the order of the day for naming the select committee on the Augmentation of Benefices Bill, Lord St. Leonards expressed a doubt whether it was within the power of the Lord Chancellor to divest himself of the patronage of those livings without the sanction of the Crown. His own impression was that the livings were vested in the Crown, and that the Lord Chancellor was simply a trustee, whose patronage was placed upon the same footing as that of the Prime Minister. He approved of the principle of the Bill, but on examining the details he was of opinion that it would be necessary to exercise great care and caution before adopting the scheme.—The Earl of Derby said that, since the Bill had been read a second time, he had carefully gone through its provisions, and the more he considered them, the more apprehensive he was that the Lord Chancellor had taken too sanguine a view of their operation. The Bill proposed to obtain aid in the augmentation of some livings from the common fund at the disposal of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Now, the Commissioners were at present endeavouring to raise the value of all livings the population of which was equal to 10,000 to 300*l.* per annum. If, therefore, any portion of the funds at their disposal were withdrawn, it would be impossible for them to carry out that object. He found, on examining the schedule of the Bill, that out of 320 livings proposed to be dealt with there were 314 which had only an average population of 376. Of the 314, 130 had only an average population of 200, while in seven cases the population was under 50. There was not therefore so much necessity for augmenting these as the more populous livings which the Ecclesiastical Commissioners were dealing with. The whole project appeared to him to be surrounded with difficulty; and his own opinion was that greater advantages would ensue if, instead of divesting himself of the patronage of the livings which were of the least value, the Lord Chancellor would bring into the market the more valuable portions of his patronage and apply the produce to the augmentation of small livings.—The LORD CHANCELLOR assured the House that his only object was to secure a useful measure. He agreed that there ought not to be any interference with the action of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; but he only proposed to call in their aid in cases which, even without the present Bill, would naturally attract their attention. With regard to the suggestion of the Earl of Derby, he would be glad to accept it if it were possible, but it was not. The select committee was then appointed.

THURSDAY.—Greece and the Ionian Islands.—The Earl of MALMESBURY inquired what was the present state of the negociations with respect to the Crown of Greece and the cession of the island and fortress of Corfu to that country; censuring the Government for keeping the Greeks so long in a state of uncertainty.—Earl RUSSELL declined to answer the inquiries whilst the matters were still under negociation. The Greeks had positively declined to be governed by King Otho, and had determined on establishing a constitutional monarchy. The nomination of Prince William of Denmark was conditional on the assent of the King of Denmark and Prince Christian. With reference to Corfu, it should be remembered that England was only one of the protecting Powers, and that she had a perfect right to propose its cession to Greece if she thought proper. If the Ionians assented to the cession the other protecting Powers would be asked to give their assent to the arrangement.—The Earl of DERBY thought the Government had from first to last played fast and loose with the Greeks, and had acted prematurely in proposing the cession of the Ionian Islands. He thought that this country should at least retain the great fortress and harbour of Corfu.—Earl GRANVILLE vindicated the policy of Lord Russell, and showed that the retention of so strong a fortress as Corfu, after foregoing the protectorate of the other islands, would be strongly opposed by the parties to the treaty of 1815.—On the motion of Earl GRANVILLE, a select committee was appointed to inquire which of the various Bills before Parliament for the construction of Lines of Railway within the Limits of the Metropolis can be proceeded with in the present Session without the risk of interfering with the future adoption of a comprehensive plan of metropolitan railway communication.

FRIDAY.—Greece.—In answer to the Earl of MALMESBURY, Earl GRANVILLE said that the King of Denmark, on being consulted by Earl RUSSELL respecting the nomination of Prince William to the throne of Greece, had replied that he had no objection to the arrangement if Prince Christian and his son agreed to it. [Left sitting.]

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.—The House reassembled after the Easter recess. On the order for going into a Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, Mr. SMITH said that the House had not had a fair opportunity of examining the Estimates, Class I., and moved that they be referred to a Select Committee. After a short discussion, Sir G. GREY proposed that Class I. should be postponed, and that the Committee should commence with Class III. Mr. SMITH thereupon withdrew his amendment, and the House went into Committee, when certain votes were agreed to, and the resolutions ordered to be reported. The Local Government Act (1858) Amendment Bill passed through Committee. On the report upon the Telegraphs Bill, certain amendments were made in the Bill, and new clauses added. The Lords' amendments on the Salmon Exportation Bill were considered and agreed to. The report upon the Savings Banks Acts was brought up and agreed to, and leave was given to bring in a Bill.—Sir H. WILLOUGHBY obtained leave to bring in a Bill to consolidate and amend the laws relating to Savings Banks.

TUESDAY.—The Seizure of the Alexandra.—In reply to Lord R. MONTAGU, Mr. LAYARD said that the case of the Alexandra, the alleged Confederate ship-of-war, seized by the Government at Liverpool, was still under consideration, and that, in consequence, he was unable to lay the papers upon the table of the House.—In answer to a question from Lord H. LENNOX with reference to the recent election of Prince William of Denmark to the Throne of Greece, Mr. LAYARD said that it would not be for the benefit of the public service to make any communication to Parliament on the subject at the present moment.—Lord H. LENNOX gave notice that he would repeat the question next day, in the hope of getting a more satisfactory answer.—Mr. LAYARD replied that if he did the noble lord would not succeed in his object. Death of Sir G. C. Lewis.—Mr. BUXTON having risen to move in committee of the whole House that leave be given to bring in a Bill to amend the Acts of Uniformity, Mr. WALPOLE rose and said that he regretted to interpose between his hon. friend and the House, but at the same time he could not help feeling that the sudden gloom which had descended upon them all by the unexpected and lamented death of Sir George Lewis suggested that they would best exhibit their sympathy for the loss of that distinguished statesman by not proceeding further with the business of the evening. He believed that such was the general feeling, and he would therefore conclude by moving that, in order to show their respect for the memory of so beloved a member, the House should now adjourn.—Lord PALMERSTON, who was much affected, said that the feeling which had prompted the motion, was but a just tribute to the memory of the colleague whom they had lost, and he begged to second the motion.—Mr. DISRAELI said he was not aware until within the last few moments of the calamity which had fallen upon the country. The Queen had lost one of the best of her servants, and the House of Commons a member who possessed universal regard and respect. He was sure that the rising statesmen at both sides of the House might take Sir G. C. Lewis as an example which in many particulars might be remembered and followed with advantage; and he was quite confident that his name would never be mentioned in that House without feelings of deep respect and unfeigned regret for an untimely loss which the country could ill bear. The motion was unanimously agreed to, and the House at once adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.—Lancashire Distress.—Sir G. GREY stated in reply to Mr. FERRAND that the Government would give up Monday, the 27th inst., for the discussion of the distress in the cotton manufacturing districts.—Sir M. PETO moved the second reading of the Burials Bill. He said that the provisions were framed in accordance with the suggestions made by the select committee of last session, and that the measure was not intended in any way as an aggression upon the Established Church. Some of the Dissenting bodies felt that they were aggrieved in consequence of their ministers not being allowed to perform the burial service over their dead, and the object of the present Bill was to remedy the evils of which they complained.—Sir C. DOUGLAS seconded the motion.—Lord R. CECIL moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. He assured the House that he was as anxious to promote peace and union as any one could be, but his conscientious belief was that this measure, so far from having that effect, would revive religious animosity to a fearful extent. The Baptists were the only Dissenting body that really felt themselves aggrieved by the present state of the law. The rubric of the Church of England made but two exclusions, namely, unbaptised persons and those who might have committed suicide. As, however, the Baptists did not confer the rite of baptism except upon adults, it followed that when their children died they were considered to come within the rubric, though the clergy seldom asked any question on the subject. The Dissenters had, however, an easy remedy for any alleged grievance, for there were now cemeteries all over the country to which they could have access.—Mr. WARD HUNT seconded the amendment, Lord HENLEY supported the Bill, Mr. NEWDEGATE, Sir J. TRELAWNY, Mr HARDY, and Mr. HUNT opposed it.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that he was a member of the select committee to which the Bill had been referred, and that they had gone carefully through its provisions, and had made various suggestions, the chief of which were embodied in the Bill. It did not follow that the House was bound to adopt the decision to which the select committee had arrived, but he thought it ought to consent to the second reading, and leave details for the consideration of a committee of the whole House. He admitted that there were objectionable features in the measure, but he had no doubt that a satisfactory solution of all difficulties might be arrived at in committee.—Sir G. GREY said he should vote for the second reading of the Bill, but could not give his consent to the details involved in the second and third clauses.—Mr. DISRAELI regarded the measure as one of many projects directed against the Church of England. He commented with some severity upon the course which the Chancellor of the Exchequer had adopted in reference to this matter, which he said reminded him of a recent statement made by the right hon. gentleman, that the principal enemies of the Church of England were to be found within her own fold. He believed that the House by rejecting the measure would not only uphold the legal privileges of the Church, but would show that it was acting in harmony with the strong convictions of the people of England. On a division, the amendment was carried by 221 to 96; the Bill was therefore lost. The Gardens in Towns Protection Bill, and the Oaths Relief in Criminal Proceedings in Scotland Bill, passed through committee. The Reports of the Committee of Supply were brought up and agreed to. The Lords amendments of the Births and Deaths Registration (Ireland) Bill, were considered and agreed to.—Mr. H. B. SHERIDAN obtained leave to bring in a Bill to facilitate the appointment of Stipendiary Magistrates in cities, towns, and boroughs of 20,000 inhabitants and upwards.

THURSDAY.—The alleged Spy system at Liverpool.—In reply to Lord R. CECIL, Sir G. GREY said there was no truth in the statement that spies had been appointed at Liverpool to attend upon persons who were supposed to be Confederate agents at that port, and to watch the private dockyards of the shipbuilders. A representation having been made to the Government by the American Minister that certain ships were fitting out at Liverpool contrary to the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, a communication had been made to the Mayor of Liverpool, who had employed officers of the detective police to make inquiries, in order to ascertain whether the complaints of the American Minister were well founded. The result of those inquiries had not yet reached the Government. The Budget.—The House having resolved itself into a Committee of Ways and Means, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in a very full House, made the financial statement of the year. Having referred to the financial pressure upon the resources of the country during the last two years, he said that the statement he had to make was not a mere detail of annual receipt and expenditure, but was the answer of the Government to a solemn, deliberate, and unanimous resolution of the House in favour of a reduction of expenditure. The financial statement of last year had been made with particular reserve, and the estimate of income and expenditure nearly balanced each other. But the account which he had now to submit was, in his opinion, as remarkable as it was hopeful. Two exceptional causes had operated during the past year to depress the revenue. The cotton famine had reached a degree of afflicting stringency, and he regretted to say there was no ground for indulging in any sanguine hope that things were mending, as the last quotation of the price of cotton was about 2s. per pound. The other exceptional cause of pressure was the condition of Ireland, in which country there had been a succession of three bad harvests. It was in this state of stagnation that the balance-sheet of the nation had been prepared. The state of Lancashire and the state of Ireland had of course deprived the revenue of a very large amount. The excise duties had produced one million less than was estimated; but this was to be traced exclusively to the depressed condition of the working classes. The expenditure of the last financial year was estimated at £70,108,000, and the actual expenditure £69,302,000, being less than the estimate by £806,000. Among the items of revenue which had exhibited an increase during the last year were—customs, 484,000*l.*; income and property tax, 467,000*l.*; and money from China, 42,000*l.* Against this, however, was to be set the excise deficiency in spirits and malt, amounting to 1,185,000*l.*, less about 150,000*l.* for the drawback on malt. The estimate of expenditure for the current year was 67,749,000*l.*, being less than that of 1862-63 by 1,553,000*l.* The estimate of revenue was 71,490,000*l.*, being a difference in favour of income over expenditure of 3,741,000*l.* With regard to alterations of duties, the House was already in possession of what had been done in reference to Tobacco. The Government now proposed to equalise the duty on chicory to that on coffee, with an allowance for waste; to impose the same license on clubs selling strong liquors as upon hotels and coffee-houses, and to raise the duty paid by beer-dealers who, having obtained a spirit license and a beer license, had dropped the spirit license and continued to sell beer at the reduced license. Their next propositions were to charge a guinea license to beer dealers selling less than two dozen bottles not to be consumed on the premises, and to make carriers travelling under four miles an hour and conveying passengers pay one half the duty now charged upon public carriages. They also proposed to abolish the exemptions in reference to excursion traffic on railways. At present excursion traffic was exempt, and thereby an inducement was held out to railway companies to develop one class of traffic at perhaps risk to life in preference to the ordinary legitimate passenger traffic. To check this, and to remove the exemption, the companies would in future have to pay a commuted tax of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. upon all their passenger traffic, instead of 5 per cent. as at present on the ordinary traffic only. This would give a slight balance in favour of the revenue. The next change which they proposed to make was to assimilate the law as to duties on charitable legacies in Ireland to that of England, and to remove the exemption granted under the Income tax Act to charities and corporations with respect to such portions of their income as were expended in charity, exempting as at present buildings belonging to hospitals, colleges, &c., and their sites, and also sums of money expended on the building and repair of churches. The estimate of revenue to be derived from the income-tax on charities and charitable corporations was 75,000*l.*; and from the other imposts which it was proposed to levy, 58,000*l.*—making a total of 133,000*l.*, which, if added to the surplus of 3,741,000*l.*, would raise that sum to 3,874,000*l.* With regard to the disposal of this surplus, they proposed, after the 1st of July next, to abolish the penny charges on goods entered inwards and outwards, and the 1s. 6*d.* stamp upon bills of lading. The income-tax was naturally the chief source from which the taxpayers of the country looked for relief. They proposed, therefore, to fix 200*l.* a year as the limit to which some deduction should attach to incomes liable to the tax—to continue the taxable income at 100*l.* a year, as at present; to have only one rate of tax, but, in order to ease the pressure of the tax upon small incomes, to allow an abatement of 60*l.* upon all incomes between 100*l.* a year and 200*l.* a year at the several stages of 100*l.*, 125*l.*, 150*l.* and 175*l.* This, he believed, would be hailed as a great boon by those numerous classes who now complained, and not unreasonably, of the severe pressure of the tax upon their modest incomes. Then, with reference to indirect taxation, there were the rival claims of tea and sugar, which perhaps for the first time in their history were now placed in hostile competition. They proposed to destroy the natural alliance between tea and sugar, and inasmuch as the duty on tea was equal to 100 per cent. on the value of the commodity, to reduce it from 1s. 5*d.* to 1s. per lb., but not to disturb the sugar duties. This reduction would take effect immediately after the resolution should be adopted by the House, so that on Saturday week next the public would be in a position to profit by the reduction. This relief to the consumer would entail a loss upon the revenue of 1,300,000*l.* A further measure of relief would be given to the direct taxpayer by the reduction which they proposed to make in the income and property tax of 2*d.* in the pound, thus reducing the duty from 9*d.* in the pound, as at present charged, to 7*d.* in the pound. The total present relief to be afforded would be as follows:—abolition of small charges on commerce, 143,000*l.*; abatement on minor incomes, 300,000*l.*; reduction of tea duty, 1,300,000*l.*; reduction of 2*d.* in the pound on general income tax, 1,600,000*l.*; making a total of 3,343,000*l.* In addition to this a further loss, equal to 898,000*l.*, would fall upon the financial year 1864-65. To this, however, it was not necessary further to refer, as it did not affect the financial position of the country in the current year. The amount with which the Government proposed to deal was 3,874,000*l.*, out of which there were remissions of taxation equivalent to 3,343,000*l.*, so that the surplus would be 531,000*l.* Looking to the state of the country, the scale of expenditure, and the condition of the political horizon abroad, the Government considered it to be their duty to retain that amount, and they appealed to the committee to aid them in that determination. Having referred to the success which had attended the commercial policy of the country as inaugurated by the late Sir Robert Peel, and to the satisfactory results of the commercial treaty with France, which had more than made up for the falling off in our trade with America, he expressed his hope that other countries would follow our example, and find in our policy an innocent but powerful provocative to similar tendencies on behalf of peace, progress, order, and civilisation. The right hon. gentleman, who spoke for three hours, resumed his seat amid loud and general cheers. After some discussion, in which satisfaction at the Budget was generally expressed, the resolution for equalising the duty on chicory was put and agreed to. The House having resumed, the ATTORNEY-GENERAL moved that it be referred to the General Committee on Elections to inquire into the circumstances under which a letter complaining of an undue return for the borough of Lisburn had been signed by the petitioners, and whether such letter constituted a withdrawal of the petition. The motion was agreed to.—Sir R. PEEL moved the second reading of the Assurances Registration (Ireland) Bill, but, after some discussion, in which the Irish members took several exceptions to the measure, the debate was adjourned. The Thames Embankment (South Side) Bill was read a second time, and referred to a select committee. The Bakehouse Regulation Bill was read a second time. The Office of Secretary at War Abolition Bill passed through committee.

FRIDAY.—Greece.—Mr. B. COCHRANE asked if the Government would lay on the table a copy of the telegram which authorised Mr. Elliott to announce to the Greeks that Prince William of Denmark would accept the crown of Greece.—Mr. LAYARD said there were obvious reasons why it would be most inconvenient to produce a copy of a telegram. On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Sir F. SMITH moved that so much of the report of the Commissioners on Harbours of Refuge as applies to Waterford, Wick, and Padstow be carried into effect. [Left sitting.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

Lancashire Relief Fund.—At a meeting of the Mansion House Committee, on Friday, the financial report stated that the subscriptions now received are at the rate of about 1500*l*. a week from home sources alone, while those from the colonies are much larger. The total amount of donations received, including 750*l*. interest on a reserve fund invested at call, up to Friday was 478,171*l*. odd, of which 377,396*l*. had been distributed through the local committees. The home subscriptions during the fortnight amounted to 2908*l*., and those from the colonies to 5156*l*. A deputation from the parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, had an interview with the committee, and presented a memorial in favour of applying some portion of the fund to the encouragement of emigration. Mr. Cubitt assured the deputation that their memorial would receive the serious consideration of the committee, and have due weight in determining the course they might think it right to pursue After the deputation had withdrawn, the Lord Mayor expressed himself strongly in favour of emigration, under proper safeguards, as a means of relief to the Lancashire people, and he dwelt upon the utter hopelessness of any attempt to maintain for any considerable length of time 500,000 people in a state of idleness by charity alone, and on the consequent demoralization of the recipients of the public bounty if such a thing were practicable. This expression of opinion met with very general concurrence among the committee, and it is now only a question whether they will vote some considerable sum to assist Lancashire people to emigrate from the fund at their disposal, or invite public subscriptions to a special fund for the purpose. The committee afterwards made grants to the amount of 5785*l*. to be distributed by the local relief bodies.

Sympathy with Poland.—On Tuesday evening a public meeting of the inhabitants of Marylebone was held at the Court house, for the purpose of expressing sympathy with Poland. Lord Fermoy, M.P., presided, and expressed his opinion that the day was not far distant when Poland would regain its nationality. Mr. Harvey Lewis, M.P., moved the first resolution, declaring the opinion of the meeting, that the provisions of the treaty of Vienna have been systematically and grossly violated by the Government of Russia, and that it is highly important for the interests of constitutional freedom that such measures should be promptly adopted by the British Government as are necessary in order to assist Poland in recovering her national existence. The Rev. Dr. Worthington seconded the resolution. Mr. Nicholay moved, and Mr. Israel Abrahams seconded, the appointment of a committee to draw up a petition to Parliament and a memorial to the Queen, praying for a remonstrance against Russian barbarities and for a recognition of Poland's nationality. Sir Robert Clifton, M.P., Mr. Cox, M.P., and other gentlemen also addressed the meeting, and strenuously urged the despatch of a fleet to the Baltic, the supply of arms, and the enlistment of volunteers for Poland. The speeches throughout were of a very warlike character and were loudly applauded.

The City Police.—At a meeting of the Court of Aldermen, on Thursday, the Lord Mayor submitted a communication he had received from Sir George Grey apprising him that it is the intention of the Government to introduce a Bill in the House of Commons, having for its object to place the whole of the metropolis, including the city, under one system of police. The discussion took place with closed doors, and the subject was eventually referred to the General Purposes Committee, to take any steps they may think proper in the matter. On the same day the Court of Common Council unanimously resolved to take no notice of Sir George Grey's recommendation that they should postpone the election of a chief commissioner of police, and determined to proceed with the election forthwith. For that purpose they fixed Thursday next as the last day on which they would receive applications for the office, and fixed the salary at 1000*l*. a year. Meanwhile the different wards of the City are taking active measures to resist the threatened amalgamation. Within the last few days wardmotes have been held in nearly every ward, at all of which resolutions were adopted pledging the wards to resist the attempt at amalgamation.

The Late Accidents at the Illuminations.—In the Court of Aldermen on Tuesday, the Lord Mayor stated that the sum of 125*l*. had been graciously forwarded to him by her Majesty and the Prince of Wales, for the relief of those who had suffered by the casualties on the night of the illuminations; and the knowledge of this fact had brought upon him a host of applications from persons who said they were injured on that occasion both in and out of the City. He wished, under these circumstances, that a committee would take the distribution of the money off his hands. The court, were, however, of opinion that his lordship would distribute it more satisfactorily himself, taking care that none but those who had sustained serious injuries should participate in it.

Waiting for the Budget.—On Thursday morning an extraordinary scene was presented in the approaches to the House of Commons, showing the deep interest taken in the financial statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Though the strangers' gallery is only capable of accommodating about 100 persons, many who had obtained orders were in attendance as early as half-past seven o'clock, bringing with them meat, bread, cheese, and beer, in order to sustain themselves during their weary stay. By 10 a.m. there were more persons in waiting than would fill the gallery, and those who arrived after that hour had, consequently, little or no chance of obtaining admission.

The St. Giles's Murder.—Although a reward of 100*l*. has been offered by the Government, and every step has been taken for the apprehension of the perpetrator of this murder, it still remains a mystery; though it was reported on Thursday that the police had received information which might enable them to trace him. From morning till night crowds of people are still to be seen in front of the house where the murder took place.

The Acton Murder.—Joseph Brooks, the man who was found guilty of the murder of the policeman at Acton, at the Central Criminal Court a few days ago, has confessed that he was concerned in the crime, though he wishes to make it appear that another hand than his fired the fatal shot. The motive ascribed to the prisoners at the trial is now admitted to be the true one. The unfortunate policeman detected the two brothers in the act of pilfering some old wood; and though they escaped from him at the time they knew that he would inform upon them, and determined to escape the consequences by assassinating him.

The Public Health.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in the week that ended Saturday, April 11, were 1610. In the corresponding weeks of the 10 years 1853—62, the average number, corrected for increase of population, was 1324. The present return is therefore 286 above the average. During the week the births of 1131 boys and 1049 girls, in all 2180 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1853—62 the average number was 1975.

Provincial.

Ewell.—An explosion of a powder-mill took place on Wednesday morning in this village. Three men were employed in the works at the time, and were blown to pieces in the explosion, the fragments of their bodies being picked up in the adjoining fields. The shock of the explosion was severely felt all round the neighbohrhood.

Hereford.—The execution of William Hope, a ticket-of-leave-man, who was found guilty at the last assizes of violatiing and murdering Mary Corbett, a servant girl, at Ullingswick, in this county, took place on Wednesday in front of the county gaol, in the presence of a large crowd of persons. The murderer, who confessed his crime, died easily.

Ipswich.—The execution of John Ducker, who was convicted of the murder of a policeman at the last Suffolk assizes, took place on Tuesday in front of the county gaol in this town, in the presence of about 4000 persons. Since his conviction he has listened attentively to what was said to him, but in a stolid, unimpressionable manner. He made no confession.

Leeds.—At the inquest on the woman who was murdered last week in this town by a man called Gair, who subsequently attempted to commit suicide, the jury have returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against the prisoner, who is likely to survive.

Liverpool.—On Saturday last a meeting convened by the mayor, in compliance with a requisition very numerously signed by the most influential merchants and bankers, was held in St. George's Hall to express the feelings of the town on the Polish question. Resolutions were unanimously adopted expressing sympathy with Poland in her present struggle for independence, with memorials to her Majesty and to both Houses of Parliament, praying them to take such steps as shall, in their wisdom, be most effective in promoting it.

Maidstone.—The execution of Robert Alexander Burton for the murder of the little boy on Chatham Lines, took place on Saturday in this town, in the presence of 5000 persons. He expressed great penitence for his crime, and died without a struggle.

Manchester.—At the weekly meeting of the Central Executive Committee on Monday, the hon. secretary reported that during the week ending the 11th inst., 15 packages of clothing and 560 barrels of flour had been sent for distribution to the various local committees. The total receipts for the week amounted to 4193*l*. 18*s*. 8*d*., and for the month of March to 40,896*l*. 19*s*. 3*d*. The balance at the banker's on the general account was 402,712*l*. 4*s*. 8*d*., and on the employment account, 9823*l*. 1*s*. 6*d*. Total, 412,535*l*. 6*s*. 2*d*. Mr. Commissioner Farnall reported that on the 5th inst. there was a decrease in the number of persons receiving parochial relief in the 27 unions in the cotton manufacturing districts, as compared with the number so relieved in the previous week, of 4491, making a total decrease of 66,602 since the 6th December. Several grants from the general fund, and from the employment and school funds, were voted.

Plymouth.—The screw steam-ship Alar arrived in this port on Saturday, and landed 17 men belonging to the large iron steam-ship that left Greenock on the 2d inst., under the name of the Japan, it was said on a voyage to the China Seas. It was rumoured at the time that her alleged voyage was only a blind, and that her real intention was to fly the Confederate flag. The Alar's news now confirms this rumour. The Japan is an iron-built ship laid down to very fine lines for speed, about 600 tons, with engines of from about 200 to 250 horse power. She has all the fitments for carrying heavy guns, shot, and shell, and left Greenock with more than 100 men shipped at very high wages, and in perfect cognisance of the real intention of their voyage. At the shipping master's office in Greenock they were shipped for two years for a voyage to Shanghae, Hong-Kong, and any intermediate ports. After they had proceeded to sea another set of articles were produced by the captain, in which it was stipulated that they should fly the Confederate flag, and assist in capturing and destroying all Federal vessels they might fall in with. Thirteen of the crew objected to sign the new articles, alleging that they expected higher wages. The captain stated that he had no wish to take any man with him against his will, and transferred these hands to the Alar. From Greenock the Japan proceeded to a creek on the coast of France, east of the Channel Islands. The Alar, which has been for several years a regular trader between Newhaven and St. Malo, left Newhaven with 100 tons of goods in cases for St. Malo. These goods consisted of 12 Whitworth guns, 10 40-pounders, and two 100-pounders, with a large quantity of powder, shot, and shell, and some provisions. She proceeded to the coast of France, and was there joined by the Japan and a French pilot. The two vessels ran in and anchored in the creek, where the transhipment of the goods between the two vessels took place during two nights. The Japan then left, and afterwards the Alar, the latter being watched off the coast by a French frigate. The Alar lay two days in the Channel before she made for this port. In addition to the 13 dissatisfied seamen, she also landed two of the Japan's stokers who were severely scalded by the bursting of one of her condensers. The Japan is now sailing under the name of the Virginia. The customs authorities at this port instituted an inquiry into the circumstances attending the Alar's voyage, but not deeming themselves justified in detaining her, she was allowed to proceed to the eastward. The men report that on board the Japan everything was done to make the crew comfortable. Provisions of a high class and every accommodation were freely supplied. The crew were all picked men, and in addition to being good seamen the majority of them were old hands at gun drill. The names of the officers were unknown.

Sheffield.—A meeting in aid of the subscription for the Poles was held in this town a few days since, at which Mr. Roebuck, M.P., who was present by invitation, briefly explained his views with respect to the position and prospects of Poland and the duty of England in the crisis. H expressed his sympathy with the Poles in their struggle against the despotism of Russia. He stated that the Austrian Government would be glad to see the kingdom of Poland reconstituted as a barrier between Austria and Russia, but that Russia and Prussia would never give up the shares they obtained by the scandalous partition without a war. He felt that England would do vastly more harm by creating a European war for Poland than it could possibly do good to the Poles, and therefore he was opposed to that course. Lord Palmerston had expressed strong opinions on the conduct of Russia towards Poland, and his intention to do all that could be done by diplomacy to benefit the Poles; and his advice was to leave the matter in the hands of the Government. He expressed a most decided opinion that the Poles would inevitably be crushed by Russia, and warned those who were encouraging the Poles in this country to go to Poland that they were sending them to a useless butchery.—A man named Tierney was murdered in this town last week. He bore a bad character and lived with a woman of the town who, like himself, was at large on a ticket-of-leave; and many robberies committed by them are reported to have taken place in the house they lived in. The woman had a quarrel with a man who visited her about money; and on deceased attempting to prevent his leaving the house, he stabbed him to the heart. It is now conjectured that an attempt had been made to rob the man, and that he stabbed deceased in self-defence. No trace of the murderer has been discovered.

Shrewsbury.—The execution of Edward Cooper for the murder of his son, a deformed boy, at Baschurch, took place on Saturday in this town, in the presence of not less than 10,000 persons. He made a full confession of his guilt, and died penitent. He struggled violently for several minutes before life was extinct.

Trial for Inciting to Murder.—An extraordinary case was tried on Monday before the Dublin Commission Court. A respectable-looking man, named Joseph Harcourt, was indicted for having endeavoured to incite two men living in Dublin, named Smith and Graham, to murder Mr. Dickinson, a gentleman residing at Ashgrove, near Newry, in whose family the prisoner had been employed as tutor. The persons whom the prisoner endeavoured to incite to commit the crime, deposed to the fact that he had offered them 10*l*. to shoot Mr. Dickinson on the plea that he illused his wife, for whom the prisoner professed an attachment, and alleged that she was privy to his design. Several witnesses were also examined, who testified to the good character of the prisoner. The jury, after 20 minutes' consideration, returned a verdict of Guilty. Baron Hughes, in sentencing the prisoner, commented on the enormity of the offence of which he had been convicted, and sentenced him to the full punishment allowed by law—10 years' penal servitude. One of the jurors said they were desirous of recommending the prisoner to mercy on account of his previous good character, but another juror stated that they were not unanimous in the recommendation. His Lordship said that even had the recommendation been unanimous he would not attend to it, as previous character was no ground for mercy in a case of the kind.

The Murder of Mr. Fitzgerald.—Denis Dillane, who was convicted at the last assizes of hiring Beckham and Walsh to murder his landlord, the late Mr. Francis Fitzgerald, was executed on Monday morning at Limerick. When he appeared upon the scaffold, accompanied by two Roman Catholic clergymen, he seemed very weak. He was a farmer of bulky frame, about 60 years of age. His aspect gave striking evidence of his having undergone extreme mental suffering. He, however, bore himself with firmness and resignation, having been very penitent ever since he lost all hope of a commutation of the sentence. About 2000 persons were present at the execution.

Suicide of the Rev. Dr. Mason.—The Rev. Samuel H. Mason, LL.D., who for many years held a situation in the office of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, was returning in the Ulster mail steamer from Holyhead on Wednesday morning, when he deliberately threw himself into the sea and was drowned, notwithstanding the most strenuous efforts to save him. He wrote a letter to the captain which leaves no room to doubt that he contemplated self-destruction.

Obituary.

The Countess Dowager of Verulam died on Thursday morning at her residence in Grosvenor Square, after a short illness. Her ladyship was born in 1783, and was only daughter of the first Earl of Liverpool by his second wife, daughter of Sir Cecil Bisshopp. Her ladyship married in 1807 the first Earl of Verulam, by whom she leaves the present Earl of Verulam, the Countess of Craven, the Countess of Clarendon, the Countess of Caledon, and the Viscountess Folkestone.

Lord De-Saumarez, son of the celebrated Admiral, died at Cheltenham on the 9th inst. in his 74th year. His lordship, who was in holy orders, and was rector of Huggate, in Yorkshire, was born in Guernsey in 1789. In 1814 he married the daughter of Vice-Admiral Lechmere, and succeeded his father in 1836. He was educated at Christ Church, Oxford, where he was second class in classics in 1810. He is succeeded by his brother, the Hon. John St. Vincent Saumarez.

The Right Hon. Sir George Cornewall Lewis, Bart., Minister at War, died almost suddenly on Monday last at his seat, Harpton Court, Radnorshire. He had retired to the country to take his brief Easter holidays. Soon after his arrival he caught a cold, which brought on congestion of the lungs; the attack became serious on Sunday, and he died at 2 o'clock on Monday afternoon. He was in his 58th year, having been born in October, 1806. He was the son of the late Sir Thomas Frankland Lewis, who, having filled several offices in the State, including those of Secretary to the Treasury, Vice-President of the Board of Trade, and Treasurer of the Navy, received in 1846 a baronetcy for his public services. His mother was the daughter of another baronet, Sir George Cornewall, after whom he was named. He was educated at Eton and Christ Church, Oxford, where he took his bachelor's degree in 1828, being first class in classics, and second in mathematics. It was as a scholar that he became first known to the public, his earliest literary production being a translation of Müller's work on the "History and Antiquities of the Dorian Race," which, in conjunction with his friend Mr. Tufnell, he brought out in 1830. He subsequently published an "Enquiry into the Credibility of Early Roman History," a treatise "On the Origin and Formation of the Romance Languages," and various volumes, "On the Influence of Authority in Matters of Opinion," "On the Use and Abuse of Political Terms," "On Local Disturbances and the Irish Church Question," "On the Government of Dependencies," "On the Method of Observation and Reasoning in Politics," "On the Astronomy of the Ancients," and a "Dialogue on the Best Form of Government." He was also for some time Editor of the "Edinburgh Review" and a large contributor to many of the periodicals which devote their pages to the criticism of ancient writers. Among these was a paper "On the Fables of Babrius" in an old number of the Classical Museum. Sir George Lewis did not enter Parliament till 1847, when he was 41 years of age; but he had already had some taste of official life. He was a member of the Middle Temple, and was called to the Bar in 1831, though he never practised, probably from a sense of his deficiency as a speaker, which he was long in overcoming. In 1835 he was employed in the Commissions which were appointed to inquire into the relief of the Poor and into the state of the Church in Ireland. In the next year he was on the Commission of Inquiry into the affairs of Malta. In 1839 he succeeded his father as a Poor Law Commissioner, and in 1847, the date of his entry into Parliament, he was made Secretary to the Board of Control. In the following year he went to the Home Office, where he held the post of Under Secretary, and in 1850 he became one of the Secretaries to the Treasury, where he remained till the dissolution of Lord John Russell's Cabinet, and where he acquired a great reputation for financial ability. He did not return to office until Lord Palmerston formed his first Administration in 1855, and in this interval of his official life he edited the "Edinburgh Review." He joined Lord Palmerston's Cabinet, in succession to Mr. Gladstone, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, and soon commanded the confidence of the City by the practical character of his financial measures. In Lord Palmerston's second Administration he was placed in the Home Office. On the death of Lord Herbert he was removed to the War Office, and succeeded in mastering its innumerable details. In all these spheres of labour Sir George Lewis showed such versatility and such indomitable perseverance, that the Cabinet could sustain no severer loss, save that of its chief. He was not a showy character, and especially he did not shine much in those debates from which the country at large learns to estimate the position of a Minister; but his wonderful power of mastering any subject, his clear head, his sound sense, and his practical ability were fully recognised, and spite of his slow and hesitating manner, his voice had such an authority in the House of Commons that no one commanded more attention when he chose to speak, and no man was more entirely trusted. He married in 1844 the Lady Theresa Lister, sister of the Earl of Clarendon. He has left no children, and is succeeded in the baronetcy by his only brother. The Rev. ### BRITISH WOOLS.—London, April 17.

There is more demand for many descriptions of wool, and at full rates, but as our supply is very limited, the amount of business is not large.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

Monday, April 13.

The number of Beasts is considerably larger than on Monday last, and trade is slow. Prices are lower, and a clearance cannot be effected. Sheep also are more plentiful. We have now very few in the wool, and therefore cease to quote them. Trade is very dull, and last Monday's quotations are barely maintained. Trade is not quite so active for Lambs and Calves. From Germany and Holland there are 460 Beasts, 2230 Sheep, and 145 Calves; from Scotland, 460 Beasts; from Ireland, 90; and 2800 from the Northern and Midland Counties.

The supply of Sheep is also small, but quite equal to the demand. Prices remain unaltered, with a very slow trade. The number of Calves is considerably larger, and consequently prices are lower. Choice Lambs are in demand at fully late rates. Our foreign supply consists of 276 Beasts, 720 Sheep, and 404 Calves. Milch Cows, 120.

POTATOES, Southwark, Monday, March 13.

During the past week the arrivals coastwise and from abroad have been moderate, but more plentiful by rail. The demand for best samples improved towards the end of the week. The following are this day's quotations:—Yorkshire Flukes, per ton, 120s. to 140s.; ditto Regents, 100s. to 110s.; do. Seedlings, 95s. to 100s.; do. Rocks, 85s. to 90s.; Kent and Essex Regents, 110s to 120s.; Perth, Forfar, and Fife ditto., 70s. to 100s.; ditto Rocks, 70s. to 80s.; ditto Reds, 65s. to 70s.; French Whites, 50s. to 55s.; Belgian do., 45s. to 50s.

MARK LANE.—Monday, April 13.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was very moderate; fine samples met with an improved sale at the full prices of this day se'nnight, inferior remained unsold towards the close; there was rather a better attendance; nevertheless, foreign Wheat was taken in retail only at late rates. Barley, Beans, and Peas were in steady request at last week's quotations. For Oats there was a moderate demand, and prices were unaltered. Barrel Flour was but little inquired for.

Friday, April 17.

The weather since the 10th instant has been fine, and quite of a spring character. The Wheat trade has continued in an inanimate state, fine samples of English Wheat being relatively cheaper than any other kind have met a good inquiry, but the supply of Foreign continues to be in excess of the demand, and some concession in prices is generally necessary to effect sales, which are only of a retail character. Spring Corn of all descriptions have also been in limited demand, and any alteration was in favour of purchasers, with the exception of Beans for which fully former prices were obtained. Flour has met but a limited inquiry, and our previous quotations were obtained with difficulty. Since Friday last 29 vessels have been reported off the coast. The floating trade has remained extremely quiet; there is very little off the coast besides several cargoes of Saide Wheat, of which a part has been sold about 1s. under last week's rates. Barley is in good demand at full prices. All other descriptions of grain unaltered. In Paris (April 16), Flour and Wheat have remained a very slow sale, and without alteration in prices. The present stock of Flour is estimated at about 10,600 cwts. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 40s. per 280 lbs. The arrivals of English grain and foreign Wheat have been small this week, of foreign Oats and Barley large. To-day's market was very thinly attended, but Monday's prices were maintained for both English and foreign Wheat. In the value of Barley, Beans, and Peas there was no alteration. The Oat trade was steady and good. Corn was in fair demand at Monday's quotations.

Liverpool, April 14.—We have had only a small attendance of buyers at to-day's market, and the business passing in Wheat has been limited to the immediate wants of the trade, at the full prices of Friday last. Flour slow of sale and the turn cheaper. Indian Corn was held for an advance of 3d. per qr., which checked business; there were good buyers at previous rates. Oats and Oatmeal unchanged. Egyptian Beans are up 1s. per qr. Peas and Barley the turn cheaper. The market closes steady but quiet.

Friday, April 17.—Market quiet. Wheat cheaper. Flour dull, and little doing. Indian Corn quiet demand. Other articles unchanged.

MUSGRAVE'S PATENT SLOW COMBUSTION STOVE.—This Stove is the nearest approach to Warming by Hot Water, and an efficient aid in Ventilation.

It will burn in Churches from Saturday till Sunday evening, without attention during the hours of worship. In Halls will burn day and night for weeks, with little care. Capable of Warming a large Apartment for 24 hours, at a cost of 3d.; and deserving of special attention, because of its safety, healthfulness, durability, and extreme simplicity.

It is also made for Small Conservatories, with a vapour chamber, which maintains a moist atmosphere for 12 hours with once filling.

Particulars and prices post free on application to Musgrave Brothers, Ann Street Iron Works, Belfast.

DENNIS'S PATENT HORTICULTURAL BUILDINGS are made from the best Wrought Iron, upon an entirely new principle. The combination of Iron and Glass under this patent is perfect; the possibility of fracture is prevented, and a permanently Water-tight Roof insured.

The leading practical advantages are extreme smallness of Framing, admitting a maximum of light and heat, great strength, durability, and perfect ventilation. They are speedily erected, partake of more desirable outline, and do not exceed the cost of a perishable wooden structure.

PATENT GUTTA PERCHA SOLES.—Important to Gardeners.—The Gutta Percha Company have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of the following letter from G. Glenny, Esq., the celebrated Florist:—

"Gentlemen,—I have worn Gutta Percha Soles and Heels these two years, and being so much in a garden as I necessarily am in all weathers, and with the ground in all states, I would on no account be without them. As a matter of economy I would recommend Gardeners to use them, for they may repair the worn part at all times by warming the material at the fire, and pressing it from the thick parts to the worn parts, as easily as if it were so much dough. I think it the duty of all persons who must occasionally wet their feet to adopt a material that completely defies damp. Many a gardener would escape colds and rheumatism by the use of Gutta Percha Soles. Your obedient servant, G. Glenny."

Every variety of Gutta Percha articles, such as Mill Bands Tubing, Soles, Sheet, Pump Buckets, Fire Buckets, Bosses, Union Joints, Flasks, Bottles, Bowls, Chamber Vessels, Toilet Trays, Sponge Bags, Curtain Rings, Galvanic Batteries, Calbotype trays, &c., manufactured by the Gutta Percha Company, and sold by their wholesale dealers in town or country.

SOLE MANUFACTURER,

JAMES GRAY, Horticultural Works,

DANVERS STREET, CHELSEA, LONDON, S.W.

The PATENT IN-DOOR PLANT CASE is one of the most useful of the Gardening novelties of the day. To all who have a taste for the cultivation of In-door Plants, for raising Seedlings, striking Cuttings, &c. the Plant Cases will be found an inestimable boon.

The Cases are highly approved and recommended by Professor Lindley, and by Messrs. Veitch, of The Royal Exotic Nursery, King's Road, Chelsea.

By an improved and new action of the handle, this Pump is so constructed that a great deal of friction is avoided; an air vessel is secured, and by introducing a brass lining into the barrel, with brass bucket and sucker, many of the objections to iron pumps are overcome. By this Pump ONE MAN WILL FORCE THE WATER in a continuous stream TO A HEIGHT OF 50 FEET.

When mounted on a barrow it forms a cheap, useful, and portable Fire Engine or Garden and Field Irrigator. The simplicity of its construction enables it to be offered to the public at a less price than any other Pump of equal capabilities.

WARNERS' IMPROVED PATENT DOUBLE-ACTION SYRINGE, with 6 feet Flexible Suction Pipe,

21s.,

Will draw water from water-pot, pail, tank, or pond, in conservatory or garden, and throw the water, either in a fine shower or a strong stream, to a distance of 30 feet.

As this Syringe draws and forces the water at both up and down strokes, the unpleasant stooping necessary to charge the ordinary Syringe is avoided.

It is superior to any other form of Syringe, and may be used as an effective Garden Engine with Warners' Water Barrow, or other supply.

There are no suction or delivery Valves, hence much friction and liability to choke with leaves and dirt is avoided.

AMERICAN PORTABLE FIRE ANNIHILATOR and GARDEN ENGINE.

£2 2s.

An efficient means of Extinguishing Fires at their commencement. Nine out of ten Fires in London are put out on their first appearance by the London Fire Brigade with Hand Pumps of considerably less power.

One man will throw 7 or 8 gallons per minute from 40 to 50 feet with it.

It is an effective Garden Engine for cleansing or syringing Wall-fruit or Rose Trees, Plants, or Vines.

It may be used to draw water from the pail in which it is fixed, or from a tank or pond by the addition of the required length of suction. It is simple in its construction, having no suction or delivery valves to clog with dirt or leaves.

No Establishment, either private, commercial, or manufacturing, should be without one.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Monday, the Earl of HARDWICKE called attention to the conduct of the Admiralty in depriving Lord ELPHINSTONE of his command on the mere report of a Court of Inquiry, without giving him the opportunity of defending himself. The Duke of SOMERSET vindicated the conduct of the Admiralty, which was also defended by Earl GRANVILLE and Earl RUSSELL, and condemned by the Earl of DERBY, Lord CHELMSFORD, and Lord CRANWORTH. The Illegitimate Children (Ireland) Bill and the Courts of the Church of Scotland Bill were read a third time and passed. On Tuesday the Local Government Act (1858) Amendment Bill was read a second time. On Thursday the Marquis of CLANRICARDE called attention to the seizure of British ships by the Federal cruisers in the West Indies. Earl RUSSELL said that after consulting the law officers of the Crown, he intended to bring these matters by the next mail to the notice of the Government of the United States, and, judging from precedents, he had no doubt that the United States' Government would readily make reparation if a wrong had been done. With regard to Mr. ADAMS'S assumption of granting certificates to British ships trading to neutral ports, he considered such conduct as most unwarrantable, and he intended to bring it before the United States' Government.

In the House of Commons on Monday Sir G. GREY moved the second reading of the Prison Ministers' Bill, the object of which was to give facilities for enabling Roman Catholic prisoners to receive the religious instruction of their own ministers under certain conditions and restrictions. Mr. GORE LANGTON moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. The Bill was supported by Mr. HENLEY, Mr. DISRAELI, and Lord PALMERSTON, and opposed by Mr. SELWYN, Mr. NEWDEGATE, and other members. On a division the second reading was carried by 152 to 122. The adjourned debate on the motion for the second reading of the Assurances Registration (Ireland) Bill was resumed, when the second reading was carried on a division by 56 to 41. The Gardens in Towns Protection Bill was read a third time and passed. On Tuesday Sir G. GREY moved for leave to bring in a Bill for the amalgamation of the City of London Police with the Metropolitan Police. Mr. CRAWFORD said he would not oppose the introduction of the Bill, but gave notice of his intention to move as an amendment to the motion for its second reading that it be read a second time that day six months. After some discussion, leave was given to bring in the Bill. On Wednesday Mr. WYKEHAM MARTIN moved the second reading of the Innkeepers' Liability Bill, the object of which was to amend the present state of the law relating to the liability of innkeepers for the property of their guests. Sir F. GOLDSMID moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. The amendment was negatived without a division, and the Bill was read a second time. The Elections during Recess Bill was read a second time. Mr. COLLINS moved the second reading of the Borough Residence Uniform Measurement Bill. Mr. Serjeant PIGOTT moved, as an amendment, that it be read a second time that day six months. On a division, the amendment was negatived by 171 to 135, and the Bill was read a second time. The Marriages (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. On Thursday Mr. ROEBUCK called attention to the seizure of British ships by Federal cruisers, and asked what course the Government intended to adopt. Lord PALMERSTON said that the question was one of the greatest possible importance, and that it was receiving due consideration on the part of the Government, but he was not then prepared to state the conclusion at which they had arrived. In Committee of Supply, Lord PALMERSTON moved a resolution granting to HER MAJESTY the sum of 50,000*l.* towards the expense of erecting a suitable memorial of the PRINCE CONSORT. Mr. DISRAELI supported the motion, which was unanimously agreed to. On the motion of Pord PALMERSTON the sum of 85,000*l.* was voted as prize money for the capture of Kertch during the Russian war. The House then went into a Committee of Ways and Means, and agreed to the resolutions of the Budget on the Tea Duties, the Sugar Duties, and the Income Tax. The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill and the Vaccination (Ireland) Bill were read a second time. The Bakehouses Regulation Bill and the Telegraphs Bill passed through committee.

From the United States we learn that the Federal attack on Charleston commenced on the 7th inst., when eight Monitors and the iron-sides passed the bar, and opened a concentrated fire upon Fort Sumter at a distance of 3000 yards. After a fight of three hours, during which the firing was incessant, the Federal ships were repulsed, and one of their iron-clads was disabled and run on shore. When the mail left a great battle between the land forces was progressing within sight of the city. In North Carolina the Federal army under General FOSTER is in a very critical position, the Confederates having succeeded in surrounding him, and in repulsing the gunboats sent to his assistance. The latest news states that his capitulation was hourly expected.

THE COURT.—The Queen and Royal family continue at Windsor Castle. On Friday morning the Queen, attended by the Marchioness of Ely, Lady Augusta Bruce, and the Master of the Household, came to Buckingham Palace and returned to Windsor at 2 o'clock. Princess Helena and Princess Louisa, who had come to town on the previous day, returned with her Majesty. In the afternoon the Queen, accompanied by the Princess Helena and Princess Louisa, drove out. Prince Leopold and Princess Beatrice took a carriage airing. On Saturday morning the Duchess of Cambridge and the Princess Mary visited her Majesty. The Prince and Princess of Wales arrived at the Castle from Sandringham. In the afternoon her Majesty, accompanied by the Princess of Wales and Princess Helena, drove out in a carriage and four. Prince Leiningen, the Archbishop of York, the Right Hon. W. and Mrs. Gladstone, and Dr. Armstrong, R.N., arrived at the Castle on a visit. Mr. Gladstone had an audience of the Queen. On Sunday morning the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Alfred, Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, Prince Leopold, Prince Louis of Hesse, and Prince Leiningen, attended Divine service in the private chapel. The Archbishop of York preached the sermon. In the afternoon the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Princess Helena, and Prince Alfred attended divine service in St. George's Chapel. On Monday morning the Prince of Wa es and Prince Alfred came to London. The Judge-Advocate-General had an audience of the Queen. The Archbishop of York and the Right Hon. W. and Mrs. Gladstone returned to London. In the afternoon the Queen, accompanied by the Princess of Wales and Princess Beatrice, drove out in a carriage and four. Prince Leopold drove in the grounds. The Prince of Wales returned from London. The Princesses Helena and Louisa came to town and attended the performance of the Philharmonic Society, accompanied by Prince Alfred. The Royal party returned to Windsor at night. Prince Leiningen left the Castle. On Tuesday the Queen, accompanied by the Princess of Wales and Princess Beatrice, visited an old and valued servant now on his deathbed in the Windsor Royal Infirmary, and afterwards visited the new buildings in Victoria Street. On Wednesday the Prince and Princess of Wales came to London, and after receiving addresses at Marlborough House visited the exhibition of the Wedding Presents at the South Kensington Museum. Their Royal Highnesses returned to Windsor in the evening. Earl Russell, the Right Hon. B. Disraeli, and Rear-Admiral Seymour arrived at the Castle. Earl Russell had an audience of the Queen. On Thursday morning the Queen, accompanied by the Princess of Wales, walked and drove in the grounds.

ADDRESSES TO THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.—The Prince and Princess of Wales arrived at Marlborough House on Wednesday morning from Windsor Castle, and in the afternoon received addresses of congratulation upon their marriage from the Lord Mayor and Corporation of the City of London, the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, the Lord Provost and magistrates of Edinburgh, the Lord Mayor and Corporation of Dublin, the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and from the body of Presbyterian Ministers in and near the Cities of London and Westminster. The deputations from the three Corporations and from the two Universities went in state to Marlborough House, all the members being in full costume. Their Royal Highnesses returned gracious answers to all the addresses.

ROYAL WEDDING PRESENTS.—It is understood that it will be necessary that the jewels now exhibited should be removed shortly for the Princess of Wales's personal use, but that her Royal Highness has consented that the most important of them shall, if possible, be returned from time to time when not required.

The Cabinet.—A Cabinet Council was held on Wednesday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street.

Ministerial Arrangements.—Earl de Grey and Ripon has been selected to succeed Sir G. C. Lewis as Secretary for War, with a seat in the Cabinet, and the Marquis of Hartington, who was lately appointed one of the Lords of the Admiralty, has succeeded Earl de Grey in the Under Secretaryship. The seat at the Board of Admiralty, vacated by this arrangement, has been conferred on Mr. Stansfeld, M.P. for Halifax.

Parliamentary Movements.—The nomination for Thetford took place on Monday, when Lord Frederick Fitzroy, the Ministerial candidate, and Mr. R. J. H. Harvey, a local banker of considerable influence, were put in nomination. The show of hands was in favour of Mr. Harvey, but at the poll on Tuesday, Lord J. Fitzroy was returned by a majority of 12, the numbers being 93 to 81. Mr. Hamilton, jun., the son of the late member, has been elected for the county of Dublin without opposition.

Foreign.

France. — The Emperor held a grand review of the Imperial Guard at Longchamps on Tuesday, and it is said that his Majesty spends hours in close study of the maps of Prussia, Poland, and Russia, just as he made the Lombardo-Venetian territory and rivers the object of his scrutiny during the period between the secret convention of Plombière and the declaration of war with Austria. It is also said that Prince Napoleon, who was on the point of making a journey to Egypt on account of his differences with the Court on the subject of Poland, has postponed his departure indefinitely, and that an intimate understanding has been established between France and Sweden in anticipation of a rupture with Russia. The Bourse has been greatly agitated this week by the prospect of serious complications in regard to Poland, and especially by the rumour that at the close of the Cabinet Council on Friday orders were sent to the naval arsenals to fit out and send to Cherbourg all the iron-clads that are launched, and to hasten the completion of those still on the stocks; while the maritime prefects have been ordered to send in a report on the condition of all steamers in the reserve, and to state how soon they can be manned and prepared for active service. The aspect of maritime questions with America has also caused uneasiness, and La France is inclined to believe that the provocations of Admiral Wilkes in seizing English merchantmen have no other object than to exasperate England and bring about a war. It is reported that Marshal Pelissier is about to be recalled from his post of Governor-General of Algeria, and that he will probably be succeeded by General Cousin Montauban, Count of Palikao, who commanded the French troops in China. MM. Persigny and Billault have been examined at Paris by the commission sent from London in the affair of Serjeant Glover and the Morning Chronicle. They positively deny all complicity or engagement with that paper. The Journal des Débats has received a second warning. The Journal des Villes et Campagnes has received a first warning. The Moniteur of Thursday says:—

"Some journals describe the candidates for the Legislative Body put forward by the Opposition as 'Independent candidates.' This designation is an electoral manœuvre, and an insult to those candidates who enjoy the sympathies of the country and the confidence of the Government. The Administration will repress manœuvres of this kind with severity."

M. Dufaure has been elected a member of the French Academy by a majority of 18, M. Jules Janin only receiving 9 votes. M. Carné has also been chosen a member by a majority of 18, M. Littré obtaining 11 votes. Admiral Hamelin is seriously ill. A French translation of "The Life and Speeches of Prince Albert" has just appeared. The translation is from the pen of Madame Cornelis de Witt, the daughter of M. Guizot, who has enriched the volume with a preface, in which he pays an eloquent and feeling tribute to the talents and virtues of the Prince, and observes that this little book, simply recording what he said and did, is the noblest monument that can be raised to his memory.

Sweden.—The French papers state that since the visit of Prince Czartoryski to Stockholm, Sweden has been actively engaged in armaments, and it is even intimated that the Prince had a mission from the French Government. The Russian Ambassador at Stockholm is said to have peremptorily demanded explanations from the Swedish Government in reference to these armaments. The Ambassador requires to be satisfied regarding the attitude of Sweden upon the Polish question, and threatens, in the case of not receiving a satisfactory reply, to demand his passports. The Finnish newspaper Helsingfors Dagblad publishes an article which has created a great sensation, in which the neutrality of Finland is advocated in the event of a war.

Prussia.—The Nord and some foreign journals speak of a projected interview between the Czar and the King of Prussia. In the Chamber of Deputies on Friday Herr von Twesten asked the Government to state whether it considered the Danish proclamation of the 30th ult. an infringement of the assurances given by Denmark in 1851 and 1852. Herr von Twesten further demanded that the Government should declare null and void the engagements concluded in those years, especially as regarding the succession to the Danish Crown entered into by the Protocol of London. Herr von Twesten observed that further measures than a disclaimer of this description could not at present be taken. The internal dissensions of the country rendered war impossible. The House itself would oppose the employment of hostilities. (Vehement applause followed this remark.) Count Bismark Schönhausen replied to the first question in the affirmative. He stated that the Government would concert with its federal allies, and especially with Austria, the steps to be adopted in answer to the Danish proclamation. Prussia and Austria had, indeed, already forwarded separate protests. The Government of the King was mindful of the action due to the national honour in this matter. If the Government felt disposed to embark in war it would do so without the assent of the House. The commercial treaty between Prussia and Belgium was adopted on Saturday in the Chamber of Deputies. Only two members of the Catholic party voted against it. In the sitting of Wednesday, the discussion on the Ministerial Responsibility Bill commenced. During the debate Count Bismark declared that the present was not a fitting time for the consideration of this measure. The preliminary condition requisite for such a Bill would be that the constitution should offer a clear and complete basis. The Government did not consider that such a preliminary condition now existed, at a time when there were material differences of opinion between the Crown and the Chamber upon the bearing of important portions of the Constitution. The Government was, therefore, unable to sanction the Bill. Notwithstanding the declaration of the President of the Council, there is no doubt that the Chamber will pass the Bill.

Italy.—A Note has been received at Turin from the French Government, inviting Italy to join diplomatic action with the three great Powers on the Polish question. The Italian Government has replied, that though they desire to co-operate with good effect in the steps taken by France, they nevertheless insist on the liberty of action demanded by her special political position. In the Senate on Friday, the Committee appointed to investigate the affair of the search made in the house of Senator Prince St. Elia, at Palermo, made its report, stating that the privilege of the Senate had not been violated. A debate then ensued upon the Budget. Signor Minghetti stated that an increase had taken place in the revenue arising from several taxes. The sale of public landed property would be, he said, effected in a few years, and the unification of the taxes would be very soon accomplished. On the previous day the Chamber of Deputies, by 190 votes to 11, and the Senate by 64 votes to 25, voted to the late Prime Minister, Luigi Carlo Farini, an annuity of 1000*l.*, of which, on his decease, 160*l.* annually are to be continued to his widow, and 160*l.* to his mother; and further voted an immediate gift of 8000*l.* as a national gift to the statesman and his family. In the Chamber of Deputies on Friday, the Minister of the Interior, in reply to a question on the state of affairs in Sicily, announced the measures which he proposed to adopt for re-establishing public safety and confidence in the island. After a long debate, the Chamber, in consideration of the declarations of the Minister, passed to the order of the day. In the sitting of Saturday the Chamber rejected a Bill proposed by Signor Lovito, authorising the Ministry to make the expenditure necessary for carrying on several branches of the public service without waiting for constitutional forms. The discussion of the budget of justice was then proceeded with. Signor Ricciardo complained of the bad administration of justice in the southern provinces, and of some summary executions of brigands. After some explanations from the Minister of Justice, who protested against the assertions of these members, the debate on the budget of justice was adjourned until the Chamber should hear the report of the Brigandage Committee. In the sitting of Wednesday the President of the Council announced that the King had accepted the resignation of the Marquis di Negro as Minister of Marine, and had nominated General Cuza as his successor.

Russia.—La France of Tuesday says that a Privy Council on Polish affairs was held on the 19th inst., at the Palace of Tsarzkoe-Seloe, near St. Petersburg, when the Notes of the three Powers were simultaneously presented, and produced a very great sensation. The Russian Government, it is said, had not expected that this step would have been taken with views so completely in unison. It is said that orders have been transmitted to Cronstadt to fit out a squadron to cruise in the Gulf of Finland and the Baltic, for the purpose of preventing any landing of the Poles.

Poland.—The text of the Imperial decree granting an amnesty has been officially published at Warsaw. It is not in conformity with the text given by the St. Petersburg journals. The amnesty is to be extended to those only who have been drawn into the movement, so that the leaders are excluded. A considerable body of insurgents are fortifying Kuezyk, in the district of Warsaw. A great many Russian troops are concentrated at Kolo. It was reported on Sunday that Lelewel's insurgent force, 300 strong, had been dispersed by the Russians, after an engagement of an hour's duration, but a despatch from Cracow of Tuesday says that Lelewel has not only succeeded in taking up a strong position, but has defeated a Russian corps, consisting of 600 infantry and 200 cavalry, who retreated to Janow. On Sunday last two serious engagements took place between the insurgents and the Russian troops in the forest of Kampinos, six German miles from Warsaw and Pultuesk. The latter place was burnt by the Russians during the engagement. The Russians have fortified themselves in the district of Sandomir, and thus occupy a firmer position against the insurgents under Lapacki. The insurgents stationed at Grabowce have successfully repulsed several Russian attacks. It is also asserted that they have been victorious near Bas. On Tuesday last a band of insurgents, 650 strong, including 150 cavalry, was posted at Gosenice, together with two corps, numbering 500, at Paczolewike, the entire force intending to attack Olkusz. A well armed body of insurgents, 600 strong, is in the district of Cracow. During the Easter holidays severe engagements took place in the vicinity of Wilna. Persons of all classes are constantly leaving that district to join the insurgents. Arrests and domiciliary visits are of daily occurrence. The citadel is filled to overflowing with political prisoners. Many persons have been sentenced to death by courts-martial, but none have yet been executed, the military Governor having in all cases commuted the sentences. A large number of Polish landholders have fled to Wilna. The latest news from that city announces that the insurrection has again broken out in Volhynia and Podolia. The insurrectionary movement is extending round Kalisch. The garrison had been alarmed by the news that a Russian patrol of 40 men had been captured by the insurgents near the town. The insurgents, numbering 5000 men, have assembled in the neighbourhood, and an attack on the town is daily expected. During the service in the Catholic church of the College on Monday, the students sang the Polish National Hymn in addition to creating disturbances. The College tutors immediately resolved upon closing the lecture rooms, and have asked by telegraph for further orders from superior quarters. The Russian General Waldersees has since arrived at Kalisch, and has expelled the students without closing the College. The frontier continues to be most strictly guarded, neither passengers nor goods being permitted to pass. The Provisional Government of Warsaw has issued a circular, denouncing in the strongest terms the insults offered to Prince Napoleon by Count Wielopolski and his son, and stating that not content with committing treason at home, they are now extending it abroad, by daring to insult a foreign prince remarkable for his generous devotion to Poland. Count Sigismund Wielopolski has since been requested to send in his resignation on account of the challenge he sent to Prince Napoleon, and it is rumoured in official quarters that the elder Count Wielopolski has requested leave to resign his post, owing to a disagreement with General Berg, who is said to have demanded 100,000 additional troops. A banquet was given at Cracow on Sunday in honour of Mr. Hennessy, M.P., at which Count Skorupka, in a speech of welcome to that gentleman, said that the sympathies of England with Poland were an important guarantee for the endeavours of Poland. Mr. Hennessy, in reply, said that a reconciliation was now impossible, and that it was rather to be expected that the complete independence of Poland would be brought about.

Greece.—The Berlingske Tidende of Wednesday officially announces that Prince Christian has had a long interview with Sir A. Paget, the British Minister, at which his Royal Highness declared that the only obstacles which had hitherto opposed the acceptance of the Crown of Greece—namely, the abdication of King Otho and the state of the Greek finances—having now been fully removed, he definitively accepted it for his son, Prince William. It is understood that representatives of the protecting Powers of Greece will meet at an early period in London for the purpose of coming to a final settlement of the Greek question.

Turkey and Egypt.—The Sultan left Alexandria on Friday afternoon on his return to Constantinople. Ismail Pasha remained on board the Imperial yacht till the last moment, and the parting was most cordial. The Sultan arrived at Smyrna on Monday, and on the following day went to Ephesus and turned the first sod of the works extending the Ottoman Railway. His Majesty returned in the evening by train to Smyrna.

United States.—The Siege of Charleston commenced on the 7th inst. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day nine Federal Monitors opened fire on Fort Sumter at a distance of 3000 yards. At 4 o'clock the Ironsides and the Keokuk withdrew from the engagement, apparently disabled. A Southern despatch of the 8th reports that the Confederate Monitors went out to take part in the fight. Several Federal Monitors were still within the bar, and a terrible battle between the land forces was progressing within sight of the city. The Keokuk was sunk, and articles from her had drifted ashore. The contrivance for removing the torpedoes had also drifted to the beach. The casualties in Fort Sumter were one boy killed and five men wounded. The casualties in the other batteries are unknown. Accounts from New Orleans announce the capture by the Confederates of the Federal steamer Diana, in the Atchafalaya River. The Diana left Brashear on a reconnoitering expedition, but encountered some Confederate masked batteries at Patersonville, and after a sharp engagement, in which Captain Peterson and several gunners were killed, the Diana surrendered. 25 Federals were killed and wounded, and 170 taken prisoners. Admiral Farragut is said to hold the Mississippi from Port Hudson to Vicksburg, and General Banks with 10,000 men has left New Orleans and gone down Bayou Plague mine to reinforce Weitzel, and attack the Bayou Teche country. The Federals have withdrawn from the peninsula opposite Vicksburg after cutting the levee, and turning the water into their old camping ground. General Grant went to Vicksburg in person under a flag of truce on the 4th inst. His mission is unknown. The Confederates, under Generals Hill and Pettigrew, 10,000 strong, have surrounded Washington, North Carolina, which is occupied by the Federal force under Gen. Foster, variously estimated at from 2000 to 4000 strong. The Confederates have erected a battery five miles below Washington, commanding the channel between that place and Newbern, thus cutting off the Federal communications with Newbern. General Foster sent to Newbern for reinforcements, and several gunboats started, but owing to the blockade of the river by powerful batteries, it was unable to reach him. General Foster's communication being thus wholly cut off both by land and water, it was hourly expected that he would be forced to capitulate. General Hill has notified General Foster to remove the women and children, as he is going to shell the city. Confederate despatches state that the Federals, 15,000 strong, are advancing on Columbia, Tennessee, and that a battle is imminent. Telegrams from Nashville state that the Confederate General Van Dorn attacked General Granger at Franklin, Tennessee, on the same day, and after two hours' severe fighting withdrew, leaving his dead upon the field. The casualties on either side are not stated. The Confederates have burnt two Federal steamers on the Tennessee River. The majority of the Pennsylvania Senatorial Investigating Committee in their report declare General Cameron guilty of the charges of bribery preferred against him. Four persons have been arrested in Reading, Pennsylvania, charged with being connected with the secret organisation known as Knights of the Golden Circle, whose designs are asserted to be the establishment of a North-Western Confederacy, the abduction of President Lincoln, and forcible resistance to the Conscription Act. These arrests have created much excitement and ill-feeling throughout Pennsylvania. The Democratic journals treat the charges as absurd. The New York Tribune continues to assert that the relations of the Federal Government with England is the topic of anxious interest in official and unofficial circles at Washington. It is reported semi-officially from that city that Mr. Seward has forwarded despatches to Mr. Adams to the effect that, if any other vessels of the character of the Alabama and Florida are allowed to leave British ports, the British Government will be held responsible for the injuries that may result to American commerce. The negro expedition has evacuated Jacksonville, Florida, and, after burning the town, returned to Port Royal. This wanton destruction of Jacksonville is severely commented upon by the journals of all shades of political opinion. The President and Mrs. Lincoln have visited General Hooker at his quarters on the Rappahannock, but the weather was so severe and the mud so deep that the grand review in honour of the visit was countermanded, and Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln returned to Washington, after the President had reviewed the army by brigades. The President is still urged by a section of the Cabinet to issue letters of marque, but persistently refuses, lest he should increase the difficulties of the Republic and imperil its friendly relations with the maritime Powers of Europe. The joint Committee of both Houses of Congress on the conduct of the war have presented their report. It censures General M'Clellan's whole military course since his appointment to the command of the Army of the Potomac, and points to him as the cause of the failure of the army to take Richmond. General Burnside's plans for dislodging the Confederates at Fredericksburg subsequently to his defeat in December are declared to have been thwarted by the interference of the President, who gave ear to prejudicial statements against General Burnside from subordinate officers, and countermanded his orders for an advance. The report concludes by stating the belief of the Committee that the rebellion can be subdued only by fighting, and their confidence that the present campaign will produce decisive victories to the Federal arms. The Secretary of the Treasury has issued stringent orders regarding commercial intercourse with the insurrectionary States. The purchase of cotton with gold is forbidden, and military officers are forbidden to trade. The New York Legislature has passed the Bill prohibiting the banks from loaning money on gold. A large meeting has been held in New York in aid of the distress in Ireland. General M'Clellan and Archbishop Hughes addressed the meeting. Cheers were given for the former as the future President. A large Democratic meeting has also been held at New York, at which resolutions were passed denouncing the Administration, declaring the war, as now conducted, a failure, and demanding peace. The Administration could not conquer the South if they would, and would not if they could. Therefore the Democracy favoured peace and conciliation as the only means to restore the Union. They demand a change of measures, not for separation but for restoration. Mr. Fernando Wood declared that until the Conferences were opened it was impossible for any one to say whether, under such circumstances, the South would or would not listen to negociations looking to reunion. Speeches were made declaring it to be insanity to suppose that the South ever could be conquered. The Southern journals say that the peace party were about to introduce a peace resolution which would probably pass one House of Congress before the adjournment. In Connecticut a Republican governor and Republican state officers have been elected. A bread riot has taken place in Richmond, in which 3000 women were engaged. They broke open the Government stores and took what they wanted. The military were unable to check the riot. President Davis and others made conciliatory speeches, and order was restored. The Richmond Sentinel, referring to this riot, says it was an attempt to rob under the excuse of a scarcity of food, as the dry goods establishments suffered as much as others. There has also been a bread riot at Petersburg. The prize steamer Dolphin, captured by the Federal steamer Wachusset, has arrived at Havannah. The steamer Julia has also arrived at Havannah, from Mobile, with cotton. The British prize steamer Aries has arrived at New York. She was captured 30 miles north of Charleston. The schooner Sue has been captured off Wilmington. The British ship Surprise, and the British schooners John Williams Florence Nightingale, and Brothers have also been captured.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—Dismissal of Ionian Judges.—Lord CHELMSFORD called attention to the removal of two judges of the Supreme Court of the Ionian Islands, and moved for correspondence and papers on the subject. He complained that these gentlemen had been dismissed from their offices without previous notice, and although he admitted the step was legal, he was anxious to learn what was the reason which had induced the Lord High Commissioner to take it.—The Duke of NEWCASTLE at first declined to produce the correspondence, but in answer to a subsequent appeal from the Earl of Derby, consented to produce copies of, or extracts from, the correspondence, and after a few observations from Lord CHELMSFORD and Earl GREY, the motion as amended was agreed to.

MONDAY.—The report of Amendments on the Drainage of Land (Ireland) Bill was received. The Illegitimate Children (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed. The Case of Lord Elphinstone.—The Earl of HARDWICKE, in calling attention to Courts of Inquiry in her Majesty's Naval Service, strongly stigmatised the treatment of Lord Elphinstone by the Admiralty in dismissing him from the command of the Vigilant without giving him the power of calling evidence in his defence, because his ship ran upon the Gunfleet Sand while in charge of a Thames pilot.—The Duke of SOMERSET said that the Board of Admiralty considering that the running of the Vigilant on so well-known a shoal as the Gunfleet Sand in broad daylight was a gross case of neglect, had after due inquiry, censured Lord Elphinstone. They had not refused to grant him a court-martial, but had sent him the evidence on which their censure was based, and left him the option after its perusal, of reiterating his demand; but this his lordship had not done.—The Marquis TOWNSHEND and Lord COLCHESTER condemned the course taken by the Admiralty.—The Earl of HARDWICKE said he did not wish to have brought down a fresh censure on Lord Elphinstone, but to have extracted an opinion as to the capacity of such tribunals as Courts of Inquiry.—Earl GRANVILLE considered that not the slightest case had been made against the Admiralty, and that Lord Elphinstone had been worse treated by the zeal of his friends, who had compelled the First Lord of the Admiralty to reiterate the censure, than by the Admiralty itself.—The Earl of DERBY thought it was contrary to all ideas of British justice to try, condemn, and censure an officer without giving him the opportunity of defending himself. Lord Elphinstone had been hardly dealt with, and in a manner contrary to the dictates of British justice.—Earl RUSSELL said Lord Elphinstone had himself refused a court-martial, after reading the evidence taken before the Court of Inquiry, and that the Admiralty were blameless in the matter.—Lord CHELMSFORD thought that the treatment of Lord Elphinstone had been harsh, and that the answer of the Duke of Somerset was most unsatisfactory.—Lord CRANWORTH was of opinion that the system of Courts of Inquiry was most objectionable, and required alteration.

TUESDAY.—The second reading of the Local Government Act (1858) Amendment Bill was moved by Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY, who stated its object to be to prevent certain parishes from availing themselves of the provisions of the Local Government Act merely for the purpose of escaping the operation of the Highway Act. The Bill was read a second time.—On the motion of Viscount SYDNEY a copy of the report upon Metropolitan Railway Schemes, made to the Metropolitan Board of Works by their engineer, was ordered to be referred to the select committee of their lordship's House now sitting.

THURSDAY.—The Marquis of CLANRICARDE brought under notice the recent Seizure of British Vessels by American Cruisers, and referred especially to the case of the Dolphin, whilst on a lawful voyage from Liverpool to Nassau. He argued that these cases could not be overlooked as isolated acts, but that they showed a predetermined policy on the part of the Federal Government. He wished to know what course the Government intended to adopt with regard to Mr. Adams, the American Minister in London, assuming to grant certificates or permits to British ships trading to neutral ports, and urged the necessity of strongly reinforcing the English squadron in the West Indies.—Earl RUSSELL censured the language used by the noble marquis, which he said was based upon flying rumours and ex parte statements in the newspapers. The Government had consulted the law officers of the Crown, in whose opinion there was no ground, on a primâ facie view of the case, to justify the seizure of the Dolphin, though there might be facts which afforded reasons for sending her to a prize court. But on two points there was no doubt the American cruiser was wrong: first, in abusing the protection of a neutral port; and next, in landing the crew upon neutral territory. By the next mail he intended to bring the case under the notice of the Federal Government; and, judging from precedents, he entertained the hope that they would readily make reparation if wrong had been done. With regard to the conduct of Mr. Adams in granting certificates of protection to British ships, he had no difficulty in pronouncing it to be most unwarrantable, and it was his intention to make a representation to the Federal Government on the subject. — The Earl of CARNARVON said that the remarks of Lord Russell seemed to favour the impression that American ships of war had a right to seize British vessels engaged in a neutral and legitimate trade, and even to open and act upon the correspondence contained in her Majesty's mails.—Earl RUSSELL disclaimed any such intention, and stated that Mr. Seward had himself abandoned all rights of the sort in the instructions he had issued to the American naval commanders.—The Earl of DERBY said, that instead of withdrawing the mails from the Sea Queen, the Government ought to have insisted on their being conveyed in her, and at the same time to have provided her with effectual protection from the aggressions of the Federal cruisers.—Earl GREY did not think it just or reasonable that British vessels trading to neutral ports, and in so doing at liberty to carry even contraband of war, should be deprived of any sort of security. Her Majesty's Government could not help the inconvenience suffered by the owners of vessels trading with suspected ports, but they ought to take care that the rights allowed to belligerents were not wantonly or aggressively enforced.—Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY said that the Sea Queen was in a different position to that of a mail steamer.—Lord WODEHOUSE argued that merchant vessels sailing to a neutral port ought not to be questioned by Federal cruisers. In the present temper of the American people, Government could only preserve peace by acting firmly though calmly, and, while not abating one jot of their own rights, respecting the rights of others.—Earl GRANVILLE contended that the Government had acted prudently and consistently under very delicate circumstances, and deprecated angry discussions on imperfect information.

FRIDAY.—America.—Lord REDESDALE asked whether the United States Government had requested that authority might be given to British Consuls to open the sealed mail bags from this country and inform the Federal Government if the letters contained any information bearing upon the question at issue between North and South.—Earl RUSSELL was understood to say that some such demand had been made.—The Earl of DERBY expressed his surprise at this proceeding, and several peers asked what authority the Consuls had to open the bags.—Earl RUSSELL said he would consult the law officers of the Crown and give his answer on Monday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—Mr. BRADY called attention to the reports of the Royal commission appointed to inquire into the best mode of utilising the Sewage of Towns and for applying it to beneficial and profitable uses, and spoke at some length in support of the inexpediency of granting any further public money for the use of the commission.—Mr. K. SEYMER said that the object of the commissioners was not to inquire into the best mode of utilising sewage, but to inquire into the means of getting rid of it under the system of water supply adopted in towns, and of then applying it to agricultural purposes. He defended the commissioners against the insinuation which had been thrown out respecting them, and observed that it was quite a mistake to suppose that the residuum after deodorisation was so valuable as had been represented.—Mr. COWPER expressed his approval of the reports of the commission, whose suggestions were calculated to be of great service to municipal bodies. The problem of utilising the sewage of towns was yet to be solved, and it was chiefly to the continuance of the labours of the commission that he looked for a solution. —After some observations from Mr. PAGET, Mr. AYRTON, and others, the subject dropped. Russia and Sweden. — Lord PALMERSTON, in reply to Mr. GRIFFITH, said that, so far as her Majesty's Government were aware, nothing had occurred to interrupt amicable relations between Russia and Sweden. Affairs of Greece.—In answer to Lord H. LENNOX, Lord PALMERSTON said that he must be excused from relating all that had taken place on the subject of the Throne of Greece, but he would say that the Government had not acted with precipitation in reference to Prince William of Denmark, and had not made any communications to Greece that they were not authorised to make. The House then went into committee of supply on the Civil Service Estimates.—Lord R. CECIL protested against proceeding at that hour, and Lord PALMERSTON consented that the Chairman should report progress. The report of the Committee on Ways and Means was brought up and agreed to after some remarks by Sir S. NORTHCOTE, who expressed his belief that the Budget of the Chancellor of the Exchequer would give general satisfaction to the country. On the order for the third reading of the Telegraphs Bill, Mr. AYRTON moved that the Bill, in respect to certain clauses, be recommitted, on the ground that the amendments therein were not made in accordance with the views of the House.—Mr. M. GIBSON defended the amendments, and, after some further discussion, the House divided, when the amendment for recommitting the Bill was carried by 25 to 19. Several other Bills were forwarded a stage.

MONDAY.—Sir G. GREY, in moving the second reading of the Prison Ministers Bill, stated the main facts upon which it was founded and its principal provisions. The Bill did not raise a question as to any form of religious belief, nor introduce any principle injurious to the maintenance of Protestant doctrines; it merely extended a principle adopted by the House to a large body of our fellow-subjects—Roman Catholic prisoners, of whom there was a very large number in the county and borough prisons of England and Scotland. In Ireland there was a paid Protestant chaplain in every prison, even though the prison did not contain a single Protestant prisoner. The Bill empowered the Court of Quarter Session to appoint Roman Catholic chaplains in prisons, with a reasonable remuneration, and to remove them.—Mr. GORE LANGTON moved to defer the second reading for six months. He objected to the principle involved in it, which would sanction the appointment of a Roman Catholic priest in every prison in the country.—The amendment was seconded by Colonel BARTTELOT.—Mr. HENLEY could not concur in the opinion that the measure was either unnecessary or uncalled for. He did not see why Roman Catholic prisoners should be shut out from visitation by their priests, unless they asked for it. He would do as he would be done by, and should vote for the second reading. — Mr. SELWYN opposed the Bill, on the ground that it affected the rights of the Established Church, and would establish one law in one country and in one borough and another in another.—Lord E. HOWARD considered that this was not an ecclesiastical, so much as a police measure. Its necessity had been affirmed by great authorities. There had been no complaint of conflicting interests in Irish prisons, and the mixed system prevailed in the colonies. He mentioned instances of impediments cast in the way of Roman Catholic prisoners desirous of seeing their priest, and of unfair advantages taken of them. —Mr. P. WINDHAM and Mr. LYSLEY opposed the Bill; Colonel PATTEN and Mr. BAINES supported it.—Mr. DISRAELI said, two great objections had been urged against this Bill. First, that it would affect the security of the Established Church. If he could suppose that it had a tendency to impair that security, he should oppose the Bill; but he had no such apprehension. Then it was said that the measure was dangerous to the Protestant spirit of the country. But who could suppose that the magistracy of the country would desire to depress that spirit, of the power of which Roman Catholics had had sufficient proof? Looking, therefore, at the influence which this Bill would exert upon the status of the Church of England or upon the Protestant spirit of the country, it was, in his opinion, to have a very poor and mean conception of that Church and of that spirit to suppose that the Bill could endanger the one and lessen the other. He did not entertain these visionary apprehensions as to the effects of this permissive Bill, and hoped the House would pass it, as in harmony with the legislation which it had sanctioned upon the subject.—Lord PALMERSTON gave his hearty support to the Bill. His view of the question was, he said, that it was not one between Protestantism and Catholicity; but between sound sense and most respectable and honourable prejudices—prejudices which he had hoped had been dispelled more than 30 years ago, when the House resolved that differences of religious principles should cause no distinction between civil and social rights. While no danger was apprehended to the Protestant religion if Roman Catholics were allowed access to that House, and Roman Catholic priests had access to our soldiers, it would be dangerous, it was supposed, to allow them access to men imprisoned for crimes. To reject this measure, in his opinion, would be to act in opposition to the principles which had guided our legislation for more than 30 years.—Mr. NEWDEGATE opposed the Bill, which was sought, he said, not for the sake of Roman Catholic prisoners, who made no complaint, but in order to gratify the Church of Rome.—Mr. WHALLEY also opposed the Bill. On a division the second reading was carried by 152 to 122. The adjourned debate on the second reading of the Assurance Registration (Ireland) Bill was then resumed.—Mr. WHITESIDE reviewed, at considerable length, the system of the Registration Office in Ireland under the existing law and practice. The Bill, he said, contained so many novelties, so many difficulties and perplexities, that it never could become the law of the land. Upon a division the second reading of the Bill was carried by 56 to 41. On the question that the Bill be committed, a conversation arose upon a complaint by Colonel DUNNE that no answer had been given to Mr. WHITESIDE. The Gardens in Towns Protection Bill was read a third time and passed.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL obtained leave to bring in a Bill to consolidate and amend the Church Building and New Parishes Acts. After a few words from Mr. F. POWELL, Mr. W. MARTIN obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the law relating to Municipal Elections.

TUESDAY.—The Polish Amnesty.—In answer to Mr. DENMAN Lord PALMERSTON said that more than one version had appeared of the amnesty, and that different interpretations had been put upon it, some giving it the comprehensive sense of suspending the execution of political prisoners and others a more limited and restricted meaning. All he could say was, that he hoped the larger interpretation was the just one. It was impossible not to feel that the Russian Government, and their troops in Poland, had committed so many acts of ferocious violence, that there was a great arrear of mercy and indulgence due from that Government, to set them right with the public opinion of Europe. The New Ministerial Appointments.—Mr. GRIFFITH asked whether the interests of the public service were not likely to suffer injury in consequence of three of the four Chief Secretaries of State being members of the House of Peers.—Lord PALMERSTON said that it had been his endeavour to make such arrangements as would combine as many advantages and as few objections as possible. It might be desirable that the distribution of Secretaries of State between the two Houses of Parliament should be different, but he was persuaded that the House of Commons would not experience any inconvenience from the present arrangement.—Mr. ROEBUCK inquired whether the Government had determined upon any line of conduct with respect to the Proceedings of Admiral Wilkes, and whether he would state to the House what that conduct would be. If it was inconvenient for the noble lord to answer the question offhand, he might consider it as a notice for Thursday.—Lord PALMERSTON, amid general laughter, said he would rather take the question as a notice. Offices of Woods and Works.—Mr. A. SMITH moved for a select committee to inquire into the department of woods, forests, and land revenues, the office of works and public buildings, and the operation of the Act by which these were constituted as two separate departments.—Mr. FREDERICK PEEL opposed the motion on the ground that the matters to which the motion referred had already been inquired into by a select committee as lately as the year 1854, who had reported satisfactorily. After a few words from Mr. CAIRD, the motion was negatived without a division.—Sir G. GREY moved for leave to bring in a Bill for the Amalgamation of the City of London Police with the Metropolitan Police. In doing so, he said that the measure was by no means to be regarded as one of a penal character consequent upon the events of the 7th March, although undoubtedly those events showed a great want of order and management, and an inadequate appreciation on the part of the authorities of the City of the nature of the emergency that was likely to arise. But a Royal Commission and committees of the House of Commons had reported in favour of the scheme contemplated by the Bill, and successive Governments had given it their approval. It was, in fact, rendered necessary by the altered circumstances of the metropolis, which in population and area had far outgrown the limits of the City. In this respect, therefore, the Corporation of the City of London differed from every other in the kingdom. Its position was entirely exceptional, inasmuch as it had a separate jurisdiction independent of the surrounding district; so that no other corporation need be under any apprehension that the measure could possibly be applied to them.—Mr. CRAWFORD said he would not oppose the motion for leave to bring in the Bill, but he intended at the proper time to move as an amendment that it be read a second time that day six months.—Alderman SIDNEY opposed the Bill, and charged the whole blame of the confusion on the 7th of March to the Government, who had interfered with the ancient privileges of the corporation, and had restricted their free action.—The LORD MAYOR took a similar view, and contended that the Bill was uncalled for and unconstitutional, and that if it were carried it would strike a heavy blow against the principle of local self-government.—Lord ALFRED PAGET thought it most advisable that there should not be two separate and distinct police authorities in the metropolis. He would rather see the whole metropolis under the control of the City than that the present state of things should continue.—Mr. NORRIS, Sir GEORGE BOWYER, Mr. BOVILL, Mr. HIBBERT, and Sir H. BRUCE opposed the Bill; Mr. AYRTON, Sir. H. STRACEY, and Mr. Serjeant PIGOTT supported it. After a short reply from Sir G. GREY, the motion for leave to bring in the Bill was agreed to. The Bill was then read a first time. Leave was given to Sir H. BRUCE to bring in a Bill on the subject of the Removal of Destitute Persons from England and Scotland to Ireland

WEDNESDAY.—Mr. P. W. MARTIN moved the second reading of the Innkeepers' Liability (No. 1) Bill, the object of which, he said, was to amend the present state of the law relating to the liability of hotel and innkeepers for the goods of their guests. The increased facilities for travelling which the railway system supplied had of late years occasioned a vast influx of visitors into railway hotels particularly, and had been accompanied by numerous robberies of luggage, the value of which had been recovered from the landlords, who were held to be responsible, whatever might have been the negligence of their guests. In many cases, however, the alleged losses had proved to be fictitious, and yet the innkeeper had no remedy against fraud. The Bill proposed to leave the law as it stood, so far as to leave hotel keepers liable for the loss of all goods not exceeding the value of 20*l.*, but if above that amount the guest should incur the risk, or place the property in the hands of the landlord, who was to provide proper fastenings for his doors.—Major EDWARDS supported the Bill, which he thought had long been required for the protection alike of the innkeeper and the public.—Sir F. GOLDSMID moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. He admitted that a remedy for the evil complained of was required, but he argued that the remedy provided was not the right one, whilst the Bill was false in its preamble and vague and general in its enactments. The amendment was seconded by Mr. PACKE.—Mr. ROEBUCK supported the Bill on the ground that it sought a good end, and that it did so by just and proper means, and would not do harm to any one. The Bill was also supported by Mr. LOCKE and Sir G. BOWYER, and the amendment having been negatived without a division, it was read a second time and ordered to be committed. The Innkeeper's Liability Bill (No. 2) was withdrawn.—On the motion of Mr COLLINS, the Elections during Recess Bill, the object of which is to provide that the notice to the Speaker of a vacancy during the recess should be four days only instead of 14, so that the new election may take place within 20 days after the vacancy, was read a second time.—Mr COLLINS moved the second reading of the Borough Residence Uniform Measurement Bill, the object of which was that the seven-mile measurement shall be made not from a uniform place within the borough, but from any point within its circumference.—Mr. Serjeant PIGOTT opposed the Bill on the ground that no case had been made out in its favour, and moved, as an amendment, that it be read a second time that day six months.—Mr. BRUCE, Mr. KNIGHT, Mr. BUTT, and Mr. P. BOUVERIE also opposed the Bill, which was supported by Mr. BENTINCK, Mr. WHITESIDE, and Lord LOVAINE. On a division, the motion for the second reading was carried by 171 to 135. The Bill was then read a second time. The Marriages, &c., (Ireland) Bill, on the motion of Sir E. GROGAN, passed through committee, and was ordered to be reprinted. The Metropolitan and City of London Police Bill was brought up and read a first time.

THURSDAY.—Seizure of British Ships by American Cruisers.—On the motion for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. ROEBUCK called attention to the proceedings of Admiral Wilkes in the West Indian waters. At the outbreak of the civil war his feeling at first had been in favour of the North, but the conduct of the Federal Government had been such as to prove that they were not only unfit to govern themselves, but any civilised community. We had been subjected, he said, to every species of violent language, to insinuation as well as accusation, and had been compelled to call the Northern Government to account for one insolent, arrogant, and overbearing act. He called upon the Government to vindicate the honour and to protect the commerce of this country. He might be told, he said, that this might lead to war, and he was prepared for war.—Lord PALMERSTON said the matter, which was of a very grave nature, was receiving due consideration from her Majesty's Government, but he was not prepared to state the result.—Mr. BENTINCK called attention to the proceedings of Mr. Adams, the American Minister, and inquired whether it was the intention of the Government to take any steps in the matter.—Mr. PEACOCKE moved for the correspondence on the subject of the conveyance of ship letter mails on vessels bound for Matamoras.—Mr. LAYARD declined to produce papers on a subject still under the consideration of the Government.—Mr. R. W. CRAWFORD deprecated the continuance of the discussion after the statement of the Prime Minister.—Mr. NEWDEGATE censured the language of Mr. Roebuck.—Sir H. CAIRNS said that the course taken by the Government appeared to leave it an open question whether an American cruiser might not seize with impunity the mail packets between Dover and Calais.—Mr. MALINS said it was humiliating to see the commerce of the country carried on by the sufferance of a foreign Power.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL denied that the Government had conceded to the Federal States the right of seizing English vessels conveying mails to neutral ports on the ground that they might include correspondence considered to be contraband.—Lord R. CECIL said that while her Majesty's Government were procrastinating the American Minister was master of the situation.—Mr. OSBORNE described the debate as mischievous, and recommended the House to leave the matter in the hands of Lord Palmerston.—The motion for papers was then withdrawn, and the House went into Committee of Supply. Memorial to the Prince Consort.—Lord PALMERSTON, having passed an eloquent eulogium upon the merits of the Prince Consort, moved that the sum of 50,000*l.* be granted to her Majesty to complete the national Memorial to the late Prince. He explained that the proposed memorial was to take the shape of an "Eleanor Cross," to be erected on the site of the Exhibition of 1851 in Hyde Park, and that the estimated cost was 110,000*l.*, of which the public had already subscribed nearly 60,000*l.*—Mr. DISRAELI approved of the course taken by the Government in this matter, and said that the feeling of the public was in favour of a great metropolitan memorial, which would appeal to the sentiments of the country, and represent as much as possible the character and career of the Prince. After some discussion the vote was unanimously agreed to. Kertch Prize Money.—On the motion of Lord PALMERSTON the sum of 85,000*l.* was voted as prize money for the capture of Kertch during the Russian war—the amount to be divided in the proportion of two-thirds to the naval and one third to the military forces engaged on that occasion.—On the motion of Mr. PEEL a sum not exceeding 1,000,000*l.* was voted to pay off and discharge Exchequer Bonds payable on the 8th of May next.—Income Tax.—Mr. ROEBUCK moved that, in the opinion of the House, the tax imposed on precarious incomes should be lower than that imposed on permanent incomes.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER resisted the motion on the ground that, whilst it would remove one or two anomalies, it would introduce three or four others, and leave the grievance complained of in even a worse position than before.—After some discussion, in which Mr. MALINS, Mr. HUBBARD, and Mr. MARSH took part, the motion was withdrawn, and the House went into Committee of Ways and Means.—The resolutions for reducing the Duty on Tea to 1*s.* per pound, for continuing the Sugar Duties at the present rates until the 1st of August, 1864, and for reducing the Income Tax to 7*d.* in the pound, were considered and agreed to.—The House having resumed, the Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill was read a second time. The Bakehouse Regulation Bill passed through committee. The Vaccination (Ireland) Bill was read a second time. The Telegraphs Bill, as amended, passed through Committee. The Local Government Supplemental Bill, and the Land Drainage (Provisional Orders) Bill were read a second time.

FRIDAY.—The Albert Testimonial.—Mr. CONINGHAM gave notice, that on the resolution for the Albert Testimonial he should inquire whether the proposed amount was sufficient, and should move that the vote be postponed until inquiries had been made on that subject. Amalgamation of the City and Metropolitan Police.—Mr. HENLEY gave notice that on the motion for the second reading of this Bill he should move that it be read a second time that day six months. America.—Lord A. CHURCHILL asked whether merchant ships in the prosecution of a voyage between neutral ports would be legally justified in defending themselves by arms from capture by the Federal cruisers.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL said that vessels would not be justified in thus defending themselves by arms. That decision was laid down in the well known case of the Swedish convoys. Mileage Duties.—In answer to a question from Sir C. DOUGLAS, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he should abandon the duties on carriers proposed in his recent Budget. [Left sitting.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

The Federal Government and the Shipping Interest.—A deputation of shippers and merchants interested in the trade with Mexico had an interview with Earl Russell on the 16th inst., to call attention to the treatment of the officers and crew of the Peterhoff, and to represent to the Government that Mr. Adams, the United States' Minister in London, has taken upon himself to issue licences to British vessels to trade with Matamoras, the privilege however being only accorded to those traders who carry arms and ammunition to the Mexicans to aid them in their resistance to the French. They further stated that a vessel called the Sea Queen, bound for Matamoras without any contraband of war on board, is now detained by the owners at Falmouth, until they receive some assurance of protection from the Government, and that the vessel has received on board her Majesty's mails, the owner being bound by the Mercantile Marine Act to carry them under a penalty. The deputation suggested that as evil-disposed persons might take advantage of this compulsory Act to despatch letters, which, in the event of seizure would implicate the vessels, a mail agent should be put on board all vessels which carried Post Office letter bags. Earl Russell in reply said that the Government were desirous of affording such protection to the merchants as they were legally justified in doing, and added that he would consider the propriety of acting on the suggestion. On Tuesday it was announced to the owners of the Sea Queen that the Government declined to send a mail agent with vessels lading to Mexico, and that the Postmaster-General at Lord Russell's recommendation will for the present relieve vessels proceeding to Matamoras from the obligation of carrying the mails.

The City Police.—A meeting of the Masters and Wardens of the various livery companies in the City was held on Tuesday in the Mansion House to consider the Government plan for the amalgamation of the City and Metropolitan Police. The Lord Mayor, who had called the meeting, took the chair, and the speakers were Mr. Cubitt, M.P., Mr. Underwood, Mr. Serjeant Payne, Alderman and Sheriff Lawrence, Mr. Greenaway, and Mr. Evans. The feeling against the proposed amalgamation was strong and unanimous, and the following resolution was passed with acclamation :—

"That in the opinion of this Meeting the attempt on the part of Sir George Grey to introduce a Bill, having for its object to deprive the City of London of the control of its own police, is destructive of the principles of local self-government, and this meeting therefore pledges itself to use all constitutional means to resist the same ; and that it be a recommendation to the whole of the Livery Companies that they petition separately against this proposed measure."

Lancashire Relief Fund.—At the meeting of the Mansion House Committee on Friday the financial statement showed the total amount received in aid of the fund up to the previous evening to be 480,346*l*. 16*s*., of which 384,000*l*. had been remitted to the distressed districts. The total sum received during the week was 2175*l*.; of which 649*l*. 4*s*. was from home, and 1,525*l*. 16*s*. from colonial sources. A deputation from the Australian Emigration Society, headed by Mr. Childers, M.P., had an interview with the committee, and stated that the Society had subscribed 5000*l*. from their own funds, for the purpose of assisting the Lancashire and Cheshire operatives to emigrate, and applied for a grant of 2000*l*. from the funds of the Mansion House Committee to supplement this grant. The committee, after some discussion, resolved to set aside 5000*l*. to be used exclusively for the purposes of emigration, out of which amount they granted the Australian Society 1000*l*., as the largest sum which they could at present give, seeing that in all probability they would have other applications. On Monday the Lord Mayor, in announcing this decision from the bench of the Mansion House Police Court, expressed his belief that the time had come when some other expedient than the continued dependence on the public bounty ought to be tried with a view to the permanent support of the destitute people, and that the most feasible and effectual remedy lay in plans of emigration, well considered and carefully carried out by practical men conversant with the labour requirements of each dependency, and able to form a just opinion as to the aptitude of the Lancashire cotton spinners for colonial life in its different phases. The committee, he said, having set apart a sum of 5000*l*. to encourage emigration from the cotton spinning districts, he now publicly called attention to the matter in order to state that if the public were of opinion that it was desirable to assist such a movement, he should be happy to receive contributions to a separate fund for the special object of assisting the unemployed hands to emigrate.

The Proposed Lines of Railway through Greenwich Park. — The reports of Professor Airy and Admiral Washington on the proposed lines of railway through Greenwich Park have just been published. Professor Airy states that after making all due allowance for the sedative effect of the tunnel covering, a distance of 600 to 700 feet may be regarded "as critical for decision on the probable effects of railway tremor on the operations of the Observatory. Within that distance very general inconvenience would be produced ; beyond it the inconvenience, though sensible, would probably not be serious." Entering into detail as to the respective plans, he concludes that "the effects of the South London, Greenwich, and Woolwich would be very troublesome, and the effects of the London, Chatham, and Dover, though sensible, would not be very troublesome." Admiral Washington says that as any railway passing within 1000 feet of the Observatory would disturb the operations, he recommends that the Lords of the Admiralty should refuse their assent to both the lines.

Consecration of a New Catholic Church.—Cardinal Wiseman last week solemnly opened and consecrated the new Roman Catholic church which has for some time past been in course of erection in Hatton Wall. The church is a handsome and convenient structure, and is dedicated to St. Peter. The Cardinal was received by several bishops and a large number of priests, all in full sacerdotal vestments. Pontifical High Mass was celebrated by Dr. Morris, Bishop of Troy ; the sermon being preached by Dr. Gillis, Bishop of Limyra vicar apostolic of the eastern division of Scotland. In the evening a sermon was preached by Canon Oakley, of Islington, formerly Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford.

Case of Colonel Waugh.—The Registrar of Bankruptcy on Saturday had before him for investigation the case of Colonel Waugh. It appeared that he had not surrendered to his bankruptcy, but venturing over to this country was arrested by a creditor for debt, and lodged in Whitecross Street prison. As he had not surrendered to his bankruptcy the Registrar declined to interfere, and the colonel remains in prison.

Scientific Balloon Ascent.—On Saturday Messrs. Glaisher and Coxwell made another balloon ascent from the Crystal Palace, and reached an altitude of 4½ miles. The wind was due north, and the balloon was carried so rapidly towards the coast that the aëronauts were compelled to make such a rapid descent that most of the instruments were broken, and they had a narrow escape from falling into the sea. As it was, by dint of coming to the ground at more than express railway speed, they were just able to alight on the extreme verge of the land near the railway station at Newhaven.

The Public Health.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week that ended on Saturday, April 18, were 1437. The average number in the corresponding week of the last 10 years, corrected for increase of population, was 1283. The present return is therefore 154 above the average. During the week the births of 1052 boys and 1028 girls, in all 2080 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1853-62 the average number was 1977.

Provincial.

Holyhead.—On Friday morning during a thick fog the Telegraph steamer, from Dublin, struck on a rocky islet south of the Stack Lighthouse, near Holyhead. Her fore compartment immediately filled with water, but the bulkhead prevented its going further. Captain Warren, who was on the bridge when the ship struck, was thrown to the deck by the shock, and sustained some injury. Still he kept on deck, and directed the passengers, more than 200 in number, to be placed on the rock. In consequence of the calmness of the night this difficult operation was successfully completed, though each person had to descend from the ship by means of a ladder. The steamer subsequently got off, and reached Holyhead. The passengers had to remain on the rock till daylight, when a boat from the neighbourhood carried them in small parties to the mainland. They had there again some difficult places to scale, and three miles to walk to the town.

Leeds.—On Monday night a public meeting was held in this town, to express sympathy with Poland. The Mayor took the chair, and was supported by the members of the Town Council. General Zamoyski addressed the meeting. Resolutions were unanimously adopted protesting against Russian barbarities, recommending the British Government to withdraw its sanction to Russian dominion in Poland, and to suspend diplomatic intercourse with St. Petersburg.

Liverpool.—The steamer Alexandra, alleged to have been built for a Confederate cruiser, has been exchequered and Messrs. Fawcett, Preston, & Co., her owners, and Messrs. Miller, her builders, will probably in a few days be summoned before the local magistrates on the charge of designing to infringe the Foreign Enlistment Act. The solicitors for the defendants, having applied to the Mayor for an inspection of the depositions, were informed by the Town Clerk that he was instructed by Mr. Waddington, of the Home Office, that the law officers of the Crown advised that the application ought not to be complied with.

Neath.—On Thursday week, as a man named Watkins was walking across a footpath towards the new works at Maesteg, a man, apparently a tramp, overtook him and demanded a shilling. On being refused, he seized him with ungovernable fury, brutally beat him, and then cut his throat from ear to ear. He then decamped across a mountain towards this town, where he was captured. He proves to be a lunatic, who had just escaped from a neighbouring asylum. His victim is in the greatest danger, but hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Penzance.—A shocking accident occurred on Saturday at Botallack tin and copper mine, near the Land's End. The mine is one of the largest in the county, a large portion of its workings being under the bed of the Atlantic ; and it is entered by a diagonal shaft; 180 fathoms deep, which slopes down at the steep angle of 35 degrees. The ores and the workmen are drawn up this slope by a waggon attached by a chain to the steam-engine at the top. On Saturday evening 10 men were coming up in a waggon, and had nearly reached the top when the chain snapped ; and the men losing their presence of mind and omitting to apply the breaks, were hurled to the bottom and killed on the spot.

Plymouth.—A court martial was held on Tuesday, on board the Royal Adelaide, guard-ship, in Hamoaze, to try Lieutenant Cavendish Gore Harvey, of the Blenheim, 60, coast guard service, at Milford, on charges of drunkenness. The Court found him guilty of "incapacity in the performance of his duty," and sentenced him to be discharged from the service.

Portsmouth.—The court-martial on Captain Hillyar, C.B., and Lieutenant Lillingston, of her Majesty's ship Cadmus, was brought to a conclusion on Tuesday, after having extended over 14 days. The Court acquitted Captain Hillyar of the charges of cruelty and oppression, and also of ordering punishments not to be entered in the defaulters' book, but found him guilty of an act to the prejudice of good order and naval discipline in not making himself acquainted with the punishments going on in the Cadmus while he was in command, and seeing them entered in the defaulters' book, for which the Court adjudged him to be severely reprimanded. The Court found the charge against Lieutenant Lillingston partly proved, inasmuch as he had been guilty of unofficerlike conduct in ordering punishments to be inflicted upon Robert Baker and other boys of the Cadmus which were not authorised by her Majesty's regulations. The Court adjudged him to be dismissed her Majesty's service, but in consideration of his zeal and ability recommended him to the favourable consideration of the Admiralty.

Preston.—Another disturbance took place on Wednesday in the manufacturing districts. The workpeople in this town were dissatisfied with the work allotted to them, and though they all assembled at the stoneyard, not more than 100 commenced work. The guardians of the poor refused to pay any but those who did their allotted tasks, and the consequence was that a mob assembled in the streets, broke the windows of the police office, and burnt the obnoxious guardians in effigy. The military were sent for from Fulwood barracks, but were not called upon to interfere.

Radnor.—The funeral of Sir George Cornewall Lewis took place on Saturday in the family vault at Old Radnor. Among the mourners were the Earl of Clarendon, Earl Russell, Earl de Grey and Ripon, the Right Hon. C. Pelham Villiers, Mr. Vernon Harcourt, Mr. Lister, Sir Velters Cornewall, Sir Gilbert Lewis, and Mr. Herbert Lewis. About 100 horsemen preceded the hearse, followed by the carriage of deceased and those of the mourners and the gentry of the neighbourhood. The coffin was of oak, enclosing a shell, and covered with black cloth, having a brass plate with the following inscription :—"The Right Hon. Sir G. C. Lewis, Bart., died April 13, 1863, aged 57 years." An immense concourse of people attended the funeral, and business was suspended in Hereford, Kington, Knighton, Presteign, Radnor, and other towns during the early part of the day.

Ireland.

Serious Accident to Lord Massareene.—On Saturday morning Lord Massareene met with an accident at Antrim Castle, which will most probably terminate fatally. He was standing on a high embankment tying a young tree to a stake, when the stake broke, and he fell a great depth on some large stones. He sustained a fracture or dislocation of the spine, resulting in total paralysis of the lower half of the body, a broken leg, and a dislocated foot. The latest accounts state that his mind is unaffected, and that he suffers comparatively little pain, but his recovery is hopeless. Several eminent surgeons from Dublin, Antrim, and Lisburn, are attending him.

Destruction of Rockingham House.—On Wednesday morning Rockingham House, the residence of Lord Lorton, was reduced to ashes by fire. The Hon. Mrs. King had a narrow escape. Miss Roe, her maid, was seriously burned. The house, it is said, was insured for 30,000*l*.

Federal Recruiting in Ireland.—A few weeks since a large number of recruits were embarked for America by the Federal agents in this country, under the pretence that they were engaged as navvies for the Chicago Railway. It is stated that any further shipment of emigrants, under similar circumstances, will be prevented by the Government.

Agrarian Murder in Donegal.—Adam Grierson, formerly a steward of Mr. Adair, of Glenveagh, was fired at on the 10th inst., and so dangerously wounded, that he died on the following Monday. A man named Bradley was promptly arrested by the police, and identified by Grierson as the person who fired the shot. The jury at the inquest returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against the prisoner, who was committed for trial at the next Lifford Assizes. He is the son of one of the men evicted about two years ago, when 30 or 40 cabins were levelled, and Grierson superintended the operation. The murdered man was married and had a large family. He was about leaving for Australia, but delayed his departure owing to his wife's confinement.

Murder in Monaghan.—A murder was committed on Sunday week within three miles of the town of Monaghan. The victim was a quiet, inoffensive man, named Greenan, who had been at service in the chapel, and who had his passage paid to go to America with a young wife. The persons who murdered him are two brothers named O'Neill, with whom he had some dispute about the running made by dogs at a late coursing match. For this slight cause they waylaid him on his return from chapel, and beat him to death—one, with the swingle-tree of a plough; the other, with a large shoulder-stone from a neighbouring quarry. The constabulary have not succeeded in arresting the murderers.

Railways.

Accident to an Express Train.—On Tuesday the Great Western express which left Birmingham for Birkenhead at 8.55 suddenly broke down on the Bradley embankment. The train was running at about 30 miles an hour, when the massive crank axle of the engine broke and liberated the driving wheel, which fell upon the rails. The driver fortunately noticed the accident immediately, and brought the train to a stand within a distance of 300 yards before any of the carriages ran off the line. The passengers therefore escaped without any injury. The line was blocked for about three hours, when the disabled engine was taken to Wolverhampton.

Law.

Court of Queen's Bench.—Earl of Cardigan v. The Hon. Colonel Calthorpe. This was an application for a criminal information against the Hon. Colonel Calthorpe for a libel on the Earl of Cardigan. The libel relates to the question of his lordship's conduct in leading the Light Brigade at Balaklava. Colonel Calthorpe, in his "Letters from Head Quarters," had published a statement to the effect that Lord Cardigan had rode off the field before the troops reached the Russian guns, though several officers and men had deposed to the fact that he rode at their head through the Russian batteries; and now that the history of the war by Mr. Kinglake is reviving attention to the matter, Lord Cardigan wishes his conduct in that affair to be set right. The Court granted a rule to show cause, subject to the risk of having it hereafter discharged, on the technical point, that the application has been made too late in respect to time.

Monday, April 20.

We have a larger supply of Beasts, and trade is slow. Last Monday's prices are not realised; but those of Thursday last are pretty freely given. Lambs and Calves are selling about the same as on Thursday. From Germany and Holland there are 530 Beasts, 1630 Sheep, and 108 Calves; from Scotland, 600 Beasts; from Ireland, 60; and 2890 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

HOPS.—Borough Market, Friday, April 24.

Messrs. Pattenden & Smith report the demand still improving for better sorts of both English and foreign Hops at slightly advanced prices.

POTATOES, Southwark, Monday, March 20.

During the past week the arrivals coastwise, by rail, and from abroad have been large for the season, which, coupled with fine sunny weather, has caused the trade to flag, and the prices of the former week have not been maintained:—The following are this day's quotations: — Yorkshire Flukes, per ton, 120s. to 140s.; ditto Regents, 100s. to 110s.; do. Seedlings, 95s. to 100s.; do. Rocks, 85s. to 90s.; Kent and Essex Regents, 110s to 120s.; Perth, Forfar, and Fife ditto., 70s. to 95s.; ditto Rocks, 70s. to 80s.; ditto Reds, 60s. to 65s.; French Whites, 50s. to 55s.; Belgian do., 45s. to 50s.

MARK LANE.—Monday, April 20.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was small, and although in tolerable condition met a very slow sale at barely the prices of this day se'nnight. There was a somewhat improved attendance of country millers; nevertheless the sale of foreign Wheat was limited, and new red Baltic must be written the turn lower. Barley was 1s. per qr. cheaper. Beans and Peas brought last week's quotations. With a large supply of Oats the trade was dull, and the rates of this day se'nnight were scarcely supported. Flour was neglected.

Friday, April 24.

The weather since the 17th instant has been fine, with the exception of a few showers on two or three days. The Wheat trade during the past week has continued in very much the same state as the previous one, the demand being very limited, but no alteration has occurred in prices. Oats were slightly firmer, but other kinds of spring corn have not undergone any alteration in value. Flour continues to be neglected, and previous rates were obtained with difficulty. Since Friday last 16 vessels have been reported off the coast. In consequence of the very few arrivals very little business has been done in floating cargoes. Egyptian Wheat has recovered 1s. per qr., and all other descriptions of grain remained steady. In Paris (April 23), Wheat and Flour have remained a very slow sale, and without alteration in prices. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 19,220 cwts. The arrivals of English grain this week are almost nil, moderate of foreign Wheat and Barley, good of Oats, and fair of Flour. The market was thinly attended; the value of English Wheat was unaltered from Monday, but foreign, more particularly American, was held with more firmness, and purchases could scarcely be effected at the prices current on that day. Business to some extent was done at the close. Barley, Beans, and Peas were steady at Monday's quotations. For Oats there was a better inquiry, and in some instances an advance of 6d. per qr. was obtained both for corn on the spot and to arrive.

Liverpool, April 21.—At our market to-day we had a fair attendance, and a fair business was transacted in Wheat at Friday's prices. Flour also met a fair sale at full prices for American. Indian Corn in good request and fully 3d. per qr. dearer. Egyptian Beans very firm. Oats, slow. Peas and Barley unchanged. Oatmeal in better demand.

GRAY'S OVAL TUBULAR BOILER.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, Class IX., No. 2119.

Mr. GRAY begs to call the attention of the Nobility, Gentry, Nurserymen, Gardeners, &c., to his acknowledged by practical judges to be a great improvement on every form of Tubular Boiler yet introduced. It has proved itself superior to all other Boilers for quickness of action and economy of Fuel, doing its work with one-third less the amount required by any other.

Extract from Report in Gardeners' Chronicle of International Exhibition, May 24, page 476.

"The upright form of Boiler is usually made on a circular plan, but the oval form given to Mr. GRAY'S variety of it is said to be preferable in consequence of its bringing the tubes in closer contact with the fire. The usual form of a furnace being a parallelogram rather than a square, it seems feasible that the Boilers on the oval plan should bring the tubes more completely within range of the burning fuel; and this being so the change, though a slight one, is no doubt an improvement.

They are made of all sizes, which, with prices, may be had on application.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, CLASS IX., 2191.

PRIZE MEDAL For CONSERVATORY, DOUBLE CHAMBER CORRUGATED and HORIZONTAL TUBULAR BOILERS.

J. TAYLOR AND SONS call the attention of the Nobility and Gentry to the very superior manner in which they erect CONSERVATORIES, VINERIES, FORCING, FRUIT, and PLANT HOUSES of every description, combining the most modern improvements with elegance of design and durability of materials and workmanship.

Our VENTILATING APPARATUS for the Roofs and Fronts of Horticultural Buildings, &c., supersedes any now in use, as being the most simple and effective in its action.

Our system of HEATING APPARATUS for Churches, Public Buildings, Mansions, Schools, Offices, Baths, Horticultural Buildings, &c., is particularly worthy of notice, we having for many years devoted especial attention to this branch. The great variety of work which has passed through our hands has gained us such experience in the mechanical details as to insure success and entire satisfaction in any undertaking entrusted to our care.

The superiority of our DOUBLE-CHAMBER CORRUGATED and HORIZONTAL TUBULAR BOILERS has caused them to be acknowledged as the best now in use, being both powerful and rapid in action.

PATENT GUTTA PERCHA SOLES.—Important to Gardeners.—The Gutta Percha Company have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of the following letter from G. Glenny, Esq., the celebrated Florist:—

"Gentlemen,—I have worn Gutta Percha Soles and Heels these two years, and being so much in a garden as I necessarily am in all weathers, and with the ground in all states, I would on no account be without them. As a matter of economy I would recommend Gardeners to use them, for they may repair the worn part at all times by warming the material at the fire, and pressing it from the thick parts to the worn parts, as easily as if it were so much dough. I think it the duty of all persons who must occasionally wet their feet to adopt a material that completely defies damp. Many a gardener would escape colds and rheumatism by the use of Gutta Percha Soles. Your obedient servant, G. Glenny."

Every variety of Gutta Percha articles, such as Mill Bands Tubing, Soles, Sheet, Pump Buckets, Fire Buckets, Bosses, Union Joints, Flasks, Bottles, Bowls, Chamber Vessels, Toilet Trays, Sponge Bags, Curtain Rings, Galvanic Batteries, Calbotype trays, &c., manufactured by the Gutta Percha Company, and sold by their wholesale dealers in town or country.

From the Quarterly Review, April 1863.
"In short, the 'English Cyclopædia' is a work that, as a whole, has no superior, and very few equals of its kind; that, taken by itself, supplies the place of a small library, and, used in a large library, is found to present many points of information that are sought in vain in any other Cyclopædia in the English language."

From the Times, Oct. 4, 1861.
"As regards the contents of this Cyclopædia, it is, however, impossible to give any sufficient impression of an aggregate which includes somewhere or other all the information generally require every conceivable topic. A good Encyclopædia, as every one knows, is a compendious library, and though students may require further information upon some points than its summaries contain, even students will be surprised in this instance to find the materials at their disposal when they once adopt the habit of resorting to its pages. For all practical purposes a large proportion of the articles may be said to be exhaustive; they are accurate to a degree which will strike even those who know what pains have been taken to render them so; and as they are concise as well as full, every column being rammed like a sky-rocket, the owner has a reservoir out of all proportion to the library shelves it will occupy."

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday, on the order for the second reading of the Qualification for Offices Abolition Bill, the Earl of DERBY moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. On a division the amendment was carried by a majority of 69 to 52. The Bill was therefore lost. On Monday Earl RUSSELL stated that he had consulted the law officers of the Crown, but that it was not desirable at that moment to make public their opinion with reference to the instructions issued by Mr. SEWARD for the guidance of the naval officers of the United States in the capture of British merchant vessels carrying HER MAJESTY'S mails from this country to neutral ports. On Tuesday the Alkali Works Regulation Bill, the Local Government Act (1858) Amendment Bill, the New Zealand Boundaries Bill, and the Offences (South Africa) Bill, were read a third time and passed. On Thursday Earl RUSSELL stated that he had received a despatch from Lord LYONS announcing that Mr. SEWARD had decided that the Peterhoff and her cargo should be sent before a prize court, but that her mail bags should at once be forwarded to their destination without being opened. The Drainage of Land (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed. The Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill was read a second time.

In the Commons on Friday Mr. HORSFALL called attention to the seizure of the Alexandra at Liverpool, and condemned the act as the deliberate infliction of a serious injury on the owners, who denied that the vessel was fitted out with the view of being employed in the Confederate service. A long discussion ensued, in which the ATTORNEY-GENERAL and SOLICITOR-GENERAL defended the course the Government had pursued. The House then went into Committee of Supply. On the Report of the vote for the Prince Consort Memorial, Mr. CONINGHAM moved that it be postponed, on the ground that the sum proposed would be insufficient, and that the House would probably be asked for an additional grant. Lord PALMERSTON having stated that no further vote would be asked for, the motion was withdrawn and the Report agreed to. On Monday Mr. FERRAND moved a resolution that it is the duty of the Government to take into consideration, without delay, the measures necessary to relieve the distress in the cotton manufacturing districts, so that the people may no longer continue unemployed. Mr. POTTER moved as an amendment that an Address be presented to HER MAJESTY to appoint a Royal Commission to inquire into the present state of the cotton districts, and to report on the best made of relieving the existing distress. Mr. VILLIERS objected both to the motion and the amendment. A Royal commission could give us no information we did not already possess, and emigration was a desperate resource, to which we were not yet reduced. Lancashire and Cheshire could furnish, in drainage and other works, employment to 100,000 men for two winters. The Government had therefore determined to send down competent persons to inquire and report what works could be at once undertaken, and he hoped that in three weeks a sufficiency of employment could be found. After a long discussion both the motion and the amendment were withdrawn, the feeling of the House being that the matter ought to be left in the hands of the Government. The House then went into Committee of Ways and Means, and proceeded with the consideration of the proposals in the Budget. The resolution to impose a license of 18*l*. 1*s*. upon clubs was opposed by Mr. HENLEY, Sir W. JOLLIFFE, and Mr. M. SMITH, but was carried on a division by 143 to 111. On Tuesday General LINDSAY moved an address to the QUEEN, praying for a commission to inquire into the claims of the colonels in the army who were promoted for distinguished service in the Crimean war, and had been deprived of their position by the commission of 1858. After some discussion, Lord PALMERSTON offered to issue a commission if the motion were withdrawn. On this understanding General LINDSAY withdrew his motion. Mr. A. MILLS moved for papers respecting the military defence of Canada and New Zealand, with the view of showing that a full share of the expense should be borne by the colonies. Mr. C. FORTESCUE described the policy of the Colonial Office on the subject, and after some discussion the motion was withdrawn. Sir J. ELPHINSTONE moved an Address for a Commission to consider the best mode of constructing the iron-clad ships which are to compose the future Navy of England. Lord R. MONTAGU moved as an amendment that a body of scientific men should be employed to take part in the councils of the Admiralty, and assist that Board in the designs of ships. Lord C. PAGET opposed the motion, and after some discussion the motion and the amendment were both withdrawn. Mr. KER SEYMER moved that the analysis of evidence appended to the report of the select committee on the sewage of towns be cancelled on the ground of informality. After some remarks by Dr. BRADY, the motion was agreed to. On Wednesday Sir J. TRELAWNY moved the second reading of the Church-rates Abolition Bill. Mr. G. HARDY moved that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. On a division the amendment was carried by a majority of 10, the numbers being 285 to 275. The Bill was therefore lost. On Thursday the Customs' and Inland Revenue Bill was read a second time, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER postponing until Monday a full exposition of the details of the Government proposition in regard to the tax on charities. The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill passed through Committee. The Telegraph Bill was read a third time and passed. On the order for going into Committee on the Borough Residence Uniform Measurement Bill, Mr. BOUVERIE moved that the Bill be committed that day six months. On a division the motion was carried by 182 to 139. The Bill was therefore lost.

Accounts from the United States inform us that the Federal attack on Charleston ended in a crushing defeat, which left the whole squadron of iron-clads so shattered and crippled that any renewal of the attempt was impossible. The Federal commander therefore abandoned the idea of repeating the attack, and subsequently withdrew his fleet to Port Royal. The siege of Vicksburg has also been abandoned, and all the expeditions sent up the Yazoo and other streams to reach the land side of that city from the Mississippi have been withdrawn. The Confederates, relieved of their apprehensions for Charleston, have resumed the offensive in North Carolina and Virginia. In the former State the Federal General FOSTER is still in a position of great peril, though a steamer has succeeded in reaching him with one regiment and supplies, while in Virginia the Confederate General WISE has captured Williamston by bombardment. The animosity against England in New York is increasing, and is said to be stimulated by the Government in order to distract attention from the repulse at Charleston.

The Prince and Princess of Wales on Tuesday evening went in state to the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, where a festival performance was given by command of the Queen, in honour of the marriage of their Royal Highnesses. The Prince and Princess, with the Ladies and Gentlemen in Waiting, appeared in full dress, and were accompanied by the Princess Helena and Prince Alfred. The Royal party went from Marlborough House in five of the Queen's carriages, with the servants in State liveries, and escorted by a detachment of Life Guards. On Wednesday afternoon their Royal Highnesses received, at Marlborough House, addresses of congratulation on their marriage from a great many of the corporate bodies in the three kingdoms; all the members of the deputations entrusted with the presentation of the addresses being in uniform or Court dress. On Thursday the Prince and Princess of Wales visited the Exhibition of the Royal Academy in Trafalgar-square. Prince Alexander and Prince Henry of Hesse dined with their Royal Highnesses at Marlborough House. In the evening the Prince and Princess of Wales, accompanied by the Princess of Hesse, honoured the performance at the Royal Italian Opera with their presence. It is rumoured that their Royal Highnesses will visit Oxford on the 16th of June, and be present at the Commemoration on the following day.

Christening of the Infant Princess.—The christening of the infant daughter of the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, took place on Monday in the Green Drawing-room, at Windsor Castle, according to the rights of the Lutheran Church. The baptism was performed in German by the Rev. Mr. Bender, Court Chaplain to the Grand Duke of Hesse, who travelled from Darmstadt specially to officiate upon the occasion. The sponsors present were the Queen, Prince Alexander of Hesse, representing the Grand Duke, the Princess Mary of Cambridge, the Prince of Wales, and Prince Henry of Hesse. The infant was named by the Queen, who held the child at the font, "Victoria Alberta Elizabeth Matilda Mary." The font was filled with water brought from the River Jordan by the Prince of Wales. After the ceremony a déjeûner was served to the visitors and great officers of State, and a dinner party was given in the evening.

The Wedding Presents.—In consequence of the great interest taken by the public in the exhibition of the wedding presents, the Prince of Wales has consented to allow the presents to remain for inspection at the South Kensington Museum until the evening of Monday next, the 4th May. The jewels, however, have all been removed.

The Cabinet.—A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street.

Parliamentary Movements—Mr. Green Price was elected on Saturday for New Radnor, in the room of the late Sir G. Lewis, without opposition. Mr. Stansfeld, the new Lord of the Admiralty, was re-elected for Halifax on Tuesday, without opposition.

The Army.—The Colonelcy of the 2d Life Guards, vacant by the death of Field Marshal Lord Seaton, has been conferred on General the Earl Beauchamp. The Colonelcy of the 10th Hussars, vacated by this appointment, has been conferred on His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The Colonelcy of the 60th Rifles, vacated by the death of Lieut.-General Paterson, has been conferred on Lieut.-General Viscount Melville.

The Navy.—In pursuance of Her Majesty's pleasure, Admirals Sir F. W. Austen, G.C.B., and Sir W. Parker, Bart, G.C.B., have been promoted to be Admirals of the Fleet.

The Volunteer Review.—Major-General Lord William Paulett has presented to the Commander-in-Chief his report on the Volunteer review at Brighton on Easter Monday. His Lordship says:—

"The different brigades were very ably commanded by officers selected from Volunteer corps. The artillery far surpassed my expectations, for on commencing I feared they would confine my movements, being heavy guns of position, some 24 and 18 pounders, but, to my surprise, they moved like field artillery, and took up different positions as required, and were most efficiently worked. The skirmishing of the infantry was particularly good, the firing being well sustained and the general movements were performed in a very soldierlike manner. From my observations during the evolutions I cannot conclude my report without stating that I consider the volunteer force a most valuable institution, in a defensible point of view, for the country.'

The Despatches Respecting Poland.—The correspondence of her Majesty's Government with the European Powers relating to the Polish insurrection was laid before Parliament. The papers are very numerous, and extend over nearly 200 pages of the blue book. Among the most important of those hitherto unpublished is the following despatch of Earl Russell, calling on Russia to fulfil her treaty obligations towards Poland:—

Earl Russell to Lord Napier.

"Foreign Office, April 10, 1863.

"My Lord,—Her Majesty's Government think it incumbent upon them to state once more to the Government of his Majesty the Emperor of Russia, the deep interest which, in common with the rest of Europe, they take in the welfare of the kingdom of Poland. The general sympathy which is felt for the Polish nation might of itself justify her Majesty's Government in making, in favour of the Polish race, an appeal to the generous and benevolent feelings of his Imperial Majesty, who has of late by various and important measures of improvement and reform, manifested an enlightened desire to promote the welfare of all classes of his subjects. But with regard to the kingdom of Poland, her Majesty's Government feel that the Government of Great Britain has a peculiar right to make its opinions known to that of his Imperial Majesty, because Great Britain having, in common with Austria, France, Prussia, Portugal, Spain, and Sweden, been a party to the treaty of Vienna of June, 1815, her Majesty's Government are entitled to interpose with regard to any matter which may appear to them to constitute a departure from the provisions and stipulations of that treaty. By the first article of that treaty the Grand Duchy of Warsaw was erected into a kingdom of Poland, to be inseparably attached to the empire of Russia under certain conditions specified in that article; and her Majesty's Government are concerned to have to say that, although the union of the kingdom to the empire has been maintained, the conditions on which that union was distinctly made to depend have not been fulfilled by the Russian Government. The Emperor Alexander, in execution of the engagements contracted by the treaty of Vienna, established in the kingdom of Poland a national representation and national institutions corresponding with the stipulations of the treaty. It is not necessary for her Majesty's Government now to observe upon the manner in which those arrangements were practically administered from that time down to the revolt in 1830. But upon the suppression of that revolt by the success of the Imperial arms, those arrangements were swept away, and a totally different order of things was by the Imperial authority established. Prince Gortschakoff argues, as his predecessors in office have on former occasions argued, that the suppression of that revolt cancelled all the engagements of Russia in the treaty of Vienna with regard to the kingdom of Poland, and left the Emperor of Russia at full liberty to deal with the Kingdom of Poland as with a conquered country, and to dispose of its people and institutions at his will. But her Majesty's Government cannot acquiesce in a doctrine which they deem so contrary to good faith, so destructive of the obligation of treaties, and so fatal to all the international ties which bind together the community of European States and Powers. If, indeed, the Emperor of Russia had held Poland as part of the original dominions of his crown, or if he had acquired it by the unassisted success of his arms, and unsanctioned by the consent of any other Power, he could have contended that might was equivalent to right, and, without listening to the dictates of generosity and justice, he might have punished a temporary revolt of a portion of his Polish subjects by depriving the whole of them and their descendants for ever of those privileges and institutions which his predecessor had deemed essential to the welfare and prosperity of the Polish kingdom. But the position of the Russian Sovereign with regard to the kingdom of Poland was entirely different. He held that kingdom by the solemn stipulation of a treaty made by him with Great Britain, Austria, France, Prussia, Portugal, Spain, and Sweden; and the revolt of the Poles could not release him from the engagements so contracted, nor obliterate the signatures by which his plenipotentiaries had concluded, and he himself had ratified, those engagements. The question, then, having arisen whether the engagements taken by Russia by the treaty of Vienna have been and are now faithfully carried into execution, her Majesty's Government, with deep regret, feel bound to say that this question must be answered in the negative. With regard to the present revolt, her Majesty's Government forbear to dwell upon that long course of action, civil, political, and military, carried on by the Russian Government within the kingdom of Poland, of which the Poles so loudly complain and to which they refer as the causes which occasioned, and in their opinion justified, their insurrection. Her Majesty's Government would rather advert to the much-wished-for termination of these lamentable troubles. What may be the final issue of this contest it is not, indeed, for her Majesty's Government to foretel; but whether the result shall be the more extended spread of the insurrection, and its assumption of dimensions not at present contemplated, or whether, as is more likely, that result shall be the ultimate success of the Imperial arms, it is clear and certain that neither result can be arrived at without a calamitous effusion of blood, a great sacrifice of human life, and an extensive devastation of property; and it is evident that even if Poland shall be reduced to subjection, the remembrance of the events of the struggle will long continue to make it the bitter enemy of Russia, and a source of weakness and of danger, instead of being an element of security and of strength. Her Majesty's Government, therefore, most earnestly intreat the Government of Russia to give their most serious attention to all the foregoing considerations; and her Majesty's Government would beg, moreover, to submit to the Imperial Government that, besides the obligations of treaties, Russia, as a member of the community of European states, has duties of comity towards other nations to fulfil. The condition of things which has now for a long course of time existed in Poland is a source of danger, not to Russia alone, but also to the general peace of Europe. The disturbances which are perpetually breaking out among the Polish subjects of his Imperial Majesty necessarily produce a serious agitation of opinion in other countries of Europe, tending to excite much anxiety in the minds of their governments, and which might, under possible circumstances, produce complications of the most serious nature. Her Majesty's Government, therefore, fervently hope that the Russian Government will so arrange these matters that peace may be restored to the Polish people, and may be established upon lasting foundations. Your lordship will read this dispatch to Prince Gortschakoff, and you will give him a copy of it.—I am, &c.,

(Signed) "Russell."

A second despatch of the same date contains the following important conversation between Earl Russell and Baron Brunnow:—

"Baron Brunnow asked me some questions as to the nature of the representations about to be made at St. Petersburgh, and when I told him that the dispatch of her Majesty's Government was chiefly founded on the non-observance of the stipulations of the treaty of Vienna, he expressed some satisfaction that we still founded our demands on the basis of that treaty. But there was one question he felt he was entitled to ask, and that was whether the communication her Majesty's Government were about to make at St. Petersburgh was of a pacific nature. I replied that it was, but that as I did not wish to mislead him I must say something more. Her Majesty's Government had no intentions that were otherwise than pacific, still less any concert with other Powers for any but pacific purposes. But the state of things might change. The present overture of her Majesty's Government might be rejected as the representation of the 2d of March had been rejected by the Imperial Government. The insurrections in Poland might continue and might assume larger proportions; the atrocities on both sides might be aggravated and extended to a wider range of country. If in such a state of affairs the Emperor of Russia were to take no steps of a conciliatory nature, dangers and complications might arise not at present in contemplation. Baron Brunnow said he could not call our former dispatch an overture. The intentions of the Emperor towards Poland were most kind and benevolent. But there were projects afloat for altering the map of Europe. In these projects compensations to Russia were included. Russia entered into none of these projects; she wanted no compensation; she held by the present territorial arrangements of Europe, and he (Baron Brunnow) trusted Great Britain would do so likewise. I said it was the wish of her Majesty's Government to do so. But Russia herself had in some cases been active in proposing and carrying into effect territorial changes. I trusted, however, that in the present case the Emperor of Russia, by granting an amnesty to those who would lay down their arms, and the benefits of free institutions to Poland, would put an end to the insurrection."

The following contains the views of the English Government on the Russian amnesty:—

Earl Russell to Lord Napier.

"Foreign Office, April 24, 1863.

"Sir,—I have received and laid before the Queen, your excellency's dispatch of the 12th inst., enclosing a copy of a manifesto on Polish affairs issued by the Emperor of Russia on the 31st of March (April 12). Her Majesty's Government have carefully and anxiously considered the contents of this document, in the hope to find in it the germ of a restoration of peace, and a hope of good government to Poland. I have to make to you the following remarks as the result of their deliberations. An amnesty may lay the foundation of peace in two cases:—1. If the insurgents have been thoroughly defeated, and are only waiting for a promise of pardon to enable them to return to their homes. 2. If the amnesty is accompanied with such ample promises of the redress of the grievances which gave occasion to the insurrection as to induce the insurgents to think that their object is attained. It is clear that the first of these cases is not that of the present insurrection. It is not put down; it is, on the contrary, rather more extensive than it was a few weeks ago. Let us, then, examine the amnesty with reference to the second of the supposed cases. The Emperor, referring to the institutions which he has conferred on the kingdom of Poland, says:—"In maintaining, at this day, these institutions in their integrity, we reserve to ourselves, whenever they shall have been practically tried, to proceed to their further development in accordance with the requirements of the age, and of the country." This promise can hardly be satisfactory to the Poles. For it must be observed with regard to the institutions already given that it was during their existence that 2000 young men were seized arbitrarily in the night, and condemned to serve as soldiers in the Russian army in defiance of justice, and even in violation of the law of 1859, so recently enacted. So that it is evident no security would be obtained by submitting again to the same laws. With those institutions in full force and vigour, innocent men might be imprisoned as criminals, or condemned to serve as soldiers, or banished to distant countries, without a trial, without publicity, without any guarantee whatever. As to the promise held out for the future, it must be observed that it is made to depend on the practical working of these institutions and on the wants of the time and of the country. The first of these conditions alone destroys all reasonable hope of the fulfilment of this promise. For the practical working of the institutions hitherto given depends on the co-operation of native Poles of property and character as members of the Council of State, and of provincial and municipal assemblies. But the recent conduct of the Russian Government in Poland has deprived them of the confidence of all Poles of this description and forced all such Poles to withdraw from the bodies in which their functions were to be exercised. There are wanting, therefore, in this Imperial manifesto, the first elements of success, namely, a guarantee of security on the one side, and the feeling of trust and confidence on the other. In a despatch of Lord Durham, then ambassador of St. Petersburgh, dated in August, 1832, Lord Durham says:—'There has long been a jealousy, nay, hatred, existing between the Russians and Poles.' Her Majesty's Government had hoped that the present Emperor, by raising the social position of his Russian, and securing the political freedom of his Polish, subjects, might have united both by the link of loyal attachment to the Throne. This hope has been unfortunately disappointed, and it is with great pain that her Majesty's Government observe that the feelings of hatred between Russians and Poles have not in the lapse of 30 years been softened or modified. The present amnesty does not appear likely to diminish the intensity of the insurrection, or give any solid security to the most moderate of Polish patriots.

"I am, &c., "Russell."

Foreign.

France.—The following is said to be the text of the despatch addressed by M. Drouyn de Lhuys to the French Ambassador at St. Petersburgh on the Polish question:—

"Monsieur le Duc,—The insurrection of which Poland is just now the scene has excited in Europe great anxiety in the midst of a repose which no future event seemed likely to disturb. The deplorable effusion of blood which that struggle has cost, and the painful incidents which mark its course, have excited an emotion as universal as it is profound. The Government of his Majesty, therefore, only fulfils a duty in communicating to the Court of Russia the reflections which such a state of affairs is calculated to suggest, and in directing its attention to the embarrassements and dangers which it involves. What characterises the outbreaks in Poland, Monsieur, and imparts to them an unexceptionably serious character, is the fact that they are not the result of a passing crisis. Events constantly recurring, as every successive generation grows up, cannot be ascribed to purely accidental causes. These, now periodical, convulsions, are the symptoms of an inveterate evil; they prove the utter powerlessness of the combinations hitherto devised to reconcile Poland with the situation that has been framed for her. On the other hand, these too frequent perturbations are, whenever they occur, a source of anxiety and alarm. Poland, which occupies on the Continent a central situation, cannot be agitated without communicating to the neighbouring states a shock the effect of which is felt by the whole of Europe. This is what has happened at all periods when the Poles have taken up arms. The consequences of these conflicts, as may be seen by that which we have now to witness, is not only to excite public opinion to an alarming extent, but their prolongation may disturb the relations between the various Cabinets, and bring about the most deplorable complications. All the Powers are equally interested in removing the cause of these ever recurring dangers. We would fain hope, Monsieur le Duc, that the Court of Russia will receive in the same spirit as they were framed considerations so worthy of its attention. We are confident that it will show itself animated with those liberal dispositions of which the reign of his Majesty the Emperor Alexander II has already given such signal proofs, and that it will, in its wisdom, acknowledge the expediency of taking steps to place Poland in the conditions of a durable peace. You will leave a copy of this despatch with his Excellency M. le Prince Gortschakoff."

Count Levacheff, Aide-de-Camp of the Emperor of Russia, arrived in Paris on Tuesday with despatches for the French Government. La France states that Russia will address a memorandum to the Powers upon Poland, stating the concessions made to the Poles, and the causes of the continual insurrections. It is asserted that the Poles will publish a counter memorandum. The debate on the Budget of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs commenced on Friday in the Chamber of Deputies. In reply to a question from M. Emile Ollivier, relative to Poland, M. Billault said that great reserve in speaking was necessary for all the interests engaged in the question. He proceeded to say:—

"The Government will give no explanation which might injure the success of negotiations. We are all animated by a cordial feeling for the sufferings of Poland, but are convinced that the question is a European one, and that the sympathies of all Europe must concur in settling it. The Government regrets that people allow themselves to be so easily attracted to foolish and unreasonable excitations and suppositions, to-day believing in a general conflagration and to-morrow completely forgetting the difficulties of the situation. Affairs wisely conducted do not pass into these extremes. The country should have full confidence in the wisdom, prudence, and firmness of him who, having such great interests in his hands, well understands all his responsibility."

On Wednesday the Corps Législatif passed the whole Budget by 240 against 7 votes. The Session of the Corps Législatif has been prolonged to the 7th of May. La France of Thursday asserts that the elections will commence on the 31st of May, and that the Corps Législatif will reassemble for a fortnight's session in the beginning of July. The Constitutionnel publishes an article, signed by its chief editor, contradicting the reports which have been circulated by several newspapers relative to an alleged change in the policy of the Court of Vienna. The Prince and Princess Napoleon are about to make a journey to Egypt and Palestine. The Army of Paris was reviewed by the Emperor on Tuesday. One of the most distinguished members of the French aristocracy, the Marquis de la Rochefoucauld de Liancourt, well known in the literary world, died in Paris last week, at the advanced age of 84. The Duke of Beaufort's hounds killed a wolf on the 10th ult. in the Bois des Cartes. The Imperial Court of Montpellier has recently been called on to hear an appeal, in which the point in dispute was the question whether a frog is a fish. The judgment was in the affirmative.

Spain.—In the sitting of the Cortes on Friday the Ministry stated that they did not intend to dissolve the Cortes. The Duke of Brabant has arrived at Madrid, and taken up his residence at the Royal Castle of Aranjuez.

Portugal.—A difficulty has occurred with the Russian Minister, on account of the King's attending a theatrical representation given for the benefit of the Poles. It has, however, been amicably arranged. The vine disease begins to show symptoms of a gradual disappearance. The rigorous measures recently adopted in the Custom-house are continued. The use of passports in the interior of Portugal has been abolished; they are, however, necessary for leaving or entering the country. The present Ministers still continue to hold office, but the opposition in the Cortes is so strong that a change must soon take place. The Chamber of Peers has approved the abolition of majorats (landed property descending with the title to an heir) by a majority of 53 to 26.

Sweden and Norway.—The whole Norwegian General Staff has been summoned to Stockholm for the 1st of May. The Nord of Wednesday, however, formally announces that the relations between the Cabinets of Stockholm and St. Petersburg are most satisfactory.

Denmark.—The Rigsraad (Legislative Assembly for Denmark-Schleswig) was opened at Copenhagen on the 22d ult., by the President of the Council reading the Speech from the Throne. The Speech adverted to the marriage of the Princess Alexandra, and the marks of attachment and joy which that auspicious event had called forth among loyal subjects. His Majesty expected that the Rigsraad would vote her Royal Highness a dowry. The speech next stated that the Royal proclamation of the 30th of March had encountered opposition from the Great Powers of Germany, but that the Government of the King would not show itself to be led astray by that circumstance from the intentions it had expressed. The Bills about to be laid before the Rigsraad concerned Denmark-Schleswig, and not Holstein, except in cases where the contrary was distinctly stated. The Speech further notified that a new Customs' Bill was about to be submitted to the Rigsraad, and in case of its passing would also be laid before the Holstein Diet.—On Saturday the Greek deputation arrived at Copenhagen by railway. On Monday the deputation was presented to the King by the President of the Council. The members will, however, only be officially received by his Majesty when the acceptance of the crown by Prince William shall have been definitively agreed upon. An aide-de-camp and Court carriages have been placed at the disposal of the deputation.

Hanover.—The Government of Hanover has submitted to the Federal Diet a series of resolutions on the Schleswig-Holstein question, protesting against the late proclamation of the Danish Government, as being opposed to the treaties of 1851 and 1852, and to the fundamental laws of the Germanic Confederation.

Austria.—The General Correspondenz of Wednesday denies the news published by several continental journals of an intended interview between the Emperors of France and Austria. The Vienna Gazette of Monday publishes the text of the protest addressed by the Austrian Government to Denmark, and states that the Austrian Ambassador, in compliance with the wish of Prussia, has been instructed to forward to the Danish Government the reservation of the rights of the German Confederation in a simultaneous note with that of the Prussian Ambassador, and couched in similar terms. The Austrian Government is anxious to obtain a revision of the Concordat. For this purpose Archbishop Fessler left Vienna on Monday for Rome, to act as commissioner for the Austrian Government. The Polish insurgent General Langiewicz, having some days previously declared that he did not consider himself bound by his parole, attempted to escape on Sunday night. The police officer, to whom he offered a bribe of 300 florins, having betrayed him, he was on Wednesday conveyed, under a strong military escort, to the fortress of Josephstadt in Bohemia.

Transylvania.—The Transylvanian Diet has been summoned by Imperial decree to meet at Hermannstadt on the 1st of July.

Baden.—The Italian Government has made overtures to the Grand Duke of Baden for the recognition of the Kingdom of Italy. The Government of the Grand Duke at once informed its agents in foreign countries of its intention to recognise the Italian Kingdom, and especially communicated that intention to Austria, at the same time explaining its motives for so doing.

Prussia.—The Neue Preussische (Kreuz) Zeitung of Thursday says that if, on the one hand, the party of progress intend submitting the foreign policy of the Government to serious discussion, on the other hand the Government may be determined to immediately close the Chambers.

Saxony.—Baron Siebach, the Saxon Minister, has left Warsaw with the alleged object of taking possession of some landed property which he has inherited in Podolia.

Switzerland.—The Austrian Government has acquainted the Federal Council that adherents of Mazzini in Switzerland are plotting an attack upon the southern portion of the Tyrol. The Swiss Government has forwarded a note to Turin requesting, in energetic terms, explanations as to the concentration of Italian troops upon the frontier of the cantons of the Grisons and Tessin. The French Government has demanded that North Savoy should be constituted a free district with regard to Customs.

Italy.—The King has returned to Turin from Florence. The Senate has deferred sanctioning the provisional Budget until May. The Chamber of Deputies has adjourned the debate on the Bill for the general armament of the National Guard until the committee appointed to examine the Bill has made a fresh report. In reply to a question, the Minister of the Interior defended the authorities at Genoa in having prevented a meeting in favour of Poland taking place. He said that sympathy for Poland was a pretext for agitation dangerous to public safety. Other meetings in favour of Poland which had been allowed to take place in several towns of the kingdom proved the respect of the Government for the right of assemblage. The Chamber approved of the course taken by the Government by 150 against 13 votes. In the sitting on Monday questions were put to the Government relative to some recent invasions of brigands from Roman territory, Malta, and Marseilles. The Minister of the Interior replied that he had been informed that these brigand organisations consisted of Neapolitan reactionists recruited from different nations. Energetic measures had been authorised in the places threatened by the brigands, and the Government were redoubling their diplomatic efforts to prevent fresh expeditions of the kind. Accounts from Rome mention a rumour that the Pope, yielding to the influence of the Camarilla, which is in favour of Monsignor de Merode, has accepted the resignation of Cardinal Antonelli, and that Cardinal de Angelis has been appointed his successor. A rumour was also current that Tristani had resigned the command of the brigands, and had been replaced by Ferracante Catalano. Tristani was about to leave for Trieste. 200 brigands had left Rome, and proceeded in the direction of Aquila. General La Marmora has left Naples on a journey of inspection to the Papal frontier. The gaoler of the San Michelotto prison a few days since carried off the papers relative to the trial of Signori Venanzi, Fausti, and other political prisoners now in confinement. The official journals state that, although these documents have been purloined, the evidence against the prisoners is not weakened by their loss, and that as the Court has discovered that conspiracies have been organised at Turin against the Pontifical Government, the culpability of the accused is placed beyond a doubt. The French occupying Viterbo are to be replaced towards the middle of May by Papal Zouaves.

Russia.—An Imperial ukase has been published ordering a general levy in the seven Governments bordering on the Polish provinces now incorporated with Russia. Each Government is to furnish 8000 men. General Berg has asked the Government to replace all civil functionaries in the Polish provinces by military officials.

Poland.—The chief of the Warsaw Revolutionary Committee has issued a special order of the day forbidding the inhabitants to pay taxes to the Russian Government. The Russian Government has forbidden the religious processions of St. Mark, which usually take place at this time of the year. The Archbishop of Warsaw, however, having protested against this prohibition, the people formed a procession, whereupon Archbishop Felinski was confined as a prisoner in his palace, and the Canons Bialobrzeski, Wysznski, Poplawski, and others, as well as a great number of priests, were arrested. Orders however were subsequently sent to Warsaw by telegraph from St. Petersburg, directing that all the priests who were arrested should be set at liberty. Monseigneur Wolonczewski, Bishop of Samogitia, has since been arrested. On Saturday an important engagement took place between the Russians and the insurgents, near Warka, south of Warsaw, in which the Russians were defeated with great loss. A sharp encounter has taken place between the Russian and the Polish forces at Pazurek, near Olkusz, on the road to Miechow. The insurgents, under Mosakowski, destroyed a whole company of Russians, and put another to flight. The Poles under Olevinski have gained considerable advantages over the Russians at Wonszow, near Czenstochowa. The different corps under the command of Sziarotski, Waligorski, and Smiechowski are stationed in the environs of Jomeszow, in the palatinate of Sandomir. Olevinski is trying to effect a junction with Mosakowski. On Friday Lelewel, with the insurgents under his command, was surrounded and defeated by 2000 Russian troops. Lelewel was wounded, but escaped, together with 120 men. The Hussars of the Guard who were pursuing the insurgents have been beaten by them, with the loss of 300 killed and wounded. On Friday four engagements were fought between the insurgents and the Russian troops in the vicinity of the Cracow and Warsaw Railway. An engagement between the insurgents and the Russian troops has taken place near Myszkow. Two bridges upon the Warsaw and Vienna Railway have been rendered impassable. Severe fighting has occurred at Radomsko. The Warsaw official journal confirms the news that 500 Russians have been defeated and forced to seek refuge at Jerzyke, in Prussian territory. Several skirmishes have taken place in the Palatinate of Sandomir, in the course of which 120 Russians were killed. Three Russian infantry corps have been entirely defeated near Koszyce. On the other hand, the insurgents are said to have been defeated at Ostrowo, near Kalisch, and to have had 1000 taken prisoners. Three vessels have succeeded in landing arms at a depot station on the coast of Poland, but the name of the place is not given. The Nord Deutsche Zeitung publishes a telegram stating that in the districts of Thorn and Kulm, in West Prussia, 660 persons, 100 of whom were mounted, belonging to various towns and Polish estates, have crossed the frontier to join the insurgents. The force was attacked by a Russian detachment from Lipnsa. The mounted portion of the revolters took to flight, but the infantry and baggage were captured. The same journal of Saturday says that the Imperial decree granting an amnesty has been officially communicated to all Russian subjects who have sought refuge in Posen, and are now retained on Prussian territory. The majority have declared their intention of returning to their homes, and have requested Russian passports for that purpose. Count John Dzialinski, brother-in-law of Prince Czartoryski, and a member of the Prussian Chamber, has joined the insurgent camp in the Palatinate of Kalisch. The police have since made a domiciliary visit at the palace of the Count, and have seized the entire plan of an intended revolutionary organisation in the province, and a list containing the names of the members of the Central Committee, and those of the proposed civil and military commissaries for the different districts.

Greece.—The Moniteur says that the English Government has proposed a conference of the three protecting Powers, to be held in London. It is understood that the representatives of the protecting Powers will assemble about the 25th inst.

The Principalities.—The Government has concluded a treaty with Italy on commerce and navigation, based on the mutual suppression of protective duties, as well as a convention concerning literary and artistic copyright.

India.—A telegram from Bombay of April 13, says that the Cotton Adulteration Bill has passed the Legislative Council. The construction of the Bhore Ghaut Railway has been completed. The Viceroy was continuing his progress. He made his entry into Meerut on the 7th of March, with considerable military display; and into Roorkee on the 16th. The Commander-in-Chief joined his Excellency at Meerut on the 8th, and followed him to Roorkee. Advices from Nepaul state that a Cabool merchant has reported to the Maharajah Sir Jung Bahadoor that he saw the rebel leader Feroze Shah at Herat, who entrusted him with several letters to the families of the Nana Sahib and Bala Rao, which he had lost on the way down. A fakeer, with seditious papers in his possession, has been apprehended at Cawnpore on a charge of exciting disaffection. He represented himself as the representative of Nana Sahib and Bala Rao, and professed to have full powers from the Nana to enlist troops. Three other emissaries of the Nana have also been apprehended. Rebellion still lurks in various districts in Oude. Seditious letters have recently been circulated among the Mahomedan inhabitants, inciting them to rise against her Majesty's Government. Several parties have been arrested and committed to stand their trial. There has been some hard fighting in the Jyntean Hills, and several of our officers have been wounded. By the last accounts the war seemed at an end. Intelligence from Cabool to the 23d February, reports the illness of the Ameer before Herat, which still held out, but fears of a famine were entertained in the city. Very extensive flights of locusts had visited the Punjaub. It was feared that the grub of next year would cause immense damage, and efforts were making to destroy the eggs. In one district these eggs were collected by maunds.

CHINA.—The rebels have gained another victory over the Imperialists at Shaou-hing, about 90 miles from Ningpo. Lieut. Tinling, of her Majesty's ship Encounter, who, with Captain Dew, were spectators of the action, received a chance wound in the head which proved fatal. All was quiet at Shanghae.

JAPAN.—The news from Japan is scanty, but the threatening state of affairs against foreigners is as alarming as ever.

UNITED STATES.—The Northern journals in their accounts of the siege of Charleston, state that nine iron-clads crossed Charleston Bar in single file on the 7th ult., and moved up the harbour towards Forts Sumter and Moultrie, to attack those forts, which vigorously returned the fire of the fleet. In their passage up the harbour the fleet discovered a network of obstructions stretching across the channel from Sumter to Moultrie, from Sumter to Cumming's Point, and from Fort Ripley to Fort Johnson. It was impossible to pass these obstructions, and after an engagement lasting from 3 till 5 in the afternoon the fleet returned from the harbour with five out of the nine iron-clads damaged, and one of them, the Keokuk, sank the following morning from the injuries she received. During the last 30 minutes of the engagement the Federal fleet received a concentric fire of the Confederate batteries, which is described to have been so terrific as to have rendered it impossible for any vessel to remain long under it. During part of the engagement the steamer Ironsides refused to obey her rudder, and became unmanageable. The Keokuk, which had two turrets, received 90 shots, and was horribly riddled. One Whitworth steel-pointed shot remained still sticking in the wall of the turret. The Weehawken was struck 59 times, and her turret worked with difficulty. The Passaic was struck 58 times, and received a shot that bent in her turret and disabled her 11-inch guns; three others, the Patapsco, Nantucket, and Nahant, were all more or less injured and rendered unfit for service. This condition of his fleet determined Admiral Dupont to abandon the idea of renewing the conflict. No land force co-operated in the attack. General Hunter stated that he could only spare 7,000 men to co-operate with the fleet, and this force only proceeded to Stone Inlet, 12 miles from Charleston, Admiral Dupont's whole available force to hold the forts, if he had captured them, was 1,100 men. At the date of the last advices two of the Monitors had sailed for Port Royal, whither the remainder followed on the 12th. The Federal loss was 20 officers and men wounded, one of whom has since died. The Charleston Mercury says that Fort Sumter, although somewhat pitted, is as strong as ever. It is estimated that the Federals fired 80 shots, 40 of which struck Fort Sumter. No one was killed in it. General Beauregard has issued a congratulatory address to the troops on the result of the engagement. The Confederates are said to have had some very effective Whitworth guns. The efforts made to reinforce General Foster, at Washington, North Carolina, have at length been successful. Information has reached Fortress Monroe that a steamer with one regiment and supplies succeeded in reaching him on the 14th ult. The Confederates under General Longstreet, to the reported number of 30,000 strong, continue to invest Suffolk, where the Federals are fortifying themselves. The Confederates have attempted to get round the city and cut off the Federal communication with Norfolk. It is supposed that in case of the capture of Suffolk by the Confederates the Federals would burn Norfolk. Considerable excitement has been caused at Suffolk by the shooting of Colonel Kimball by General Corcoran. It is said that Colonel Kimball while on picket duty attempted to prevent General Corcoran passing without the countersign, when the General shot him dead. An engagement has occurred on the Nansemond River below Suffolk between Federal gunboats and Confederate artillery. The latter was silenced by the gunboats, one of which, however, was disabled and towed off. All the expeditions for the purpose of reaching the rear of Vicksburg by the several passes leading from the Mississippi have been abandoned. The entire Yazoo Pass expedition has returned to Helena, having abandoned the attack upon Fort Pemberton. During the retreat they were frequently fired upon by guerillas, and had 30 men killed and many wounded. Southern reports state that Admiral Farragut was near the Red River, between two batteries, unable to pass either of them. Despatches from Vicksburg to the 10th ult. state that two more Federal transports, filled with troops, had gone up the Mississippi, and others were preparing to follow. 53 Federal gunboats had proceeded up the Coldwater River. A Federal iron-clad was abandoned, and destroyed at the mouth of the Amite River. Refugees from Vicksburg state that there are sufficient supplies there to last the garrison for two years. Vicksburg is fortified by 125 cannon. At present it is held by not more than 5000 troops, but in case of attack reinforcements can be had. The Confederates are constructing three gunboats up the Red River. The steamer Indianola is lying at Plaisance, on the Red River, ready for action. At Jackson, Mississippi, the Confederates are said to have an extensive foundry and powder manufactory. There are reported to be 800,000 bales of cotton in and around Jackson. 60,000 bales are hid away in swamps and woods. The Federals have closed the Memphis lines for 60 days; neither contrabands nor cotton being admitted. Thirty Federal boats and 12 gun boats have left Memphis to operate on the Cumberland River. Two of the gunboats and three transports were destroyed on Cumberland River by Wheeler's Cavalry, who had also captured several Federal trains between Louisville and Nashville. The Confederate General Van Dorn has been repulsed at Franklin, Tennessee, It is rumoured in Nashville that 500 Southern sympathisers are to be arrested in that city, and held as hostages for East Tennessee Unionists confined in Southern prisons. These hostages are to be exchanged for Unionists when the Confederate Government is willing. A fight took place at Williamsburg, Virginia, on the 14th. The Confederates under General Wise drove in the Federal picquets and occupied the town. The Federals retired to Fort Magrada, from which point they shelled Williamsburg. General Wise has intrenched one side of Williamsburg, and is going to attack Fort Magrada. It is asserted that the army of the Potomac is in motion. Great mystery is maintained on the subject by the Government, and no direct information from General Hooker's head-quarters has been allowed to be published for three days. It is also asserted that General Lee is moving upon Harper's Ferry, to invade Maryland. A special despatch to the Tribune, from Washington, dated the 17th ult., states that a force of Federal cavalry, infantry, and artillery, under General Stoneman, after making a feint at Kelly's Ford, crossed the Rappahannock higher up, and advanced upon Culpepper and Gordonsville, occupying the latter place. This movement, it is asserted, breaks the line of the Virginia Central Railway, and turns the left flank of the Confederates at Fredericksburg. None of the other journals contain this news. The disaster at Charleston has caused great discouragement in New York, and revived the popular clamour for a change in the Administration. The violent outcry against Great Britain is continued in the Republican journals, and it is declared that a war against England would effectually unite all parties in the North. The Solicitor-General and Lord Palmerston are vehemently denounced for their recent speeches on the depredations of the Alabama and Florida. There are indications that the anti-English spirit is stimulated by the Government to distract public attention from the disheartening repulse before Charleston. The New York Herald urges President Lincoln to call an extra session of Congress to share the responsibilities of a war with England, if such a course should be necessary to vindicate the honour or uphold the interests of America. The New York Times says it is physically certain America will exact an atonement for British outrages, the only uncertain thing is the question of time. It says that 70,000 Federal troops could march through Canada without impediment, as England could not break the blockade, which would be protected by iron-clads, of which America has five to one of England. The World ridicules this article, and says that the defences of Canada are superior to anything the Federals have met with at the south, and backed by the greatest naval power on earth, the conquest of Canada would not be such child's play as the Times supposes. The correspondent of the World reports from Washington that Mr. Seward's last despatch to Mr. Adams submitted to the British Government the alternative of preventing the departure of the vessels alleged to be building in England for the Confederate service or the rupture of diplomatic relations between the two countries. A grand mass meeting called by the instigators of the Loyal National League was held at New York on the anniversary of the fall of Fort Sumter. About 5000 persons assembled, who were addressed by Generals Fremont and Sigel and the Postmaster-General, Mr. Montgomery Blair. The latter denounced the English aristocracy for fitting out the pirates Alabama and Florida, and advocated the vigorous prosecution of the war. The disturbances between the white and coloured labourers in New York continue to be of frequent occurrence. In two instances the negroes were driven from their work on the wharves by Irish and other labourers. One of the negroes fired a pistol into the crowd, wounding one of his assailants, and it was with great difficulty that the police prevented his being lynched on the spot. The latest news from Washington states that Lord Lyons has requested that the mail bags found on board the English steamer Peterhoff be returned to him unopened, and that Mr. Seward has complied with his demand. The Peterhoff and her cargo are however to be sent before a prize court. The report of the Secretary of the Treasury estimates that the Government expenses for the six months ending December, 1863, will exceed 50,000,000 dollars per month, and recommends further taxation. It is rumoured that General M'Clellan has resigned his commission. It is reported from Havannah that Admiral Wilkes was held as a parolled prisoner there until he could explain why the Vanderbilt had fired a shot at a Spanish coasting steamer. A report is current that the British steamer Cygnet was fired at by Federal cruisers whilst entering a Cuban port, the cruisers having mistaken the Cygnet for a privateer. The Pennsylvania House of Representatives has agreed, by 44 votes against 40, to instruct the Governor to direct the Attorney-General to institute criminal proceedings against ex-Secretary Cameron for attempting to obtain a seat in the Senate by bribery. In compliance with the request of the Confederate Congress, President Davis on the 10th ult. issued an address to the people of the Confederate States upon the present condition and future prospects of their country. He says, in this address, that, alone and unaided, the Confederacy had defeated the most formidable military and naval combinations of its enemies, and, at the end of two years of war, could look back with pride upon all it had accomplished. Referring to the discomfiture of the Federals at Vicksburg, Port Hudson, and Charleston, he said that the forces of the Confederacy were never so numerous or efficient as at the present moment. He concluded by exhorting the people to be prepared for the continuance of war, and to cultivate the crops for the sustenance of their armies rather than cotton and tobacco.

MEXICO.—Official despatches from Vera Cruz announce that General Mirando has defeated Comonfort near Cholula, after a brilliant engagement. The Mexican loss was 200 killed and 80 prisoners; that of the French was 10 men, two of whom were killed. Puebla is completely invested by the French forces, whose head-quarters are established on the Cerro San Juan. The convents have been fortified, and earthworks are erected in the open country. The garrison of the place is estimated to number 18,000 men. The telegraph line between Puebla and Mexico has been destroyed. The whole population round Puebla is favourable to the French intervention. The sanitary condition of the French troops is excellent, and the army is full of ardour. The official report says, in conclusion, "We have cut the aqueduct, and command all the roads."

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—Lord WODEHOUSE moved the second reading of the Qualification for Offices Abolition Bill.—The Earl of DERBY moved that the Bill be read a second time that day six months.—Earl COWPER, Lord LYTTELTON, Earl RUSSELL, and Earl GRANVILLE supported the Bill, which was opposed by the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH. On a division it was rejected by a majority of 69 to 52.

MONDAY.—Opening of the Mail Bags in America.—Earl RUSSELL said that in accordance with his promise on Friday he had consulted the Law Officers of the Crown in regard to the seizure of the Dolphin and other vessels, but it was not desirable to declare at present the opinions they had formed. A despatch had been issued by Mr. Seward on the 31st of October, containing instructions to the naval officers of the United States to the effect that it was not expedient to open the mail bags of a friendly Power duly authenticated by an official seal, when captured by Federal vessels. In consequence of those instructions no question on the point had arisen until the capture of the Peterhoff, when the mail bags, with the seal of the Postmaster-General, were forwarded to Mr. Archibald, the British Consul at New York. Mr. Archibald required that the bags should be forwarded to their destination; but the Federal authorities insisted that the bags should be opened, and they were opened accordingly. Lord Lyons, on receipt of this intelligence, communicated with Mr. Seward, and declared that the proceedings were contrary to Mr. Seward's letter of October 31, as the bags were protected by the seal of the Postmaster-General. Mr. Seward asked for time to consider the matter, and subsequently Mr. Archibald was informed that, in accordance with a decision of the Prize Court, the letters were to be opened, and such as were of a bonâ fide nature sent to their destination, but all relating to the cargo referred to the Prize Court. Mr. Archibald refused his approval to this course, and in consequence the proceedings seemed to have been suspended, as the packages had not been opened. Lord Lyons then asked Mr. Seward that the letters should be forwarded, and Mr. Seward had stayed proceedings until further orders from Washington, but when the mail left for England, no decision had been arrived at.—The Marquis of CLANRICARDE said that merchants ought to have been more fully informed of these instructions with respect to the mails. He suggested that a full report should be sent of the proceedings before the Prize Courts.—Earl RUSSELL said that he would communicate with Lord Lyons on the point.—Lord REDESDALE, in calling attention to the report from the Select Committee on Charging of Entailed Estates for Railways, thought there was no necessity for further legislation, as the existing law gave all necessary facilities.—

Earl Grey thought the suggestions of the committee would confer some very useful powers, an opinion in which Lord Stanley of Alderley concurred.

Tuesday.—The Alkali Works Regulation Bill, the Local Government Act (1858) Amendment Bill, the New Zealand Boundaries Bill, and the Officers (South Africa) Bill were read a third time and passed. The Galway Contract.—In answer to the Earl of Hardwicke, Lord Stanley of Alderley said that the contract for the conveyance of the mails between Galway and America would contain the stipulations of the old arrangement as to the rate of speed, and that a copy of the contract would be laid on the table before the vote for the subsidy was asked for.

Thursday.—The Peterhoff Mail Bags.—Earl Russell said he had received a despatch of Lord Lyons stating that the United States Government had determined to send the Peterhoff and cargo before a Prize Court, and to forward the mail-bags to their destination. Mr. Seward, considering the law of nations on this point not sufficiently precise, was anxious to make a communication to Her Majesty's Government in regard to mail-bags carried in private ships. For the future he believed that any mails seized would be forwarded to their destination without breaking the seals. The Drainage of Land (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.—Earl Russell moved the second reading of the Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill.—Earl Grey regarded the Bill as a piece of the most absurd legislation that had ever sprung from Parliament. It was impossible to stop bribery, except by enlisting public opinion against it. The Bill, after a short conversation, was read a second time.—The Earl of Hardwicke inquired what steps were to be taken in reference to the continuation of the works on the Forts at Spithead. He inferred from the late fight off Charleston that forts still maintained their old superiority over ships, and insisted that the necessity for and advantage of such defences were as strong as ever.—The Duke of Somerset, in reply, stated that up to July, 1862, only 50,000*l.* had been expended on the Spithead forts, and that the works had for a time been suspended. It would, however, be shortly necessary to come to Parliament for a grant of money, and it was desirable that the question of the Spithead forts should be settled this year. The recent engagement at Charleston was to us a most useful experiment in connection with the subject of these forts, as the distances of range, the obstructions used, and the facility of approaching were in both harbours almost identical.—The Earl of Derby said that, after reading the published accounts of the attack on Charleston, it appeared to him that all the injury sustained by the iron-clad ships was inflicted after they had passed Forts Sumter and Moultrie and got into the harbour, where they were exposed to a concentrated fire from all the batteries at a distance of from 300 to 500 yards.—Earl Grey inquired whether, supposing such an attack had been made upon Portsmouth, the enemy might not have got near enough to shell the dockyards.—The Duke of Somerset thought not. His impression was that the vessels did not get up far enough to do the town of Charleston any injury.

Friday.—The Vice-Admiralty Courts Bill was read a second time. Metropolitan Railways.—Earl Granville moved with respect to the East London and Rotherhithe, the Grand Surrey and Commercial Docks, the Metropolitan, Tottenham, and Hampstead, the Rotherhithe, and the London (Victoria Section) Railway Bills, that the orders made for their committal be discharged, and that they be no further proceeded with during the present session. The motion was agreed to. The Inclosure Bill passed through Committee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Friday.—Sailors' Homes.—Sir H. Stracey moved a resolution empowering the Board of Trade to assist Sailors Homes by grants from the Mercantile Marine Fund.—Mr. M. Gibson opposed the motion, which was negatived without a division. The Glasgow Murder.—Mr. Stirling moved for papers relating to the conviction of Jessie M'Lachlan, and the subsequent commutation of her sentence, stating that the course taken by the Home Secretary had left a stigma on Mr. Fleming, a man 87 years of age.—Sir G. Grey vindicated the course he had taken, in conjunction with the Lord Advocate, in the proceedings subsequent to the trial. He was unwilling to produce the papers on account of the inconvenient precedent their production would establish. Seizure of the Alexandra.—Mr. Horsfall called attention to the seizure of the Alexandra at Liverpool, by the direction of the Government, on the ground of a violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act. He read documents to show that there was no just pretence for seizing this unarmed vessel on a mere suspicion that it was intended for the service of the Confederate Government. He asked why the large shipments of arms for the Federal Government had not also been stopped; and protested against a system of espionage introduced into this country in connexion with the transaction.—The Attorney-General said that the seizure in question had been made on the advice of those who were responsible for it, and upon evidence which had satisfied him that that advice ought to be given. As to the shipment of arms for the Federal Government, it was not in the power of her Majesty's Government to interfere; but if information were laid before the Government of any infraction of the Foreign Enlistment Act, measures would be immediately taken to put that Act in force.—Mr. Whiteside said that the owners of the ship wanted to know what was their offence, and had a right to a copy of the information.—Mr. Collier said that international law made a distinction between the shipment of arms and the equipment of vessels of war, the former being no violation of that law.—Sir H. Cairns said that if the vessel was really equipped, furnished, and fitted out with the intention of being employed in the service of a foreign State, it was no ground of seizure under the Act.—Mr. Cobden said that Mr. Horsfall had mixed up two totally distinct questions. The export of arms and munitions of war were not prohibited. The question was whether, in the case of the Alexandra, there had been an infringement of the Foreign Enlistment Act, which this country had the greatest interest in maintaining. He reviewed the history of the Foreign Enlistment Act of the United States, pointing out instances of the solicitude of that Government to enforce and even enlarge the powers of that Act for the benefit of European States, and he asked that we should act by the United States as they had done by us. We were bound in honour to observe a strict neutrality towards the States, and it was our interest that there should be a fair reciprocity, looking at the vast amount of property we had afloat on salt water. He wanted to set public opinion against the building and fitting out of such vessels as the Alabama, and asked why that vessel might not be forbidden to enter our ports.—Mr. Horsman believed that the Government desired to carry out the policy of a strict neutrality. That neutrality should be neutrality in acts; it need not be a neutrality of sentiment. Our first sympathy had been with the North, but as the frightful contest proceeded the feeling changed. The South had not only carried on the war with success, but had displayed a heroism which had conciliated the generous sympathy of Europe, while the North, by the barbarities of their acts, showed that they warred not only against freedom, but against civilisation. He hoped that all parties would support the Government in the solemn duty of maintaining an immovable attitude of peace.—The Solicitor-General said that in the case of the Alexandra it was impossible to divulge the evidence prematurely, but everything had been done according to the usual course of the law. Whether there was a good defence would appear hereafter.—Mr. Milnes commended the course which had been pursued by the Government, who, whatever might be their private opinions as to the conflict, had maintained a strict neutrality.—Sir F. Kelly asked what protection would be given to merchant ships carrying letter bags.—Lord Palmerston said that the American Government had prescribed rules to their naval officers not to open the bags, but to forward them to the consuls, who would have power to examine them and give up any correspondence of a hostile character. The House then went into a Committee of Supply pro formâ. The report of the Committee of Supply having been brought up, Mr. Coningham moved that the further consideration of the vote for the erection of a Memorial to the Prince Consort be postponed, believing that the sum proposed would be insufficient.—The motion was seconded by Sir H. Verney.—After an explanation from Lord Palmerston, who gave a pledge that no further vote would be asked for, Mr. Coningham withdrew his motion, and the Report was agreed to. The report of the Committee of Ways and Means was brought up and agreed to.

Monday.—Distress in Lancashire.—The orders of the day having been postponed, Mr. Ferrand moved a resolution to the effect that it was the duty of the Government to take into consideration, without delay, what measures may be necessary to relieve the distress in the cotton manufacturing districts, so that the people may no longer continue unemployed. Having criticised at some length the published letters of Mr Potter, the chairman of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, which, he said, contained propositions which the House would not be justified in entertaining, he argued that the great mill owners were themselves responsible for the present lamentable state of affairs, because they had made no effort to make themselves independent of America for a supply of cotton. These men, who had broken all their pledges to the operatives, and who boasted of the enormous fortunes they had made, now ignored their responsibility, and called upon the Government not to desert them. The proposition of Mr. Potter to refer the subject to a royal commission would be simply to transfer the whole of the responsibility to the Government; while the proposal (after the mills had resumed work) to glut the untravelled parts of India with Manchester goods would be to consign the handloom weavers of that dependency to ruin, and perhaps to cause another revolution throughout the country. What, under these circumstances, were the manufacturers to do? Certainly not to come to the House for a loan to relieve them from their difficulties. He would recommend them to adopt an eight hours' bill for adults and a four hours' bill for children. This would check the tendency to over-trading and over-production, which had already done so much to bring misery upon the cotton operatives. If, in addition to this, Parliament would comply with the prayer of the overlookers and other high class operatives, and give them the means of emigrating, a great and permanent good would be done.—Mr. Potter moved, as an amendment, that an address be presented to Her Majesty, to appoint a royal commission to inquire into the present state of the cotton manufacturing districts, and to report on the best mode of relieving the distress. Up to the present time nearly two millions sterling had been raised by rates and voluntary subscriptions on behalf of Lancashire, and 437,000 persons were still subsisting on charity. There were among them 80,000 able-bodied men, and these the commission might be able to employ on public works of a reproductive character.—Mr. Cobden seconded the amendment.—Mr Baillie recommended the Government to assist emigration, and to employ the people at once upon the proposed fortifications and other public works.—Mr. Villiers said that Mr Ferrand had entirely failed to make out in what respect the Government had shown themselves indifferent to the distress of the people, and had not put any tangible issue to the House. With regard to the amendment, he did not think the House would be in a better position to act after a royal commission had reported than it was at present. All the facts were already before the country. There were upwards of 400,000 persons depending upon charity, including 72,000 able-bodied men. To find independent employment for the latter would no doubt be most desirable. With regard to emigration he did not consider it was the duty of the Government to expend the public money in giving facilities for exporting valuable labour to other countries. The department with which he was connected had caused inquiries to be made, and had ascertained that in Lancashire and North Cheshire alone there would be abundant employment in drainage and kindred works for 100,000 men for two winters. A competent person, with a staff of engineers and surveyors, would at once be despatched to the distressed districts, and he hoped that at the expiration of three weeks means would be found under the Land Improvement and other Acts to find employment for the whole of the able-bodied poor now reluctantly dependent upon charity.—Colonel Wilson Patten rejoiced at the step taken by the Government. The total amount which the central committee had received from every source was 2,735,000*l.* Of this 1,858,319*l.* had been expended, and there remained a net balance of 755,000*l.* Of the total receipts, 1,400,000*l.* had come from Lancashire, which showed that whatever ground there might be for charging individuals with holding back, the county had done its duty.—After some remarks by Mr. Hibbert, Major Edwards, Mr. A. Egerton, Lord E. Howard, Mr. W. Garnett, Mr. Newdegate, and Mr Maguire, Mr. Potter withdrew his amendment, and Mr. Ferrand withdrew his motion. The House then went into a Committee of Ways and Means, and resumed the consideration of the Budget Resolutions. Upon the resolution relating to Club Licences, Mr. W. Jolliffe objected that the tax was based upon a false principle of taxation, as the Clubs derived no profit from the sale of the articles.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer justified the principle. After much discussion, Mr. Liddell moved that the resolution be negatived.—The motion was seconded by Mr. Walter. On a division the resolution was carried by 143 to 111. The resolutions imposing a three guinea license on Publicans not taking out a spirit license, an additional one guinea license upon Beer Dealers, continuing the present Sugar Duties until the first of August, 1864, and for an excise occasional license upon the Conveyance of Passengers, at separate fares, were agreed to, and ordered to be reported. The House having resumed, the Savings Banks Bill was read a second time. The House went into committee on the Salmon Fisheries (Ireland) Bill, but the Chairman was ordered to report progress before it was decided whether the clauses should be proceeded with.

Tuesday.—Distinguished Service Colonels.—General Lindsay moved an address to the Crown, praying the appointment of a Commission to inquire into the claims of 21 officers of the army promoted to the rank of colonel in 1855 and 1856, as aides-de-camp to her Majesty, and for distinguished service in the Crimean war, who, by a recommendation of the Royal Commission of 1858, referring to another class of officers, had been deprived to an undue extent of the position they attained by the promotion conferred upon them; and to report to her Majesty whether they are entitled to redress; and if so, in what form it should be accorded to them.—The Marquis of Hartington opposed the motion on the ground that it was inexpedient to disturb the existing arrangement.—Sir J. Pakington was persuaded that the House of Commons would much rather disturb the army list than see an act of injustice done to a deserving class of officers.—Sir F. Smith, as a member of the Royal Commission of 1858, said he had no objection to have their recommendations revised.—Mr. Kinglake said that, divested of the mass of technicalities which surrounded it, there could be no doubt of the justice of the claim.—Lord Palmerston said that it was desirable to avoid any interference by the House with the details of the management of the army, and equally desirable to avoid anything which should give rise to a feeling in the public mind that an act of injustice was done by the Government. He therefore proposed that the motion should be withdrawn, and in that case he would engage that the subject should be referred to a Royal Commission.—Mr. Disraeli demurred to the position that it was unconstitutional for the House of Commons to address her Majesty on any subject connected with the management of the army.—General Lindsay having accepted the proposition of Lord Palmerston, the motion was withdrawn. Military Defence of Colonies.—Mr. A. Mills called attention to the correspondence between her Majesty's Government and the Governors of Canada and of New Zealand concerning the military defence of those colonies, and moved for a copy of all communications which have passed since the commencement of 1862 between the Secretary for the Colonies and the representatives of the Crown in the British dependencies respecting the mode and cost of their military defence. He argued that the time had arrived when, with the possession of a representative government and free institutions, the Colonies ought to take upon themselves the charge of their own defence.—Mr. C. Fortescue described the steps taken by the Canadian Government to raise a volunteer force, and to render the rural militia fit for training. It should be borne in mind that the enemy of Canada was our enemy, and that war with Canada meant war with England. If, then, no imperial force were supplied to her, it would appear as if we repudiated the obligation that rested upon us to defend every portion of our empire. At the same time, it did not follow that we could consent to maintain an unlimited number of troops at our own cost in time of war, much less in peace; consequently the defence of Canadian territory must mainly depend on the Canadians themselves. With regard to New Zealand, the danger was not from without, but from within; and as the Government could not permit an internecine war they were bound to assist the settlers through their present crisis.—Mr. Aytoun saw no reason why 2½ millions of people, with a revenue of 1,200,000*l.* per annum, should not do something more to defend themselves than the Canadians had done.—Mr. Adderley approved entirely of the policy of the Colonial Minister, and hoped it would be persevered in, no matter what opposition might be offered to it in the colonies. After some observations from Mr Buxton the motion was withdrawn. Iron-clad Ships.—Sir J Elphinstone moved an address to her Majesty to appoint a commission to consider the best mode of construction and form of the iron-clad ships which are to compose the future navy of England; to report upon the ships presently built and building, and the amount of dock and basin accommodation required for their use at home and abroad. He said that his object was to establish a council of scientific men to advise the Admiralty in the construction of iron ships.—Lord R. Montagu moved as an amendment that the Admiralty should be empowered to introduce into the public service a class of persons equal in education and position to the military cadets of Woolwich, who subject to certain regulations, may ultimately fulfil the duties of royal naval architects.—Lord C. Paget opposed the motion and the amendment, and after some remarks by Mr. Lindsay and Sir F. Smith the motion and the amendment were both withdrawn.—Mr K. Seymer moved that the analysis of evidence appended to the Report of the Select Committee on Sewage of Towns, in Session 1862, be cancelled. He detailed the circumstances under which the Report was prepared, and complained of the manner in which the analysis of the evidence was drawn up as irregular or informal.—The motion was seconded by Mr. Paget.—Dr. Brady, the Chairman of the Committee, defended the analysis, which he had drawn up, he said, with great labour. After some further discussion the analysis was ordered to be cancelled on the ground of informality.—Mr. Herbert obtained leave to bring in a Bill to authorize the Removal of Poor Persons born in England or Scotland, and chargeable in Ireland. The other orders of the day were then disposed of.

Wednesday.—Church Rates.—Sir J. Trelawny moved the second reading of the Church Rates Abolition Bill, and said that the defeats he had sustained during the last two years on the question had been achieved on the understanding that other measures relating to it would be brought forward. That, however, had not been done, and therefore his only course would be to fall back once more upon his proposal for total abolition.—Mr. G Hardy moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. He urged that church rates were neither unjust nor intolerable, and reminded the House that every effort which had hitherto been made to relieve the Dissenters from the impost had been rejected.—Mr. Mitford seconded the amendment.—Sir C. Douglas supported the Bill, and quoted a number of statistics to show that although the abolition party had sustained Parliamentary defeats, their numbers were now greater than on any former occasion.—Mr. Whiteside supported the amendment, and contended that, according to the declaration of Mr. Miall, the object of the Bill was as a grain of sand to a mountain, compared with the object to which it would lead, and which was the separation of the Church from the State, the abolition of tithes, and the utilisation of the fabrics of the establishment. As one who held Conservative opinions, and believed that the Church was one of the institutions of the State linked with the monarchy, he was prepared to maintain that one of these institutions could not be touched without endangering the others.—Sir G. Grey thought it was highly inexpedient on the part of the friends of the Church to stake her existence on the continuance of church rates, for he could not imagine that the principle of an established Church could depend upon a system that was only partially acted upon in the country. It was not without reluctance that he would record his vote for the second reading, but he would do so to affirm the principle only, and with a distinct desire that before the Bill reached a third reading some measure of compromise might be carried out.—Lord J. Manners thought the simple issue was whether the Church of England was or was not to be the National Church. The other day a proposal was made to take her churchyards from her; to-day her immemorial right to raise Church-rates was questioned, and to-morrow her endowed schools would be attacked. The object of all this was to lower her position in the estimation of the people.—Lord A. Churchill said he should vote for the second reading, because he intended in Committee to move the introduction of a clause which he considered ought to remove all the reasonable objections of Dissenters.—Mr. Walter had no sympathy or connection with the abolition party, but he could not as a Churchman bring himself to the belief that Church-rates were a source of strength to the Church of England. On the contrary, he believed in his conscience that they were a source of weakness, and was therefore willing to vote for their abolition.—After some remarks by Mr. Newdegate and Sir J. Trelawny, the House divided, when the numbers were—for the amendment, 285; against it, 275; majority, 10. The Bill was therefore lost. The announcement of the division was received with loud cheers from the Opposition benches.—The Marriages (Ireland) Bill as amended, was considered and agreed to. The Bakehouses Regulation Bill was read a third time and passed. The Elections during Recess Bill was also read a third time and passed.—Mr. Holland obtained leave to bring in a Bill to extend the provisions and continue the terms of the Acts of the 12th and 17th Vict.

caps. 107 and 62, to prevent the Spreading of Contagion among Sheep, Cattle, and other Animals.

THURSDAY.—Naval Architecture.—Lord C. PAGET, in reply to Sir J. PAKINGTON, said that the Admiralty were impressed with the necessity that some steps should be taken for reviving the School of Naval Architecture, but that no distinct proposal with that object had yet been laid before them. In reply to a question by Lord R. MONTAGU, his lordship said that although the collection of naval models at Somerset House was in a limited space, still there was no foundation for the assertion publicly made by Mr. Scott Russell, that the models were thrust down into a dark cellar and effectually kept out of sight.—In answer to Mr. LOCKE, Mr. COWPER stated that it was intended to complete Carlton House Terrace upon the vacant ground where the Riding School formerly stood, but that he should not propose the continuation of the carriage way from the mall in St. James's Park to Charing Cross. The Peterhoff Mail Bags.—Mr. W. FORSTER inquired if the rumours were correct that the Foreign Office had that afternoon received a satisfactory despatch from America relative to the seizure of mail bags?—Mr. LAYARD, amidst general cheering, said he was happy to be able to state that the Government had received information from Lord Lyons that the mail-bags seized in the Peterhoff would be forwarded to their destination without being opened. The Proposed Tax on Charities.—On the order for the second reading of the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill, Lord R. CECIL complained that the Bill proposed to tax the charities of the country in a novel and oppressive manner. In the case of St Bartholomew's Hospital alone the imposition of the tax would deprive hundreds of in-patients and thousands of out-patients of the benefits of the charity.—Sir H. WILLOUGHBY expressed his disapproval of the proposal, and remarked that the Chancellor of the Exchequer was much too prone to apply small blisters of taxation to the ratepayers of the country.—Sir F. CROSSLEY feared that the tax would inflict a great injustice, especially in the case of alms-houses.—Mr. HUBBARD commented upon the proposed new arrangement for the imposition of the income tax, which he described as a tissue of inconsistencies, at variance alike with principles and precedent.—Sir J. FERGUSSON recommended the Chancellor of the Exchequer to give the trustees of public charities fuller information as to what extent they would be affected by the tax.—Mr. BAINES was willing to accept the general financial scheme of the Government; at the same time he could not but regard the tax upon charities as an impost upon religion and benevolence. After a few words from the LORD MAYOR on behalf of the City charities the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, referring to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, said it would be taxed upon an income of 36,000*l.* per annum, and would have to pay about 700*l.* a year, which would be levied before it reached the hands of the trustees. The ground upon which the Government were prepared to stand in regard to the proposals to which objections had been urged was simply the ground of their justice to the community. If they were just to the country at large let the House adopt them; if they were not just, let them be rejected. He went into a variety of explanations relative to the operation of the income tax upon the several interests concerned, and said he would on Monday make a full exposition of the details of the proposed scheme in regard to charities.—Mr WALPOLE thought the great question to be considered was, whether they were to treat the recipients of charity as separate individuals or as persons receiving an amount of income which ought to pay the tax. In answer to a question from Sir S. NORTHCOTE, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that the portion of endowments which he proposed to tax were those which were permanent sources of income only, and that he did not intend to impose any tax upon voluntary contributions to the charities.—After a few words from Lord H. VANE, Sir M. FARQUHAR, and Mr. HENLEY, in opposition to the proposed tax on charities, the Bill was read a second time.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in moving the committee on the Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill, explained that the object of the measure was to make a certificate of stock payable to bearer as negotiable a security as a Bank of England note. It was proposed to prohibit trustees from dealing with the stock, and to take all needful precautions against fraud.—Mr HODGSON (Governor of the Bank of England) expressed his approval of the Bill, which he said would have the effect of largely increasing investments in the public funds. The Bill was subsequently passed through committee, and ordered to be reported on Monday. The Telegraph Bill, after some opposition from Lord A. CHURCHILL, was read a third time and passed. The Consolidated Fund (20,000,000*l.*) Bill, and the Exchequer Bonds (1,000,000*l.*) Bill passed through committee. On the order for the committee on the Borough Residence Uniform Measurement Bill, Mr. Collins, who had charge of the Bill, not being present, Mr. M'CANN moved, and Mr. DENMAN seconded, a motion that the order for the committee be discharged.—Mr. VANCE protested against what he termed the sharp practice of hon. gentlemen opposite, which, he said, was as unusual as it was discourteous.—Sir M. W. RIDLEY moved, as an amendment, that the debate be adjourned.—Mr. COLLINS, who arrived a few minutes before 10 o'clock, and whose appearance was the signal for cheers and laughter, spoke at some length in support of the Bill, and avowedly with the view of giving his friends time to come up.—Mr. BOUVERIE recommended that the motion and the amendment should be withdrawn, so that the House might divide on the question of going into Committee on the Bill. He commented with some severity on the conduct of Mr. Collins—first, for not being in his place when the order was called; and, secondly, for abusing the indulgence of the House by speaking against time.—Sir J. PAKINGTON approved of the recommendation to withdraw the original motion and the amendment, but reminded Mr. Bouverie that, although he had himself given notice of an amendment to oppose the Bill, he was not in his place at the proper time to move it. The motion and the amendment having been withdrawn, Mr. BOUVERIE moved that the Bill be committed that day six months. On a division the motion was carried by 1[illegible] to 1[illegible]. The Bill was therefore lost. The House went into Committee on Mr Whiteside's Judgments Law Amendment (Ireland) Bill, but after a few clauses had been gone through the CHAIRMAN was ordered to report progress.

FRIDAY.—There not being 40 members present at 4 o'clock, the SPEAKER declared the House adjourned until Monday.

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

THE PRINCE CONSORT MEMORIAL.—The Committee appointed by the Queen to consider the best means of giving effect to her Majesty's wishes in respect to a Memorial to the Prince Consort, have presented their third report to her Majesty, stating the result of their recent proceedings. The report, which is signed by the Earl of Derby, the Earl of Clarendon, Sir C. L. Eastlake, and Mr. Cubitt, M.P., reviews at some length the designs submitted to them, and then refers as follows to Mr. George Gilbert Scott's design of a Gothic Cross:—

"We now proceed to notice, as especially worthy of your Majesty's favourable consideration, a magnificent design, by Mr. Scott, for a Gothic Cross, the statue being within the structure, but open to view, and, in a great measure, open to the air. While admitting the somewhat sepulchral character of what are called Gothic Crosses, we cordially appreciate the feeling which led Mr. Scott to adopt in his design, to use his own words, 'the style of the most touching monuments ever erected in this country to a Royal Consort,' and to give to an architectural structure the character of a vast shrine expressive of the value attached to the statue which it protects. We, therefore, do not dwell on the objection likely to be urged, of a certain want of originality in a monument of this kind, because we believe that the beauty of this example, if it could be carried into execution without sacrificing the richness and completeness of its effect, would abundantly compensate for any actual or imagined resemblance to other structures coming under the denomination of a Gothic Cross. It will be observed that Mr Scott's proposed monument is not essentially connected with any present or proposed buildings on the south side of the public road. But, inasmuch as it would correspond with the central line of the area on that side—the statue, of course, fronting in that direction—we conceive that the required connexion might be sufficiently attained by the arrangement of the immediately surrounding ground; and, although the isolated and independent character of the structure in itself would seem to fit it for any open situation, we by no means consider such a circumstance of sufficient weight to open again the question of site. A Gothic monument in the position already assigned for the Memorial might, in the opinion of some judges, involve as a consequence that the Hall, if ever to be built, should be similar in style to the Memorial, and consequently, again, dissimilar from the buildings already in existence on the estate of the Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851. We think, however, that the intervening space might be a sufficient reason for some change of style, if desirable, in the Hall. Having noticed these general but, as we consider, not insuperable difficulties, we come to a much more formidable objection: the cost of Mr. Scott's proposed Memorial, after reducing the height from 185 to 148 feet,—an alternative proposed in his printed description,—and not without some other changes, cannot, we fear, be estimated at much less than double the amount subscribed. To this must be added that no calculation is made for the cost of laying out the ground (in this case an indispensable addition), nor for that of straightening the public road. Under these circumstances we still think we are bound to submit our opinion, in the first place, as to the relative merit of the designs. That opinion, after a careful and repeated comparison of these designs, considered irrespectively of cost, is in favour of that by Mr. Scott. The difficulties which present themselves in regard to the estimate can only be met, first, by abandoning for the present the project of a Hall; and, secondly, by such an addition to the present available amount as would secure the completion of Mr. Scott's monument without sacrificing its chief characteristics. It is not without extreme regret that we regard, even as a possibility, the indefinite postponement of a project which his Royal Highness the Prince Consort appeared so earnestly to contemplate. In relinquishing the objects of utility to science and art which the Hall and its accompaniments would have unquestionably promoted, and in recommending the adoption of Mr Scott's design, we have the consolation of reflecting that we in some measure revert to your Majesty's original intention in proposing the erection of a monument, in the usual acceptation of the word, with groups of statuary round its base. But, we repeat, even for the execution of such a monument alone the sum contributed will be insufficient. It would be unbecoming on our part to offer any suggestion as to the means by which that sum might be augmented; but we venture to think that the liberality of Parliament would not be appealed to in vain, and that by the aid of the House of Commons the monument would assume a character in all respects national, and thus be worthy of the Prince to whose memory it will be dedicated."

In reply to this report the following letter has been addressed to the committee by the Hon. General Grey on behalf of the Queen.

"Lieut.-General Grey has received the commands of the Queen to acknowledge the receipt of the report of the committee appointed to give her Majesty their assistance in the consideration of questions relative to the national Memorial to the Prince Consort. Her Majesty has directed that her best thanks may be returned to the committee for the valuable services which they have rendered and the advice which they have submitted to her Majesty. The Queen very fully participates in the regret expressed by the committee that it has been ound necessary to abandon for the present the idea of the central Hall, which, combined with a personal memorial, would have appeared to unite the tribute of national gratitude with the objects in which the great and good Prince took the strongest interest, and would also have for ever associated with the Memorial the recollections of the Exhibition of 1851. This regret is, however, modified by the expectation that, whenever the Commissioners of 1851 may be in a position to appropriate the vacant space north of the conservatory in the Royal Horticultural Gardens to the purposes for which the estate was purchased, a hall may still form part of the buildings to be erected there. The personal memorial to the Prince was always the first object, and the Queen never contemplated the combination of the central hall until that was adequately provided for. Under these circumstancees the Queen is happy to see that the committee have recommended for selection the design of Mr. Scott, to which her Majesty had already given the preference among the many beautiful designs submitted for her judgment."

The American Minister and the Shipping Trade.—The Times states that the difficulties occasioned by the recent proceedings of Mr. Adams, the United States Minister, in issuing a certificate or pass to a vessel bound to Matamoras in Mexico, are likely to be removed. It is reported that Mr. Adams is conscious of having acted in the matter upon imperfect representations and with undue haste, and that, consequently, he raises no pretensions such as would necessitate any absolute protest from Her Majesty's Government to that of Washington on the subject. It is, therefore, believed that the friendly relations between the Cabinet and the United States' Legation in London will continue unimpaired.

The White Nile Expedition.—A telegraphic despatch from Alexandria has been received at the Foreign Office, announcing that Captains Speke and Grant have completed their arduous journey across Eastern and Central Africa, from Zanzibar to Khartum, by the White Nile, where they had arrived in safety.

Lancashire Relief Fund.—At the meeting of the Mansion House Committee on Friday their recent resolution to devote 5000*l*. to the purposes of emigration brought upon them a host of applications from various parts of the country, but the committee declined to afford help in any instance where a society was not fully formed and the emigrants were ready to start. They voted relief to the amount of 3,565*l*. to several local committees.

Sale of the Bicknell Collection.—The renowned collection of English pictures and sculpture of the late Mr. Elkanah Bicknell, of Herne Hill, was, by order of the executors, disposed of on Saturday, at the rooms of Messrs. Christie & Manson, in King Street, St. James's. The sale attracted great interest, and the large room was crowded to excess. The prices realised by the principal pictures were enormous. Ten pictures by J. M. W. Turner, R.A., realised 17,361*l*. 10*s*. Ten pictures by David Roberts, R.A., realised 5276*l*. 5*s*.; three pictures by Sir E. Landseer, 6646*l*. 10*s*.; two by T. Webster, R.A., 2897*l*. 10*s*.; two by W. Collins, R.A., 2236*l*. 10*s*.; one by C. R. Leslie, R.A., 1323*l*.; four by Clarkson Stanfield, R.A., 6405*l*.; and the others in proportion. The whole collection realised the enormous sum of 58,600*l*. The water-colour drawings are now on sale.

Execution at Newgate.—Joseph Brookes was executed on Monday morning at Newgate for the murder of the policeman at Acton. He denied his guilt up to the latest moment, and even addressed a memorial to Sir George Grey, attempting to explain away the facts against him. It was not till he stood on the scaffold, with the halter round his neck and the cap over his eyes, that all hope of a reprieve forsook him, and he felt it useless to brave out the matter any longer. Calling the chaplain to his side, he whispered that he was guilty, and that it was he who fired the shot. They were his last words. The crowd was not so large as usual, few women were present, and there was, comparatively, little disorder.

The Public Health.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week that ended Saturday, April 25, were 1408, including 65 deaths from small-pox, 65 from scarlatina, and 58 from measles. The average number in the corresponding week of the 10 years 1853-62, corrected for increase of population, was 1286. The present return is therefore 122 above the average. During the week the births of 958 boys and 1005 girls, in all 1963 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1853-62 the average number was 1933.

Provincial.

Ashton-under-Lyne.—Three of the Ashton rioters were tried at the Salford New Bailey Sessions on the 16th ult. Their offences were of the same character as that of the men tried at Chester. Two of them were sentenced to three months and the other to six months' imprisonment.

Aylesbury.—The parish church of Waddesdon, which has been completely restored, at a cost of upwards of 1600*l*., was re-opened on the 7th inst. The Bishop of Oxford preached an appropriate sermon on the occasion to a crowded congregation, and a public luncheon was afterwards given, at which the Duke of Marlborough presided, supported by the Bishop of Oxford, the Duke of Buckingham, Mr. Disraeli, M.P., Sir Harry Verney, M.P., Sir T. F. Fremantle, Archdeacon Bickersteth, and a large number of the neighbouring clergy and gentry. After the usual loyal and local toasts, Mr. Disraeli, in returning thanks for the toast of his health, spoke as follows on the work of the Church :—

"I had hoped that in coming into the country I was getting away from the House of Commons, but I should be insensible if I did not feel grateful for being reminded that I have the great distinction of representing you in that assembly. I am sure Sir Harry Verney will agree with me that in all the labours of political life, whatever may be the excitement of the immediate object, whatever the feelings that may animate us at the moment, at the bottom of our hearts, on whatever side of the House we may sit, the predominant sentiment is anxiety that we may obtain the regard and respect of those among whom we live. But allow me to say, forgetting the House of Commons for a moment, this is not my first visit to Waddesdon. I cannot be insensible to the great and striking change that has taken place in this parish and in this county. Twenty years ago I recollect a sorry village with a dilapidated church. But now I find all the signs and symbols of progress; houses rebuilt and greatly improved, gardens distinguished by their beauty and exuberance, and, above all, that divine building, under whose roof we have assembled to-day, partaking in the steady improvement that we see everywhere in this county. But, what is still more gratifying is to observe that the change which has taken place in this village and this district is not merely a material change. Twenty years ago the village I venture to describe was inhabited by a lawless populace,—a suffering, and, perhaps, because suffering, a lawless populace. I find it to-day, from all I hear and from much that I can observe, animated by that sense of duty which is the only foundation of prosperity. I find in this comparatively small district as great a change, and for the better, has taken place as possibly can be noticed in any part of the country. I think I am justified in saying that in this community, as in many others we may principally attribute this great and beneficial change to the influence of the Church of this country. Much has been done, and it has been done by the Church in its largest and truest sense, by that union between clergy and laity without which nothing can be done, and with which everything that is desirable can be accomplished. Well, then, that is a state of affairs which may, I think, give us the greatest satisfaction, and we should recollect to whom we are indebted for this great amelioration. His Grace has referred in befitting terms to the character and conduct of my right reverend friend the Bishop of Oxford. He is the soul of the diocess which he rules, and all England recognises the great and advantageous consequences of that supervision. But we must also remember how much we are indebted to the gentleman who is the incumbent of this parish. It is, I am sure, a complete reward to him that he finds how his great efforts are recognised by his neighbours. I am sure what has happened to-day, while rewarding him for the past, will animate him to fresh exertions for the future. But remember that in the hierarchy of the Church every gradation has its specific duties, and without these specific duties being fulfilled, without that hearty co-operation which is so necessary, these desirable results will not be obtained. There are intermediate gradations of the utmost importance, on whom devolve high duties, on the complete understanding and fulfilment of which the great work of the Established Church of this country greatly depends. There are archdeacons—an office which has sometimes seemed insignificant in point of influence, though important as an office, for want of a due comprehension of its duties, or of zeal and energy in their performance. In this county we have an archdeacon—I am proud to say it, even in his presence—who duly comprehends his duty, and is zealous and earnest in the performance of it. There is also another gradation in our ecclesiastical hierarchy on whom the good working of our ecclesiastical polity mainly depends, and I may say that in this county the beneficial effects of the institution of that office, and the due fulfilment of what is incumbent on the individual who holds it are seen to be of the highest importance—I mean the rural deans. There is no office which, when filled by individuals who are conscious of the duties of the post they occupy, has contributed more to that signal revival of Church principles and of true Church sentiment which we see than that of the rural deans."

Kirkdale.—The execution of M'Phail and Woods for the murder of an old woman at the village of Ribchester, took place on Saturday in front of Kirkdale Gaol, in the presence of a large crowd. Both men confessed that they were with the party that went to rob the poor woman's house, but denied that they struck the blow.

Liverpool.—The steamer Alexandra has been appraised at 9500*l*. The cause of seizure as stated in the appraisement filed in the Court of Exchequer is "being equipped, furnished, and fitted out with intent to be employed in the service of persons exercising, or assuming to exercise, the powers of self-government in and over a foreign State, colony, province, or people."

Manchester.—At the monthly meeting of the Central Relief Committee on Monday, Mr. Commissioner Farnall reported that there was a decrease in the number of persons receiving parochial relief in 27 unions in the cotton districts, as compared with the previous week, of 4404. The honorary secretary reported that 16 packages of clothing, 96 barrels of flour, 6 boxes of bacon, and 6 hampers of wine, were sent off last week to the local committees. The receipts of the week had been 3819*l*. 14*s*. 3*d*., and the balance at the bank was 402,812*l*. 10*s*. 4*d*. Various grants were made to the distressed districts.

Penzance.—An inquest has been held on the bodies of the nine men and a boy who were killed by the breaking of a chain by which they were drawn to the surface. The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.

Portsmouth.—A court was held on Monday on board her Majesty's ship Victory, for the trial of Lieutenant Charles Hill, and the surviving officers and crew of her Majesty's ship Orpheus at present in England, for the recent loss of that ship on the bar of Manukau Harbour in New Zealand. After hearing a mass of evidence the Court found that her Majesty's ship Orpheus was lost by striking on the Manukau bar when going over it in the absence of pilot boats, that no blame whatever was attached to Commodore Burnet, or any of her officers and crew; that the conduct of every officer, seaman and marine, man and boy on board was deserving of the very highest praise, and that Lieutenant Hill and the surviving officers and crew were therefore fully and honourably acquitted. Lieutenant Hill was then called to the table and presented with his sword. The President said that the duty he had to perform was gratifying to him, and that he only expressed the feelings of the entire Court when he said they felt that the sword could not be intrusted to better or more worthy hands.

Preston.—On Thursday week the men resumed work, and the town is quiet again. It is stated that of the persons taken into custody for participation in the riot not one is a factory hand.

Ryde.—Brookfield House, Binstead, the marine seat of Lord Burghley, was destroyed by fire on Thursday morning. The furniture and effects were saved. No lives were lost.

Sheffield.—An engraver of this town, named Hides, and one of his workman, named Light, were brought before the magistrates a few days since on a charge of forging the American Government notes, known as "Greenbacks." The history of the case was traced by means of persons who had been employed by the prisoners in engraving and printing the notes, and who, suspecting that something was wrong, gave information to the American Minister. The prisoners were remanded, bail being refused.

The late Trial for Inciting to Murder.—Mrs. Dickinson, the lady whose name was mentioned on the trial of Joseph Harcourt at the last Commission for inciting persons to murder her husband, has instituted a suit in the Consistorial Court for divorce a mensâ et thoro on the grounds of cruelty and adultery. The proceedings were commenced on Saturday by the formal lodging of the libel.

Miscellaneous.

Dwellings of the Working Classes.—A practical experiment in the way of providing comfortable and commodious dwellings for working men in the metropolis, and on terms quite within the means of that class of the community, has recently been brought under public notice in the presence of Lord Ebury, Lord Radstock, Mr. Kinnaird, M.P.; Alderman Finnis, Mr. Scott, Chamberlain of London; Mr. W. A. Wilkinson, Mr. Samuel Morley, Mr. Gregson, M.P.; Mr. Chichester Fortescue, M.P.; Mr. Frederick Byng, Mr. Edwin Chadwick, and other gentlemen. The building in question, which is one of a series of similar blocks in contemplation, has been erected at the sole expense of Alderman Waterlow, who first secured a lease for 99 years of a large plot of ground in Mark Street, Finsbury, and demolished a lot of wretched dwellings which encumbered the ground. On part of the site so cleared, he has erected the first block, consisting of 20 houses for so many families, at a cost of only 2000*l*. in round numbers, or about 110*l*. for each house, and has called it "Langbourn Buildings," after the name of the ward which recently elected him as its Alderman. In designing the building especial care has been taken to divest it as much as possible of a distinctive and exclusive air, and although it now presents an unavoidable contrast with the mean and ricketty hovels which surround it, yet when the intended blocks are added, and the plan completely carried out, the general appearance will be that of a handsome and lofty street, harmonising throughout in its external design. A marked feature in the design of this particular building is that each of the 20 houses in it contains within itself every kind of domestic office and convenience. The tenants in fact have nothing in common but a winding staircase leading from the ground to their several houses and to a fine flat commodious roof for purposes of recreation, drying clothes, &c. To each tier or flat, rising one above another, there is a balcony in front, which gives to the whole structure a picturesque appearance. The rent of each house varies from 5*s*. to 6*s*. 6*d*. a week. In the erection of the block recourse has been had to a new material in the floors, stairs, &c., without the use of which the cost would have precluded such a return on the outlay as would justify and in fact recommend the repetition of the experiment on a larger scale. The whole exterior is built of the finest bricks, but by the use of a kind of artificial stone in the interior the cost of the whole structure is said to have been reduced by at least 25 per cent. This new material is said to be extremely hard, durable, and light. It is composed of clinkers, culm, hard broken coke, and similar substances, in the proportion of four parts of these to one of Portland cement. It is moulded in troughs for the purpose of giving it any desired form, such as lintels, arches, chimney-pieces, window-sills, slabs, and so forth. To afford an idea of the extraordinary cheapness of this material it is said that the arches and lintels throughout the whole building have been supplied and fixed in their places at the cost of what would have been spent in labour alone if ordinary brick arches had been employed. Besides the primary object of affording dwellings of superior comfort and convenience to so many of the working classes, Alderman Waterlow has the ulterior purpose in view, on which he lays great stress, of convincing others, and especially capitalists, that it is a mode of investing money insuring a profitable return—it may be of 8*l*. or 9*l*. per cent. He repudiates every consideration of charity as offensive to the working classes themselves, whom it is sought to benefit, and as having militated against almost every other similar enterprise designed for their benefit by benevolent men. He shows on a careful estimate that the receipts for rent for a year on the block of houses he has just erected will be 309*l.* odd, and the expenditure in ground rent, rates, insurance, repairs, &c., 125*l.*; leaving a balance of 184*l.*, or exceeding 9 per cent. He is also of opinion that the trustees of the Peabody Fund should not expend money in erecting buildings, but in purchasing ground and granting leases of it in perpetuity, taking in all cases a covenant from the lessees that it should never be diverted from this especial purpose, so that in every instance it might for all time be called "the poor man's site."

Markets.

COVENT GARDEN, May 2.

Vegetables of good quality continue to make their appearance in great abundance, and importations of foreign goods are also well kept up. Apples and Pears are now scarce; among the former good samples of Newtown Pippin may still be had. Oranges though tolerably plentiful, with the exception of the Tangerine, are dear. Cucumbers are cheap. Pine Apples and Grapes are sufficient for the demand, which, under present high prices, is limited. Old Potatoes are from 10s. to 20s. per cwt. lower than they were last week; large supplies of new Potatoes are making their appearance. Cornish Broccoli is still coming in by the crateful. Cut flowers chiefly consist of Orchids, Pelargoniums, Cinerarias, Azaleas, Violets, Mignonette, Tulips, and Roses.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

Monday, April 27.

The number of Beasts is considerably smaller than on Monday last, and we have consequently an advance in price. Sheep are more plentiful, yet the demand is good, and Thursday's advance is fully maintained. Trade is dull for Lambs, and prices are lower. Good Calves are in request at a slight advance. From Germany and Holland there are 220 Beasts, 1960 Sheep, and 210 Calves; from Scotland, 430 Beasts; from Ireland, 43; and 3030 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

Thursday, April 30.

We are largely supplied with Beasts, consequently trade is slow. The weather being favourable there is scarcely a quotable reduction in prices; yet a clearance cannot be effected at Monday's rates. The number of Sheep is not excessive, but quite equal to the demand; prices remain unaltered. Lambs are less in demand, and on the average lower. Calves are plentiful, and trade for them is rather worse. From Germany and Holland there are 235 Beasts, 480 Sheep and 407 Calves; the number of Milch Cows is 125.

BRITISH WOOLS.—London, May 1.

HOPS.—Borough Market, Friday, May 1.

Messrs. Pattenden & Smith report a good trade for fine and middling samples of both English and foreign at rather higher prices, and lower descriptions are more inquired after.

MARK LANE.—Monday, April 27.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was small, and met a good inquiry at an improvement of 1s. per qr. upon the prices of this day se'nnight. American was in better demand at an advance of 2s. per qr. The sale of Baltic continues to be limited, and the extreme rates of last week could not be exceeded. Floating and C. F. I. cargoes were not offered, excepting at 1s. to 2s. per qr. more money, which checked business. Barley, Beans, and Peas brought our last week's quotations. Oats were in fair demand at an advance of 6d. per qr. Flour was generally held for an improved price, and American brought 6d. per barrel more money.

Friday, May 1.

The weather continued very fine and mild until the 28th ult., when it became cold, and has since continued so, with showers of rain and hail. Last night there were several degrees of frost. The reports of the growing crops are most promising, and the present cold weather is considered as very favourable by preventing the growth from being too rapid, which warm rain probably would have caused. The Wheat trade during the week has shown greater activity than of late, but no excitement; prices of Wheat throughout the kingdom are quoted either at 1s. or 1s to 2s. per qr. higher. Spring Corn fully supports the rates of last week, and Oats are generally sold at an improvement of 6d. per qr. Foreign flour must also be written 1s. per sack and 6d. per barrel dearer. Since Friday last 4 vessels have been reported off the coast. The business done in floating cargoes has been only limited, in consequence of the very small number of cargoes off the coast, but there is a better demand for all sorts of grain at improved prices. Wheat must be quoted 1s. to 2s., Maize 1s., Beans 6d., and Linseed 1s. per qr. higher than last week. In Paris (April 30), Flour has remained unaltered in price, but is very difficult to sell. The Wheat trade has been quiet, and prices must be quoted 6d. lower per 480 lbs. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 20,600 cwts. The arrivals of foreign Barley during the week have been good, but of all other grain very small. The attendance at to-day's market was limited. Monday's prices were supported both for English and foreign Wheat, but the business transacted was of a retail character. Barley, Beans, and Peas were steady at late rates. Oats were held for a slight advance, which was not responded to by purchasers, and the trade was quiet.

Liverpool, April 28.—With a good attendance of both town and country millers and dealers at this morning's market, Wheat has met a healthy consumptive sale at an advance of 3d. per cental over the currency of Friday last, whilst Flour has commanded a moderate share of attention at an improvement from 6d. to 1s. per barrel and sack. Indian Corn finds increasing favour and must be quoted 1s. to 1s. 3d. per quarter dearer. Oats bring full prices, and Oatmeal 6d. per load more money. No change in Beans, Peas, and Barley.

Friday, May 1.—The Market keeps firm, with fair demand for Wheat and Flour, at advancing rates. Beans and Indian Corn firm. Oats and Oatmeal quiet.

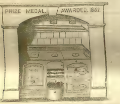
PATENT WORCESTERSHIRE RANGE.



PRIZE MEDAL, 1862, AWARDED for EXCELLENCE.

The above RANGE is most complete, and strongly recommended for its unrivalled ECONOMY, CLEANLINESS, CONVENIENCE, DURABILITY, and is a certain CURE for SMOKY CHIMNEYS.

It is an entirely new invention, and consists of large MEAT ROASTER, PASTRY OVEN, and WROUGHT-IRON BOILER. The top forms a HOT PLATE for BOILING, STEWING, &c. The whole heated by ONE SMALL FIRE. One 5 feet wide is equal to an ordinary Range 8 feet wide.

Extracted from the London Daily Telegraph, May 19, 1862.

"INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, CLASS 31.

"Of the most recent inventions it should be said that Messrs. JONES & ROWE's Patent Worcestershire Range has attracted very special attention, and has been commended by the best authorities. A valuable peculiarity of their Ranges is the placing of the OVEN and ROASTER one above the other instead of side by side; and the ROASTER is constantly replenished with fresh air."

Larger sizes of any of the above.

By an improved and new action of the handle, this Pump is so constructed that a great deal of friction is avoided; an air vessel is secured, and by introducing a brass lining into the barrel, with brass bucket and sucker, many of the objections to iron pumps are overcome. By this Pump ONE MAN WILL FORCE THE WATER in a continuous stream TO A HEIGHT OF 50 FEET.
When mounted on a barrow it forms a cheap, useful, and portable Fire Engine or Garden and Field Irrigator. The simplicity of its construction enables it to be offered to the public at a less price than any other Pump of equal capabilities.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Monday the Royal Assent was given by commission to several public and private Bills. Lord CHELMSFORD moved the recommittal of the Albert Bridge Bill. After a long discussion the motion was rejected on a division by a majority of 11, the numbers being 40 to 29. On Tuesday, in answer to Lord CHELMSFORD, Lord STANLEY OF ALDERLEY stated that the Government had accepted tenders from the Belgian and French Governments for the conveyance of the English mails between Dover and Ostend and Dover and Calais at a very reduced rate, conditional upon Parliament finding money to buy up Mr. CHURCHWARD'S contracts. On Thursday the House went into Committee on the Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill, when Lord LYVEDEN moved the omission of the clause disqualifying agents who might be found guilty of corrupt practices. On a division the motion was negatived by 66 to 22. The other clauses were agreed to with amendments, and the Bill passed through committee. Lord REDESDALE moved a resolution that the principle of charging entailed estates for railways involved questions of too much nicety and importance to be sanctioned by Parliament otherwise than by public legislation. After some discussion the motion was agreed to.

In the Commons on Monday, the House resolved itself into committee on the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill, when Clauses 1 and 2, imposing the income tax upon trades, professions, and property, were agreed to. On Clause 3, by which it was proposed to charge charitable institutions with the tax, the CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER made a long statement in favour of his proposal, contending that it was a measure agreeable to every principle of sound administration which had governed the proceedings of Parliament for more than 20 years past, that it was just to the tax-paying community, and above all just to the labouring poor, for the elevation of their character as well as the improvement of their condition. Sir S. NORTHCOTE opposed the scheme, which was also opposed by Mr. MAGUIRE, Lord H. VANE, Mr. W. MARTIN, Lord R. CECIL, Mr. DISRAELI, and Mr. HENLEY. The CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER then said that as no independent member had spoken in favour of the proposition it was not his intention to take the sense of the Committee upon the clause. Clauses 3 and 4 were then negatived. The other clauses and the schedules were agreed to, with a few amendments. The House then went into Committee on the Savings Banks Bill, and agreed to the clauses with amendments. The Consolidated Fund Bill and the Exchequer Bonds Bill were read a third time and passed. On Tuesday Mr. WALTER moved two resolutions to the effect that the sums voted by Parliament for education ought to be applicable to all the poorer schools in which the attendance and examination exhibit the results required under the Revised Code; and that to require the employment of certificated teachers or pupil teachers by school managers as an indispensable condition of their participation in the Capitation Grant is inexpedient and unjust to the managers of such schools. Mr. LOWE opposed the motion. After a long discussion the first resolution was withdrawn, and the second was negatived on a division by 152 to 117. Mr. BOUVERIE moved that the House go into Committee upon that portion of the Act of Uniformity which required the heads of colleges and others to make a declaration of conformity to the Liturgy, his object being to bring in a Bill for the repeal of that requirement, with the view of admitting dissenters to the endowments and government of the Universities. On a division the motion was carried by 157 to 135. The House then went into Committee, when leave was given to bring in the Bill. The Marquis of HARTINGTON obtained leave to bring in a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Volunteer Corps. On Wednesday Mr. NEWDEGATE moved the second reading of his Church Rates Commutation Bill. Sir C. DOUGLAS moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. On a division, the amendment was carried by 94 to 56. The Bill was therefore lost. Mr. ALCOCK then moved the second reading of the Church Rates Redemption Bill. After some discussion the motion was negatived on a division by 81 to 72. The Bill was consequently lost. The House having gone into Committee on the Security from Violence Bill, Mr. PEACOCKE moved to amend the first clause by making the infliction of corporal punishment applicable only to second and subsequent convictions. On a division the amendment was negatived by 191 to 37. The Bill after two more divisions passed through Committee, and was ordered to be reported to the House. The Marriages Registration (Ireland) Bill and the Admiralty Court (Ireland) Bill were read a second time. On Thursday, on the order for going into Committee on the Prison Ministers' Bill, Mr. R. LONG moved as an amendment that the House resolve itself into committee that day six months. After a long debate, the amendment was negatived by 172 to 141. The House went into Committee, when Mr. MURE moved an amendment that the Bill be limited to England. The amendment was negatived on a division by 96 to 55. Mr. HUNT moved an amendment that there should be no regular appointment of a particular minister, and that there should be no payment. On a division the amendment was negatived by 96 to 80. Mr. BENTINCK moved the omission of the words making the payment to Ministers a charge on the county or borough rates. On a division the amendment was negatived by 101 to 71. The CHAIRMAN was then ordered to report progress. The Inland Revenue Bill was read a second time. The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill was further considered, and certain verbal amendments were introduced. The Savings Banks Moneys Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Prince of Wales, attended by the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, walked to the House of Lords from Marlborough House, and remained until just before the division on the Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill. The Prince was warmly cheered by the people on his arrival and departure. In the evening their Royal Highnesses honoured the performance at the Haymarket Theatre with their presence. The Prince and Princess have accepted an invitation from the Lord Mayor and Corporation to be present at a ball to be given by the City authorities in Guildhall, in honour of their Royal Highnesses, on the 1st of June. It is said that there is no foundation for the report which has appeared in some foreign journals of an intended visit of the Prince and Princess to the Emperor of the French at Fontainebleau.

THE PRINCE OF ORANGE, travelling under the title of Count van Buren, arrived in London on Thursday. His Royal Highness is staying at the Palace Hotel.

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street. A Committee of the Cabinet Council held a meeting on Wednesday, at the office of the Secretary of State for War in Pall Mall.

PARLIAMENTARY MOVEMENTS.—Mr. Edward O'Neill has been elected member for Antrim, in the room of Lord Templetown, without opposition.

LORD LIEUTENANCY.—It is stated that the Earl of Harrowby, K.G., is selected to be the Lord-Lieutenant of Staffordshire, in the room of the late Lord Hatherton.

THE ARMY.—General the Right Hon. Sir George Brown has been appointed Colonel of the 32d Regiment, and Colonel-in-Chief of the Rifle Brigade, in the room of the late Field-Marshal Lord Seaton. Lieutenant-General Sir Charles Yorke has been appointed to succeed Sir George Brown as Colonel Commandant of the Rifle Brigade, and has been succeeded in the Colonelcy of the 33d Foot by Major-General William Nelson Hutchinson.

COLONIAL APPOINTMENTS.—Sir Henry Barkly has been transferred from the Governorship of Victoria to that of Mauritius, vacant by the death of Sir William Stevenson; and Sir Charles Darling has been promoted from the Government of Jamaica to that of Victoria. The period of service of each Governor in their respective colonies had expired. Admiral Elliott, who commanded the naval forces in China during the first China war, has been appointed Governor of St. Helena; and Captain Maxse, who acted as aide-de-camp to Lord Cardigan in the famed Balaklava charge, has been appointed Governor of Heligoland.

THE POLISH QUESTION.—The following is a translation of the Russian reply to the English Note on the state of Poland, addressed to Baron Brunnow, the Russian Minister in London :—

St. Petersburg, April 14, 1863.

"M. le Baron,—On the morning of the 5th (17th) of April Lord Napier delivered to me a copy, herewith enclosed, of a despatch from her Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State relative to the present situation of the kingdom of Poland. The first part of this document is devoted to a retrospective examination of the question of right. The second expresses the wish that peace may be restored to the kingdom of Poland, and established on a lasting basis. I will reply to these two points of Lord Russell's despatch. As regards the question of right, her Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State reproduces the arguments already recorded in his despatch of the 2d of March. I can, therefore, refer to the observations which I then made to the Ambassador of England. The Government of her Britannic Majesty takes a position on ground where the Imperial Cabinet will never hesitate to meet it—that of treaties. Nevertheless, it is here a question less of the text than of the interpretation of treaties. We have the right not to admit without reservation every interpretation which it might be wished to give them. Lord Russell says in his despatch that, by Article 1 of the General Act signed at Vienna, the 28th of May (9th of June), 1815, 'the Duchy of Warsaw was erected into a kingdom of Poland, to be inseparably attached to the Empire of Russia under certain conditions.' Now, this is what the Act of Congress of Vienna stipulates in respect to those conditions:—'Poles, subjects of Russia, Austria, and Prussia respectively, shall enjoy representation and shall obtain national institutions to be determined in conformity with the political existence which each of the Governments to which they belong shall consider it useful and expedient to grant to them.' The Emperor Alexander I. developed these principles in accordance with his personal views. He granted to Poland the Constitution of the 12th (24th) of December, 1815. It was a spontaneous act of his sovereign will, and it did not constitute an irrevocable engagement towards foreign Powers, inasmuch as the Act of the Constitution, posterior to the Treaty of Vienna, was not even communicated to them. Lord Russell contests the principle according to which the revolt of Poland in 1830, having resulted in the declaration of the forfeiture of the sovereign dynasty, should be held to annul the bases of political existence granted in virtue of the Act of Vienna. Although history has more than once confirmed this conclusion of natural right, theory may afford matter for controversy. We think it may be laid down that if the revolt does not invalidate the national engagements, it at any rate annuls the spontaneous development of them which had been generously added, and which have led to fatal results to Poland and to Russia. But the Principal Secretary of State of her Britannic Majesty gives to this argument a prominent place in his despatch, while I had only incidentally put it forward in the course of my conversation with Lord Napier. The English Ambassador alludes to it in the following terms in the despatch which he had the goodness to communicate to me:—'Prince Gortschakoff also said to me that, desiring to treat this question in a spirit of conciliation and humanity, he had abstained from employing an argument which lay at his disposal—that of the right of conquest.' Moreover, everything has been said on both sides in this discussion, and to prolong it on that ground would be a useless task. I proceed to the second part of Lord Russell's despatch. The design of our august master is to arrive at a practical solution. We assume that such is also the desire of the Government of her Britannic Majesty. Since its aim is to see assured to the kingdom of Poland the repose and welfare which are the objects of the solicitude of his Majesty the Emperor, it appears to us difficult not to arrive at an understanding. The difference in our points of view lies in the fact that the English Government appears to believe that the Constitution of 1815 is the sole panacea calculated to calm the present agitation of Poland. But the English Government and nation, whose practical good sense has founded the greatness of England, can hardly assert that there is only one form of government possible for all peoples, whatever may be their history and development. Before arriving at the political maturity of which England offers the example, there are many degrees to pass through, and each nation must proceed in this path according to its own instincts. It is just and natural that a Sovereign, animated by the most benevolent intentions, should calculate the bearing and extension of institutions destined to place his subjects in the most favourable conditions of existence. The idea of our august master has been shown ever since his accession to the throne, and cannot be ignored by any one in Europe. His Majesty has resolutely entered upon the path of reform. Relying upon the trust and devotion of his people, he has undertaken and accomplished in a few years a social transformation which other States have only been able to realise after a long lapse of time and many efforts. His solicitude has not ceased there. A system of gradual development has been applied to all the branches of the public service, and to existing institutions. It opens to Russia the prospect of a regular progress. The Emperor perseveres in it without precipitation or impulse (entraînement), taking into account the elements which it is the work of time to prepare and mature, but without ever deviating from the line he has traced for himself. This measure has conciliated to him the gratitude and affection of his subjects. We think it gives him a title to the sympathies of Europe. The same designs have not ceased to influence his Majesty since his solicitude has been brought to bear upon the kingdom of Poland. We shall not enter here into an enumeration of the national institutions, for the most part elective, with which this country has been endowed. They do not appear to have been sufficiently understood in Europe, either on account of remoteness, or rather because chimerical passions and the interested labours of a hostile party have stood in the way of an equitable and impartial judgment. The system inaugurated by our august master contains a germ which time and experience must develop. It is destined to lead to an administrative autonomy on the basis of the provincial and municipal institutions which in England have been the starting point and the foundation of the greatness and prosperity of the country. But in the execution of this idea the Emperor has encountered obstacles, which are found principally in the agitations of the party of disorder. This party has understood that if it allowed the peaceable majority of the kingdom to enter upon this path of regular progress, there would be an end to their aspirations. Their intrigues have not allowed the new institutions to be carried into effect. It has been impossible to show how they work, or how far they respond to the real necessities and to the degree of maturity of the country. It is only when this experiment shall have been made that it will be possible to pass a judgment upon this work, and to complete it. The manifesto of the 31st of March indicates the wishes of our august master in this matter. By the side of an act of clemency, to which it has been possible to give a large extension since the dispersion of the most important armed bands, the Emperor has maintained in force the institutions already granted, and has declared that he reserved to himself the power of giving to them the developments indicated by time and the requirements of the country. His Majesty can, then, refer to the past in the rectitude of his conscience; as to the future, it necessarily depends on the confidence with which these institutions will be met in the Kingdom. In taking a stand upon this ground our august master considers that he acts as the best friend of Poland, as the only one whose aim it is to secure her welfare by practical means. Lord Russell calls upon Russia to discharge those duties which, as a member of European Society, she owes to foreign States. Russia is too directly interested in the tranquillity of Poland not to understand the duties of her position towards other nations. It would be difficult to assert that she has met, in this respect, with scrupulous reciprocity. The continual conspiracy which is being organised and armed abroad to keep up disorder in the kingdom is a fact of public notoriety, the inconvenience of which principally consists in the moral effects which the favourers of the insurrection deduce from it, in order to lead astray the peaceable population, by gaining credit for the belief in direct assistance from abroad. In this manner we have seen produced two influences, both equally grievous—that exercised by foreign agitation on the insurrection, and that which the continuation of the insurrection itself exercises, in its turn, upon public opinion in Europe. These two influences react one upon the other, and have ended by bringing affairs to the situation which the Powers at present point out to the vigilance of the Imperial Cabinet. It is asked of it to restore the kingdom to the conditions of a lasting peace. The Powers are inspired with this desire by the conviction that the periodical troubles of Poland cause to the States placed in the immediate vicinity of its frontiers a shock, the reaction of which is felt by the whole of Europe, that they excite the minds of the people in a disquieting manner, and that they might, if prolonged, bring about, under certain circumstances, complications of the most serious nature. The Government of her Britannic Majesty, in expressing this desire, further relies upon the engagements of 1815 which affect the condition of the different parts of Poland. We do not hesitate to declare that these wishes are entirely in accordance with those of our august master. His Majesty admits that, in the peculiar position of the kingdom the troubles which agitate it may affect the tranquillity of the adjoining States, between which were concluded on the 21st of April—3d of May, 1815, separate treaties intended to determine the condition of the Duchy of Warsaw, and that they may interest the Powers who signed the general transaction of the 18th of May—9th of June, 1815, in which were inserted the principal stipulations of these separate treaties. The Emperor believes that explanations on the basis and in the spirit of the communications which have just been addressed to us may conduce to a result conformable to the general interests. Our august master notices with satisfaction the sentiments of confidence which the Government of her Britannic Majesty testify towards him in relying upon him to bring back the kingdom of Poland to conditions which would render possible the realisation of his benevolent views. But the more the Emperor is disposed to take into account the just prepossessions of the neighbouring States, and the interest which the Powers who signed the Treaty of 1815 show in a state of things which is the cause of deep solicitude to his Majesty himself, the more our august master considers it a duty to request the serious attention, upon the true causes of this situation, and upon the means of remedying it, of the Courts who have addressed themselves with confidence to him. If the Government of her Britannic Majesty lays stress upon the reaction which the troubles of Poland exercise on the peace of Europe, we must be still more struck with the influence which the agitations of Europe have in all times had the power to exercise upon the tranquillity of Poland. Since 1815 this country has witnessed the development of a material welfare unknown until then in her annals, while other States have in the same interval undergone many interior crises. This repose was only troubled in 1830 by the consequences of commotions coming from abroad; 18 years later, in 1848, while almost the whole of Europe was convulsed by the revolution, the kingdom of Poland was able to preserve its tranquillity. We are persuaded that it would be the same at present were it not for the continual instigations of the party of cosmopolitan revolution. If this party, everywhere devoted to the overthrow of order, at present concentrates all its activity upon Poland, a grave error would be committed in supposing that its aspirations will stop short at that limit. What it seeks there is a lever to overturn the rest of Europe. Those Cabinets which attach importance to seeing the kingdom of Poland return a moment earlier to the conditions of a durable peace cannot therefore more certainly ensure the realisation of this desire than by labouring, on their side, to appease the moral and material disorder which it is sought to propagate in Europe, and thus to exhaust the main source of the agitations at which their foresight is alarmed. We entertain the firm hope that in strengthening in this respect the ties which bind them together they will effectually serve the cause of peace and of the general interests. I have the honour to request that you will communicate a copy of this despatch to the Principal Secretary of State of her Britannic Majesty.

"Receive, &c., "GORTSCHAKOFF."

FRANCE.—The following is the reply of the Russian Government to the Note of the French Government on the Polish question:—

"PRINCE GORTSCHAKOFF TO BARON DE BUDBERG AT PARIS.

"St. Petersburg, April 14 (26).

"Monsieur le Baron,—On the morning of the 5th (17th) of April the Ambassador of France communicated to me a despatch from M. Drouyn de Lhuys relative to the condition of the Kingdom of Poland. I transmit to your Excellency a copy of that document, which I immediately submitted to his Majesty the Emperor. Our august master came to the conclusion that the wishes expressed in the name of the Emperor Napoleon completely harmonise with his own. The French Government expresses, as regards the sad events which have taken place in the Kingdom of Poland, sentiments which cannot fail to be shared by every Government which is a friend to mankind. It could not for one moment entertain a doubt of the deep affliction which this state of affairs causes to our august master, of the lively solicitude with which it inspires His Majesty, nor of the ardent desire he entertains to be able to put an end to it. The French Government points out the reaction which these agitations exercise upon neighbouring States, and the anxiety to which they give rise in the rest of Europe. Our august master admits the just interest which the bordering Powers and those who co-operated in settling the state of Europe must naturally take in all complications of a nature to disturb its harmony. But the interest which Russia takes in events which touch her so nearly cannot surely be less profound, as more than all she desires to see tranquillity restored in the kingdom, and the safety of Europe assured. The Emperor Napoleon finally expresses his confidence in the liberal intentions of our august master, and is inspired with a sentiment of reserve which his Majesty appreciates when he points out to us in conclusion, the opportunity for taking measures to place Poland in the condition of a durable peace. Nothing could better respond to the wishes of the Emperor. But it is precisely upon the selection of those measures that it would be desirable to come to an understanding. The French Minister of Foreign Affairs points out the intensity of the evil and the insufficiency of the combinations hitherto imagined to reconcile Poland with the position granted to her. This is an additional motive not to recommence experiments which have been a source of misfortune to Poland as well as to Russia—a cause of troubles to Europe, and which, in all probability, would end in the same results. The evil from which the kingdom is actually suffering is not an isolated fact. The whole of Europe is infected by it. Revolutionary tendencies which are the curse of our age, are now concentrated in this country, because they find sufficient combustible materials there to give them the hope of making it the focus of a conflagration which would extend to the whole of the continent. The Government whose duty it is to cure this evil cannot devote too much attention to it, too much prudence and allowances, so as to distinguish the elements which ought to be removed as a common danger, from those the development of which, followed with perseverance and maturity, may serve to form a lasting future. Our august master has devoted himself to this task, which is connected with that which since his accession to the throne his Majesty has imposed upon himself to accomplish, so as to bring every portion of his empire into the path of regular progress. I have explained these views of our august master in the annexed despatch, which I have just addressed to the Ambassador of his Majesty in London, in reply to a communication from the Government of her Britannic Majesty analogous to that of M. Drouyn de Lhuys. By the Emperor's orders you are requested to hand a copy of that document to the French Minister of Foreign Affairs. He will see what part, according to our views, the Emperor Napoleon can take to accelerate the realisation of the wish which he expresses to us in the name of humanity, and in that of the permanent interests of Europe. He will assuredly admit that, with the elements of cosmopolite revolution spread in nearly every country, and which fix upon every point where there is a chance of disturbance or subversion, the task of restoring quiet and peace should not depend upon the efforts of a single Government, and that to ask us to extinguish a conflagration which is constantly being supplied with inexhaustible fuel from without would be to confine the question within a circle without an outlet. The concern which a French Government evinces to obviate it, the solicitude it expresses for the general interests of Europe, the friendly relations which exist between us, the sentiments of confidence in our august master contained in the despatch of the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, authorise us to hope that, appreciating the question in a high point of view, with all the difficulties it implies, and all the allowances it requires, the Emperor Napoleon will not refuse the moral support which may depend upon him, so as to facilitate to our august master the task pointed out to him by his solicitude for the kingdom of Poland, his duties towards Russia, and his international relations with his neighbours and with the great Powers of Europe. I request you to express the hope to M. Drouyn de Lhuys, and to leave him a copy of this despatch.—I am, &c. "GORTSCHAKOFF."

The Moniteur of Tuesday, in publishing this despatch and the text of the reply of Russia to England, says:—

"It is easy to be convinced, upon reading these documents, that they open a path to projects of conciliation, and that they contain the bases of negotiations likely to lead to a common understanding between the different Courts now seeking the means of upholding the legitimate interests of Poland."

The other papers are very nearly unanimous in the opinion that the documents are but the expression of a courteous and moderate refusal. The Moniteur of Tuesday contains the following article, which may be considered conclusive as to the rumours that have been afloat on the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Fontainebleau:—

"The journal La France maintains, in spite of the denials of the English journals, that the Prince and the Princess of Wales are expected at Fontainebleau. La France is misinformed. The Court of the Tuileries, notwithstanding the pleasure that such a visit would give them, have never conceived a hope of it, in the face of the duties that their Royal Highnesses have to fulfil in England in the first months that follow their recent union."

An Imperial decree was published yesterday, dissolving the Corps Legislatif, and fixing the 31st May and 1st June for the general election of deputies throughout France. The Moniteur of Friday says, in reference to the elections:—

"Several journals announce that the representatives of the sub-electoral Committees will shortly assemble, in order to elect a central committee. The Government reminds the public that the law forbids associations of more than 20 persons meeting without the consent of the public authorities, even should those associations be subdivided into sections comprising a less number; and, further, that the journals would expose themselves to legal penalties if they published the resolutions or manifestos of such associations."

The Duke of Beaufort's experiment in wolf hunting was brought to a close on the 30th ult. His Grace is said to be satisfied with the sport he has obtained, and with the warm welcome he has received at the hands of our neighbours, while the Badminster pack have proved themselves in every respect worthy of their great fame.

SPAIN.—In the sitting of the Senate on Monday Marshal Narvaez defended the course which he had followed when at the head of the Government against the attacks of the Progressist party. General Prim replied in a speech violently attacking the Administration of Marshal Narvaez. The Grenada Court of Appeal has just sentenced Matamoros to nine years imprisonment for offences against religion, and another of the co-accused to seven years' imprisonment, with deprivation of civil rights.

SWITZERLAND.—The Federal Council, in reply to the English note, inviting it to support the steps of England at St. Petersburg in favour of Poland, has stated that it is impossible to take this invitation into consideration.

AUSTRIA.—In his reply to the Austrian Note on the Polish question, Prince Gortschakoff says:—

"Count Rechberg was right, as events have shown, in anticipating that the Emperor Alexander would be disposed to show clemency to the Poles on the dispersion of the insurrectionary bands. Count Rechberg will, however, perceive that a return to order does not depend upon interior measures alone. The intrigues of the Cosmopolite party of revolution are the main source of the agitation, and the influence of the great Powers would therefore be best exercised if directed against those intrigues. The Russian Government doubts not that Austria will neglect nothing in order to put a stop to the machinations of the revolutionary party."

The remaining 40,000,000 florins of the Austrian lottery loan of 1860 were allotted at Vienna on Monday. The house of Messrs. Rothschild, having offered 102¼, was the highest bidder.

ITALY.—In the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies on Friday the Minister of Justice opposed, in the name of liberty, the Bill introduced by Father Passaglia relative to the oath of allegiance to the Government to be taken by priests. The Bill was afterwards withdrawn. In the sitting of Thursday the President announced that the following order of the day had been adopted by the Secret Committee on Brigandage:—

"The Chamber invites the Ministry to take the necessary teps that Rome may cease to be a secure asylum to conspirators against social order and peace. Italy being now engaged in the development of public works, the redemption of the burdens upon land and upon agricultural and industrial credit, tis requisite to employ every means to secure the assistance of the entire forces of the country in the repression of brigandage."

The Bill upon the subject proposed by the committee will be printed. Prince Ruggero Settimo, President of the Senate, and President of the Government of Sicily in 1848, has died at Malta. The Government has sent a frigate to convey the body to Palermo. The Pungolo of Monday publishes a despatch addressed by the Minister of the Interior to the Prefects, relative to meetings in favour of Poland. The Minister refers to the debate on the subject in Parliament, and states that the meetings in question are a pretext for agitation and for obstruction of the action of the Government. He concludes by enjoining the authorities to dissolve every political meeting of a character to endanger the interior or exterior safety of the State. The ceremony of the unveiling of the façade of Santa Croce at Florence took place on Sunday. Prince Carignan, Signor Peruzzi, and many senators and deputies were present. An immense crowd assembled on the occasion, and there was much cheering.

RUSSIA.—The Journal de St. Pétersbourg of Sunday publishes the despatches addressed by England, France, and Austria to the Cabinet of St. Petersburg on the Polish question, and the several replies given to the same by Prince Gortschakoff. Private letters received at Berlin from reliable sources state that Prince Gortschakoff, after having despatched these replies, read a confidential Note to the Ambassadors of the three Powers in St. Petersburg. This note explained the programme of reforms intended to be carried out in Poland by the Emperor. The introduction of these reforms would depend upon circumstances, although they would not be delayed after the pacification of Poland had been effected. It is said that this Note produced a good impression upon the Ambassadors of the great Powers. The Journal de St. Petersbourg of Wednesday publishes despatches from the Swedish Government of the 7th April, from the Spanish Government of the 21st March, and from the Italian Government of the 23d April, all relating to the Polish question, with the respective replies of the Russian Government to those communications. The Swedish Note relies above all upon the principles of humanity and generosity by which it is persuaded the Emperor of Russia is actuated, and expresses a conviction that the words of clemency and forgiveness, with the prospect of a rule of sagacious liberty, will suffice for the complete restoration of tranquillity and order. The reply to the Swedish Note refers to the answers forwarded to the three Western Powers upon the question. The Spanish Note deeply regrets the impatience of the Poles, who have been unable to await the continuance of the system of concessions already granted. Having seen by experience that moderation allays popular agitation more usefully than severity, the Queen asks that grace and indulgence may be shown towards the vanquished. The reply to this Note thanks the Spanish Government in friendly terms. The Note of the Italian Government is drawn up in a conciliatory spirit. It hopes that the Russian Court will see from the spirit of the despatch a proof of the desire of the Italian Government to remain upon the most friendly footing, and that entire confidence may continue to exist between them. In reply to this Note, the Emperor mentions the pleasure with which he has received the friendly expressions it contains. As regards the welfare of Poland, the Italian Government is not unaware that revolutionary efforts impose a difficult task upon the ruling Powers. The Government will endeavour to arrange the question upon a basis of lasting peace. The birthday of the Emperor has been celebrated in all the chief cities of the Empire, and loyal manifestations have taken place throughout the provinces. In the answer given by the Emperor in reply to an address presented to him on the occasion by the nobility, the municipality of St. Petersburg, the corporations, and the peasantry, his Majesty said:—"The only object of my life is the welfare of our dear fatherland, and the gradual development of our civil institutions." An imperial ukase was published on Friday, directing that corporal punishments shall in future only be employed in exceptional cases. General Berg has asked the Government to replace all civil functionaries in the Polish provinces by military officials.

POLAND.—A rumour was current at Warsaw that the Government intended to issue a manifesto on the 13th inst., ordering the reorganisation of the police, gendarmes, and peasants. The manifesto would, it was said, further order the confiscation of the property of insurgent landed proprietors, and the levying of a contribution throughout Poland. According to an order of the day of the insurgent chief Taczanowski, a battle was fought with the Russians at Pyzdvy on the 30th ult., which lasted eight hours. The victory was decided in favour of the insurgents by the scythemen. Tanier d'Abiu and Strzelecki specially distinguished themselves among the insurgents. On the 2d inst. the corps of Taczanowski was defeated near Bincszeno, and Taczanowski himself was wounded. On the 1st inst. Jezioranski defeated the Russians near Zamek, close to the Galician frontier. The loss of the Russians was 90 killed and wounded. On the 2d Jezioranski defeated the Russians at Kobylanka, in the palatinate of Lublin. 90 Russians were killed, and were honourably interred by the insurgents. A Russian detachment having entered Austrian territory at Lublinied, in order to surround the insurgents, was completely dispersed. On the 6th a sanguinary battle was fought at Tepely, in the Palatinate of Sandomir, between the Russians, 3500 strong, and the insurgents, under Jezioranski, in which the Russians lost 400 killed and wounded, and the Poles 100. The Russians retreated to Tomaszow. During the two previous days there had been partial encounters at Lami and Zamek, the Russians manouvring to surround the Poles, but they were forced to a general engagement by Jezioranski, and beaten. The insurrectionary movement has extended beyond the River Duna. On the 26th ult. the insurgents stopped a railway train near Dupnow and took from it 900 Russian rifles. On Friday Lelewel, with the insurgents under his command, was surrounded and defeated by 2000 Russian troops. Lelewel was wounded, but escaped, together with 120 men. A serious engagement took place between the insurgents and the Russians on Monday opposite Beuthen, a town upon the Oder, in Prussian Silesia. The forces of the hostile parties were drawn up in order of battle. The Russians lost all their artillery and vehicles. Some hundreds of the fugitives passed over on to Prussian territory and were disarmed. On Tuesday a body of 500 Russians were repulsed by Miniewski at Olkusz, in the government of Radom. The insurgent chief Osinski, after a successful encounter on the 5th inst. with the Russian troops, occupied Dombrowa. The band of 1000 scythemen, commanded by Franz, has been dispersed at a short distance from the Galician frontier. The Austrians received 59 of the fugitive insurgents, six waggonloads of arms, and two pieces of artillery. The peasants of the district of Podlachia, in the government of Lublin, are paying to the revolutionary agents the ground-rent for the support of the insurrection which their landlords have refused to pay. According to news received from Lithuania, 4000 Baskolniks (dissenters from the Greek faith), armed by the Russian Government in the neighbourhood of Dunaborg, are desolating Livonia with fire and sword. Shocking details have been received of their atrocities. The Prussian authorities have ordered the inhabitants of Inowraclaw, in the province of Posen, to afford quarters to the Russian troops, who are to be looked upon as Prussians by virtue of the convention concluded between Russia and Prussia. The Nord Deutsche Zeitung of Wednesday announces that during the past week the Prussian authorities have seized very considerable loads of arms, intended to be secretly introduced into Poland, in various and distant portions of the kingdom. The Kreuz Zeitung of Wednesday says that the terrorism exercised by order of the revolutionary committees at Warsaw and Cracow upon the inhabitants of Posen may render it at any moment necessary for the Prussian Government to proclaim a state of siege throughout the whole or in some of the smaller districts of the province. More than 60 persons have been arrested in the city of Posen. Numerous arrests, including many noblemen, have also been made in the province of Posen.

CHINA.—A despatch from Shanghai of March 25 says that Neingei (?) banditti have menaced Tientsin (?), but have been repulsed by Chinese troops under Consul Debson (?). The rebels have evacuated Shaoching, and are falling back upon Aurchow (?). [The remaining portion of the message is so imperfectly transmitted as to be entirely unintelligible.]

UNITED STATES.—Seven Federal gun-boats, one ram, and three transports have attempted to pass the Vicksburg batteries. One transport was obliged to return, another was burnt, and it is supposed that all on board were lost. The remainder of the vessels passed safely. Eleven Federal gun-boats, including three under Admiral Farragut, are now below Vicksburg. They have destroyed the Confederate batteries at Warrenton, and are anchored off New Carthage, where General Grant's head-quarters are established, and to which place a portion of General Grant's army had proceeded overland. The Southern journals think that the Federal gun-boats will attack Vicksburg from below and from the opposite shore. But it is generally supposed that the gun-boats will operate up the Red River, and, in conjunction with General Banks, will endeavour to force the evacuation of Vicksburg and Port Hudson by cutting off the supplies for those strongholds. The Southern journals have news of operations in General Banks's department, stating that the steamer Queen of the West has grounded in the Grand Lake and was blown up by the Federal gunboats; her crew, consisting of 113 officers and men, were captured. The Confederate steamer Diana was burnt in the Atchafalaya River by the Confederates to prevent her falling into the hands of the Federals. A portion of the force under General Banks was beyond Franklin, Louisiana, on the River Teche. The object of General Banks's expedition was to capture Franklin, where all the Confederates below the Red River are supposed to be posted, as a victory at that place would open the way for an advance of the Federals to the Red River. There was another movement making up the Yazoo River. Five Federal transports are reported to have reached a point above Haine's Bluff. The Confederates have burnt immense quantities of cotton along the Sunflower River. Federal gun-boats have been operating successfully against the Confederate cavalry along the banks of the Tennessee River. General Rosencranz is reported to have been reinforced by a portion of General Grant's army, and a battle in Tennessee is impending. General Foster arrived at Newbern from Washington, North Carolina, on the 16th, having run the blockade of the Confederate batteries on the Tar River in the transport Escort, the vessel by which he received supplies and reinforcements on the 14th. Eighteen shots took effect upon the hull of the Escort, and the pilot was killed at his post. It is presumed that General Foster will proceed with reinforcements to attack the Confederates who surround Washington, and compel them to raise the siege. Federal accounts of the 18th say that the Confederates had retired and abandoned all their batteries. Despatches from St. Louis of the 23d, report that General Marmaduke, with a large force of Confederates, has again entered Missouri, but the rumour that he has captured the town or port of Cape Girardeau, on the Mississippi, 150 miles below St. Louis, is said t be untrue. Fears are entertained of a blockade of the river at that point. On the 22d the Federals, under General Reynolds and Colonel Wilder, surprised the Confederates at Macminiville, Tennessee, captured the town, with 300 prisoners, and destroyed a cotton factory, two mills, and a large quantity of stores. Southern reports from Mississippi assert that the Federals, numbering 4000, have been repulsed upon Coldwater River, and that the Confederates were pursuing them. Confederate General Price is said to have 12,000 conscripts at Pocahontas. A Federal expedition has destroyed Celina, Kentucky, with immense quantities of Confederate stores. The Confederates are moving in Missouri, and threatening Pilot Knob. The Federals are advancing from two directions to meet them. General Halleck has visited Suffolk, Virginia, where the military situation remains unchanged. The Confederates are reported to be removing the obstructions in the James River at Fort Darling. The Charleston papers assert that the guns from the steamer Keokuk have been recovered. The mail-bag of the Peterhoff has been delivered unopened to the British consul by order of the district court. The trial of the question as to the legality of the capture of the ship and cargo has been postponed. The action of the British Government in the case of the steamer Alexandra has created a generally favourable impression in New York, and has allayed much irritation. Mr. Chase is in New York, and is urged to take advantage of the present favourable condition of the money market to effect a loan. Another meeting of the National League was held on the 20th ult. in Madison Square, at which General Scott presided. Addresses were made by the principal Republican leaders and a few Democrats; one of the latter, Mr. Van Buren, who in February last prophesied that six months would terminate the rebellion, now extended the time to one year, or even to the close of the present Administration. The British prize steamer Gertrude, captured off Harbor Island by the Vanderbilt, has arrived at New York. She was returning to Nassau after an ineffectual attempt to enter Charleston harbour. The Alabama is reported to have chased two vessels ashore in Turk's Island passage on March 26.

MEXICO.—General Berthier has defeated the Mexicans under General Comonfort, who was on the march to Puebla with reinforcements. General Ortega, who commands in Puebla, has offered to capitulate on favourable conditions. General Forey, however, demands the unconditional surrender of the city. The municipality and the ladies of Puebla have supplicated General Forey not to destroy the city. The General answered that he hoped to obtain its submission without firing a shot. Ortega with 15,000 men has made an attempt to force his way through the French columns in order to get to Mexico, but was repulsed with considerable loss, and compelled to return to Puebla.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.—The Royal Assent was given by commission to several public and private Bills.—Lord CHELMSFORD moved to recommit the Albert Bridge Bill, the preamble of which had been rejected by the Select Committee, on the ground that it was not desirable to sanction the construction of any further toll-exacting bridge over the Thames. After a long discussion, the motion was negatived by 40 to 29. The Bills on the table were advanced a stage.

TUESDAY.—The Belgian Mails.—Lord CHELMSFORD inquired of the Government whether they had accepted a tender from the Belgian Government for the conveyance of English mails between Dover and Ostend; whether any alteration was contemplated in the mail service between Dover and Calais, and whether any failure on the part of Mr. Churchward, the contractor, had rendered a change necessary.—Lord STANLEY OF ALDERLEY stated that an agreement had been made with the Belgian Government at a very reduced rate, conditional upon Parliament finding money to buy up Mr. Churchward's contract. If it did not, then the service would go on as at present until the expiration of the contract. With respect to the Calais mails, an offer had been made to undertake the service at a much lower rate, and it had been accepted, subject to the approval of Parliament. The Government had acted in accordance with the decision of a committee of the House of Commons, specially ratified by the House itself, which had strongly condemned Mr. Churchward's contract. St. Bernard Reformatory.—In reply to Lord BERNERS, Earl GRANVILLE said that the Home-office had sent down an inspector to inquire into the recent disturbances at the Roman Catholic reformatory establishment of St. Bernard, Leicestershire, but that he had not yet made his report.

THURSDAY.—Earl RUSSELL moved that the House go into Committee on the Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill.—The Earl of DERBY said, as the Bill affected the House of Commons, he was not inclined to oppose it, although he disbelieved in legislative enactments to check bribery and corruption.—Earl Grey concurred with this opinion.—The House then went into Committee on the Bill, when Lord LYVEDEN moved the insertion of a clause disqualifying agents found guilty of corrupt or illegal practices. On a division the motion was rejected by 66 to 52. An amendment to clause 10 was agreed to, but on a division the clause itself was rejected by 92 to 26. Clause 11 having been struck out, the Bill passed through Committee, and was read a third time and passed.—Lord REDESDALE moved a resolution that the principle of Charging Entailed Estates for Railways involves questions of too much nicety and importance to be sanctioned by Parliament otherwise than by public legislation.—Lord ST. LEONARDS supported the motion.—Lord EVERSLEY moved as an amendment, "That this House is not prepared to withdraw from the consideration of Committees on Railway Bills clauses which may confer such powers, if certain specified conditions were agreed to by the tenant for life." A discussion ensued, in which the Earl of ROMNEY, Lord RAVENSWORTH, Lord PORTMAN, Earl GRANVILLE, and Earl GREY took part. Ultimately the amendment was negatived without a division, and the resolution was agreed to.

FRIDAY.—Poland.—The Earl of SHAFTESBURY, in presenting a petition from a meeting of merchants and others, held at the Guildhall, in favour of the Poles, said that he had 61 other petitions from various places. The separation of Poland from Russia must be the issue of the present struggle. It was impossible for the two nations to go on in union again. The separation would be greatly to the advantage of Europe, and to the advantage of Russia. Whatever the Poles required of other nations they required of England the strongest expression of opinion in both Houses of Parliament, in the press, and the platform. They looked with apprehension upon armed intervention, as they desired independence. He believed that public opinion, constantly and powerfully directed, would have ten thousand times greater an effect than the armed fleet in the Baltic.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.—The City Police.—In reply to Sir J. DUKE, Sir G. GREY said that, as the Bill for the amalgamation of the City and Metropolitan Police proposed to repeal a local and personal act, the orders of the House of Commons required that it should be referred to the examiner of standing orders. That officer had reported that the usual notices had not been given in November last. The Bill was then referred to the Standing Orders Committee, and if they should report to the House that the Bill was in the nature of a private Bill, it would not of course be proceeded with in the present session. The Count-out.—Lord R. MONTAGU brought under notice the "no House" of Friday, and complained that the members of the Government, contrary to the understanding of two years ago, had studiously avoided coming into the House, although they mustered in considerable force in the lobby.—Mr. D. GRIFFITH and Mr. B. COCHRANE also deprecated the conduct of the Government as being evidently guided by a desire to get rid of the discussion of inconvenient subjects.—Lord PALMERSTON denied that the Government had been any party to the disaster of Friday, and hinted that when independent members had grievances to allege they ought to bring down their friends to help them to make a House.—Mr. DISRAELI certainly considered that the count out was not in conformity with the understanding that Government were to make and keep a House on Friday evening.—Mr. BENTINCK was disposed to blame the House itself, and not the Government, for what had happened. Experience had justified the truth of his prediction that the alteration made two years ago would be tantamount to a curtailment of the business of the House. The Proposed Tax on Charities.—The House having gone into committee on the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill, clauses 1 and 2, imposing the income tax on trades, professions, and property, were agreed to. On clause 3, charging charities with the tax, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that the question he wished to raise was whether the law should be changed which gave an immunity to all charitable bequests. He confessed he could not see upon what grounds that special exemption was to be made, although he was quite prepared to modify the clause so as to prevent the tax falling upon funds which were disposed of in the shape of salary. He was prepared to say that 19-20ths of the charities which it was proposed to tax were derived from death-bed bequests. The income of the country, as gathered from the income tax returns, was about 180 or 190 millions a year, of which about three millions belonged to charities. These charities he divided into three classes—the small, the middling, and the great. With regard to the first of these he had no hesitation in saying that so far from being valuable they were positively pernicious, by tending to pauperise the people, and destroy their sense of independence and self-reliance. As an illustration he mentioned the case of Jarvis's Charity, which consisted of 100,000*l.* left to the poor of three parishes in Herefordshire. This was to be doled out to the inhabitants, but under no circumstances was any portion of the fund to be expended on buildings. The fund, however, accumulated so fast that the trustees were compelled to come to Parliament for an act to enable them to expend 30,000*l.* upon the construction of a boarding school for the labourers' children, thereby doing the very thing which old Jarvis declared should not be done. Of the middle charities a favourable type was to be found in the Clergy Orphan School, which had an income of 5000*l.* a year, and which it was proposed should be taxed at 145*l.* a year. The persons who supplied clergy orphans were poor clergymen, and it was proposed by the present scheme of the Government to remit taxation in favour of that class to the extent of 7000*l.* a year. The institution called Christ's Hospital was an appropriate illustration of the great charities. It enjoyed public contributions to the extent of 6000*l.* a year, and it had an income of at least 70,000*l.* It was originally intended for "sick, sore, and destitute children," but such was not the class who were now admitted to its benefits. On the contrary, the inmates were the children of persons with incomes from 200*l.* to 500*l.* a year, while the governors, in return for a payment of 500*l.*, received a vested interest in 1600 presentations. It was urged that if charities were taxed, 500 in-patients would be deprived of the benefits of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. The revenue of that institution was 36,000*l.* a year, and after deducting the income tax paid by the officers, the sum which the State would take from the hospital would be 850*l.* a year. This, however, was but a partial return for the advantages which the income tax had conferred upon the hospital. The reduction of the wine duties was equivalent to 238*l.*, and the reduction of the duty on foreign drugs to 415*l.*, while the remissions on articles of food consumed was 1214*l.*; so that from these sources alone the hospital was benefited to the extent of 1867*l.* a year. If to this were added 1440*l.* for the improved annual value of the property, the institution had derived a substantial advantage equivalent to 3307*l.* per annum. The Government did not propose this measure as one of financial necessity, but as one of justice and policy. They would not, however, press it on an unwilling House. Nevertheless, they urged it as in harmony with every principle of sound administration—as a measure just to the tax-paying community, and just to the labouring poor, as favourable in its tendency to the elevation of their character and the improvement of their condition. In conclusion, the right hon. gentleman appealed to the justice, the equity, the courage, and the wisdom of the House of Commons to agree to the principle involved in the clause.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE said that the speech of the Chancellor of the Exchequer was based on the fallacy that every man left untaxed received a gift from the State. He had also misconceived the reports of the Charity Commissioners, who had never recommended that the ancient and time-honoured endowments of the country should be mulcted with the income tax, but had advised that certain of those charities should be reformed and their abuses corrected. The proposition of the Government was simply to confiscate 250,000*l.* a year from the charities, in order that the income tax might be reduced and tea be cheapened by 5*d.* per lb.—Mr. MAGUIRE denounced the scheme as an attempt to impose taxation on the lowest and most destitute class of the community. Had he 10 votes he would give them all against the proposal.—Lord H. VANE admitted the ingenuity of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's argument, but was unable to agree with him in his deductions.—Mr. W. MARTIN put in a special plea on behalf of county hospitals.—Lord R. CECIL commented with much severity upon the principle of confiscation laid down by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who had, he said, spoken with bitterness of the living, and raged with fury in denunciations against the dead. The right hon. gentleman could not have chosen a more unhappy time in which to make this long indictment against charity, benevolence, and poverty, for there was not an hospital in London upon whose funds the state of the manufacturing districts had not acted as a drain, and which was not obliged to drive people from its doors, and he had no doubt that if this measure passed its immediate effect would be to aggravate the misery that already so widely prevailed.—The CHAIRMAN having put the questions, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that, as none of the independent members had declared themselves in favour of the clause, it was quite unnecessary to take the sense of the House upon it.—Mr. DISRAELI agreed in the wisdom of the announcement. At the same time he had never heard an announcement for which he was less prepared after the speech of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The right hon. gentleman might, however, console himself with the reflection that though he had been defeated by the charities he had conquered the clubs. But it was possible that before the labours of the House terminated that eccentricity might also disappear from the budget. The proposition of the Government to attack the charitable endowments of the country was so monstrous that he was not surprised that the country had risen as one man against it. The great fundamental failing of the Chancellor of the Exchequer was that he held exemption from taxation to be equivalent to a grant from the country, than which nothing could be more fallacious or illogical.—Lord PALMERSTON defended the policy of the Chancellor of Exchequer, which, he said, was founded in justice and good sense, and had the entire approval of his colleagues. The fact, however, was that the House was influenced by local associations, and under these circumstances the Chancellor of the Exchequer had, he thought, exercised a wise discretion in withdrawing the proposition.—After a few words from Mr. HENLEY and Mr. LOCKE the clause was negatived without a division. The remaining clauses were agreed to, and the House resumed. The Savings Bank Bill passed through committee with amendments. The Consolidated Fund (10,000,000l.) Bill, and the Exchequer Bonds (1,000,000l.) Bill were read a third time and passed. The Naval Medical Supplemental Fund Society Winding-up Act Amendment Bill was read a second time, after a short debate. Other Bills were forwarded a stage.

TUESDAY.—The War in China.—In answer to a question from Colonel SYKES respecting the death of Lieut. Tinling, of H.M.S. Encounter, in the attack on Shon-hing, Lord C. PAGET said that instructions had been sent to the commanders of her Majesty's ships in China not to allow their officers or men to be employed beyond a radius of 30 miles from a treaty port. Case of Captain Melville White.—Colonel DUNNE inquired what steps had been taken to obtain redress for the cruelties inflicted by the Peruvian Government on Captain Melville White, a British subject.—Mr. LAYARD replied that Captain Melville White had been treated with very great brutality, and that the course taken by the Peruvian courts of justice in his regard was a disgrace to those institutions. The law officers of the Crown had inquired into the case, and had recommended that 4500*l.* should be demanded of the Peruvian Government as compensation for the injuries sustained by Captain White. The latter was, however, dissatisfied, and had sent in a claim to the Foreign Office for 292,174*l.*, of which 20,000*l.* was for kicks inflicted upon him, 5000*l.* for being compelled to eat bad food during five days, and 20,000*l.* for injury done to his health. The Government had offered to submit the matter to arbitration, and it was to be hoped that some satisfactory arrangement would be come to. National Education.—Mr. WALTER moved two resolutions, to the effect, 1. That the sums annually voted for educational purposes ought to be made applicable to all the poorer schools throughout the country (not being private schools or carried on for profit), in which the attendance and examination of the children exhibit the results required under the revised code by the inspectors of schools; and 2. That to require the employment of certificated teachers, or of pupil teachers by school managers, as an indispensable condition of their participation in the capitation grant, was inexpedient and unjust to the managers of such schools. He urged that a capitation grant of 8*s.* ought to be given to all schools in which the children should pass an examination in the three elementary branches of education to the satisfaction of the inspector.—Mr. BUXTON seconded the motion.—Mr. LOWE said he did not intend to raise any objection to the proposal on the ground of the vested rights of the certificated teachers, but because he believed that, if it were agreed to, the whole system of national education would degenerate into a mere scramble for public money. He urged that the Government ought not to make a grant to any school where it had not tested the capacity and qualifications of the teachers, and that the advantage of supplying schools with efficient teachers was proved by the experience of the 10 years during which the practice had been followed. Another objection to the motion was, that the revised code had not yet been tried, and that the employment of uncertified or unknown teachers would be a premium upon ignorance and an injustice at once to the public and to the children themselves. He called upon the House to give the Educational Department a period of rest and tranquillity, to wait and see the result of the changes already made, and not to unsettle the minds of men upon this important question.—The motion was supported by Mr. DUTTON and opposed by Mr. F. POWELL and Mr. SALT.—Mr. ADDERLEY contended that the existing system should be adhered to, and that no school which did not submit to the three tests now in force—namely, the elementary instruction test, the inspection test, and the test of certified tutorship—ought to receive aid in the shape of a grant of public money. The motion would abolish altogether the two latter tests, and open the Treasury to all schools on the single test of their giving elementary education. He moved, as an amendment, that the votes for education ought to be made applicable to schools only of the working classes, but to all of them alike, in the way of proportionate aid to voluntary support, subject to the favourable report of the inspector, and to tests of at least elementary instruction being given in them by teachers in all respects qualified.—Mr. B. COCHRANE seconded the amendment.—Mr. HENLEY supported the motion as a simple act of justice to the districts in which the poorer class of schools existed, and which had for the last 16 or 17 years contributed their quota to the education grant without participating in its advantages.—After some observations from Mr. PULLER, Sir M. FARQUHAR, and Mr. D. GRIFFITH, the amendment and first resolution were withdrawn. The House then divided on the second resolution, which was negatived by 152 to 117. The Act of Uniformity.—Mr. BOUVERIE moved that the House should go into committee upon that portion of the Act of Uniformity which required deans, canons, and prebendaries of chapters, professors, masters of colleges, and others, to make a declaration of uniformity to the liturgy of the Church of England. His object was to propose a resolution on which to found a Bill for the repeal of that requirement, and he said that his motion was made at the instance of the resident fellows of the University of Cambridge.—Mr. WALPOLE resisted the motion, observing that the House had already on two occasions considered and decided the question, and that unless some good reason were shown to the contrary, it ought upon principle, policy, and consistency, to adhere to that decision.—Lord STANLEY said that the proposal now made was different to that made in 1856. It would not take away from the colleges any right which they already possessed, but it acknowledged their right of self-government, which the proposal in 1856 did not.—Sir W. HEATHCOTE contended that the Dissenters had really no practical grievances, because all the distinctions of the universities were open to them, save those which related to the government thereof.—Mr. D. GRANT supported, and Lord R. CECIL opposed, the motion.—Lord PALMERSTON expressed himself willing to vote for the introduction of the Bill, but at the same time would hold himself free to deal with the matter hereafter as might appear to be expedient. On a division the motion for going into committee was carried by 157 to 135. The House then went into committee, when leave was given to bring in a Bill.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON obtained leave to bring in a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Volunteer Corps.—Colonel DUNN moved for a select committee to inquire into the state of Holyhead Harbour. The motion was seconded by Mr. LEFROY.—Mr. M. GIBSON suggested that the motion should be delayed till certain correspondence was before the House. After some discussion and a division the debate was adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.—Mr. NEWDEGATE, in moving the second reading of his Church-rates Commutation Bill, said that the Church-rate question had now reached a point when, in the opinion of the House, some change of the law was expedient in order to adapt its provisions to the altered circumstances of the country, without disturbing the relations between the Established Church and the State. In 1837, the late Sir R. Peel had suggested, as deserving the best consideration of the House, a plan by which the owner, not the occupier, should be liable to the rate, without any invidious test being imposed upon Dissenters. These suggestions and others made in the report of the Committee of the House of Lords were embodied in his Bill, which, assuming, as the fact was, that Church-rates were a charge upon land and real property, removed all personal liability in respect to the rate, and provided that the maintenance of the fabric of churches should be a burden upon the land, and payable by the owners. He then explained and defended the principal provisions of the Bill and the machinery by which they were to be carried into operation.—Sir H. STRACEY seconded the motion.—Sir C. DOUGLAS moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months.—Lord HENLEY seconded the amendment, considering that the settlement proposed by the Bill would not be satisfactory or advantageous to Dissenters.—Mr. G. HARDY expressed his belief that the Bill had not the slightest chance of success.—Sir G. GREY said that, though the Bill contained some valuable suggestions, in his opinion it did not hold out any prospect of settling the question. He suggested cases in which it would operate injuriously upon owners of property, and that the machinery was too cumbrous. He recommended Mr. Newdegate not to press the Bill.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE concurred in this recommendation. After some further debate, Mr. NEWDEGATE declining to abandon the principle of the Bill by withdrawing it, the amendment was carried, on a division, by 94 to 56. The Bill was therefore lost.—Mr. ALCOCK moved the second reading of his Church-rates Redemption Bill. Its object, he observed, was different from that of Mr. Newdegate's Bill; it was not to perpetuate Church-rates, but simply to provide means of redeeming them, as had been done with regard to the land-tax.—Mr. EVANS seconded the motion.—Mr. NEWDEGATE spoke against the second reading, and Mr. DODSON in favour of it.—Sir G. GREY said he should not object to the second reading of the Bill, which, however, required in his opinion very extensive alteration in the committee.—After a few observations by Mr. GRIFFITH and Mr. BRISCOE, the second reading was negatived on a division by 81 to 72. The Bill was therefore lost. The House then went into Committee on the Security from Violence Bill of Mr. Adderley, when a long discussion took place, on the motion of Mr. PEACOCKE, to amend the first clause by making the infliction of corporal punishment applicable only to second and subsequent convictions. On a division, the amendment was negatived by 191 to 37. Several verbal amendments having been made on the clause.—Mr. DENT moved that the Chairman report progress; but the motion was rejected by 159 to 32. On the question that the clause stand part of the Bill, the House again divided, and it was agreed to by 144 to 31. The Bill was then reported to the House. The Marriages Registration (Ireland) Bill, introduced by Mr. MONSELL, and the Admiralty Court (Ireland) Bill were read a second time.

THURSDAY.—The Brazilian Affair.—In answer to a question by Mr. M. MILNES respecting the conduct of Mr. Christie, her Majesty's Minister at Brazil, Lord PALMERSTON said that General Webb, the United States' Minister at Rio, had written a letter to Earl Russell, impugning Mr. Christie's veracity, and that Lord Russell had treated it with the disregard it merited; that Mr. Christie was a gentleman and a man of honour, that no man could question his veracity with any semblance of truth, and that his conduct had been fully and entirely approved by her Majesty's Government.—Mr. BRAMLEY-MOORE entered upon a variety of details to show that the conduct of Mr. Christie had been anything but moderate and conciliatory towards the Brazilian Government in an emergency when special caution was necessary.—Lord PALMERSTON said that the information the Government had received differed from that of Mr. BRAMLEY-MOORE. After some further discussion the subject dropped. On the order for going into Committee upon the Prison Ministers Bill, Mr. R. LONG moved that the House should resolve itself into Committee that day six months. The grievance which the Bill proposed to redress, if it were a grievance, was a necessary consequence of the Constitution under which we lived, and the principle of the measure would justify the appointment in prisons of chaplains of all the various denominations of Dissenters from the Established Church.—Sir L. PALK seconded the motion.—Mr. MORRITT, Mr. G. DUFF, Sir J. PAKINGTON, and Lord H. LENNOX, supported the Bill; Mr. KENDALL, Mr. WHALLEY, Lord A. V. TEMPEST, and Major HAMILTON, opposed it. On a division, Mr. LONG's motion was negatived by 172 to 141. The House then went into Committee on the Bill.—Mr. MURE moved that the Bill be limited to England, observing that in Scotland a special request from a prisoner to be visited by a clergyman of his own religious persuasion was not required in the local prisons.—Sir G. GREY objected to the limitations. After a long debate the Committee divided, when the amendment was negatived by 96 to 55.—Mr. HUNT moved to amend the third clause so as to exclude the power of appointing particular ministers and their payment.—Sir G. GREY objected that this would place the law of England upon the same footing as the law of Scotland stood at present, and would amount to a rejection of the Bill. This amendment, after a long debate, was likewise negatived upon a division, the numbers being 96 to 80.—Mr. BENTINCK moved to amend the clause by omitting the words making the payment to chaplains appointed under the Bill a charge upon the county or borough rates. After some discussion the amendment was negatived on a division by 101 to 71. The Chairman was then ordered to report progress.—Upon the order for the second reading of the Inland Revenue Bill, a desultory conversation arose, chiefly with reference to Club licences. The Bill was ultimately read a second time. The adjourned debate on the Report upon the Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill was then resumed, when certain amendments were made in the Bill. The Savings Banks Moneys Bill was read a third time and passed.

FRIDAY.—Police Amalgamation Bill.—A report was brought up from the Committee on Standing Orders, stating that the standing orders relative to the Bill for the amalgamation of the Metropolitan and City police, ought not to be dispensed with. So the Bill is dropped for the present session. The Tax on Clubs.—In answer to Mr. LYGON, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that, in consequence of many applications he had received from various quarters of the House, it was his intention to abandon this tax. Southern Italy.—On the order for going into Supply, Mr. HENNESSY moved for further papers respecting the state of Southern Italy.

ROYAL ACADEMY.—The annual dinner of the Royal Academy preparatory to the opening of the exhibition was held on Saturday night, Sir Charles Eastlake, President of the Academy, in the chair. The Prince of Wales, Prince Louis of Hesse, the Commander-in-Chief, the Prime Minister, the leaders of political parties, and numerous persons of eminence in literature, science, and art, were among the company. In returning thanks for the toast of his health, the Prince of Wales, who spoke evidently under deep emotion, but in a peculiarly clear and pleasing tone of voice and with great impressiveness of manner, spoke as follows:

"Sir Charles Eastlake, your Royal Highnesses, my Lords, and Gentlemen,—It is with the most contending feelings of pleasure, pride, and sorrow that I rise to return you thanks in the name of myself and the Royal family for the kind terms in which you, Sir Charles, have proposed our health, and for the very cordial way in which this distinguished assembly has received it. I cannot on this occasion divest my mind of the associations connected with my beloved and lamented father. His bright example cannot fail to stimulate my efforts to tread in his footsteps; and, whatever my shortcomings may be, I may at least presume to participate in the interest which he took in every institution which tended to encourage art and science in this country, but more especially in the prosperity of the Royal Academy. Adverting to my marriage, I beg you to believe how grateful I feel for, and I may be permitted to add how sincerely I appreciate, the sentiments you have expressed with reference to the Princess. I know that I am only speaking her mind in joining her thoughts to mine on this occasion. We neither of us can ever forget the manner in which our union has been celebrated throughout the nation; and I should be more than ungrateful if I did not retain the most lasting as well as most pleasing recollection of the kind expressions and reception which my attendance at your anniversary meeting has evoked this evening."

Prince Louis of Hesse acknowledged the toast of his health in the following terms:—

"Mr. President, your Royal Highnesses, my Lords, and Gentlemen,—I have been much flattered by your kind invitation, which has enabled me to spend this evening in so distinguished an assembly. Still more gratified have I been by the cordial way in which you have welcomed me, and in which you have drunk my health and that of the Princess. While I return my warmest thanks in both our names, I take this opportunity of expressing my devotion and gratitude to your beloved Queen and her family, and my profound admiration of this great and noble country, to which I am most sincerely attached."

MEMORIAL OF THE EXHIBITION OF 1851.—The ceremony of uncovering the Memorial of the Exhibition of 1851, and the statue of H.R.H. the late Prince Consort, will take place in the Gardens of the Royal Horticultural Society on Wednesday, the 10th of June. The Prince of Wales will officiate on the occasion, in the presence of the Princess of Wales and other members of the Royal family. The details of the ceremonial will be found in our advertising columns.

AMALGAMATION OF THE CITY AND METROPOLITAN POLICE.—A crowded meeting, convened by the Lord Mayor, pursuant to a numerously signed requisition, was held on Tuesday at Guildhall, to consider the proposal of the Government with respect to the amalgamation of the police of the cities of London and Westminster. The Lord Mayor occupied the chair, and was supported by a large number of members of Parliament and the principal members of the corporation. Mr. S. Morley, Mr. Fowler, the banker, Mr. K. Hodgson, M.P., Governor of the Bank of England, Mr. George Moore, Mr. Kinnaird, M.P., Mr. Crawford, M.P., Mr. Wood, M.P., and other gentlemen, addressed the meeting, and resolutions condemning the proposed scheme, with a petition to Parliament against it, were unanimously adopted.

THE LOSS OF THE ORPHEUS.—The Lords of the Admiralty have published a return of the names of officers and men who perished in the wreck of her Majesty's late ship Orpheus, at the entrance of the Manukau Harbour, New Zealand, on the 7th of February. The following is a complete list of the Commissioned Officers:—William F. Burnett, C.B., commodore; Robert H. Burton, commander; William T. F. W. Mudge, lieutenant; Arthur Jekyll, lieutenant; William D. Strong, master; William I. Taylor, second master; Arthur R. Mallock, Thomas H. Broughton, and George H. Verner, midshipmen; John J. Tozer, master's assistant; Rev. C. B. Haslewood, chaplain and naval instructor; W. H. P. M. Gillam, secretary (assistant paymaster); A. D. Johnston, assistant paymaster; James Clarkson, assistant surgeon; Edward E. Hill, first lieutenant Royal Marines.

THE MURDER IN BLOOMSBURY.—The body of a man, who had evidently committed suicide in a deliberate and determined manner, having filled his pockets with sand and fastened his hands in front of him, was taken out of the river on Monday. A rumour got abroad that this was the body of the man who murdered Emma Jackson a few weeks since in St. Giles's. There is some resemblance in the dress, height, and beard of the man as he was observed by those who saw him with the girl on the morning of the murder; but as the body had been more than a week in the water, and pains had been taken by the suicide before drowning himself to destroy all traces of his identity, there is necessarily great uncertainty on the subject. The inquest was opened on Wednesday, and adjourned for the purpose of obtaining further evidence. The police however are said to be satisfied that he is not the man.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that in the week that ended Saturday May 3, the deaths in London fell to 1374, a lower number than any that has been returned since the first week of March. The average number in the corresponding weeks of the 10 years 1853-62, corrected for increase of population, was 1287. The present return is therefore 87 above the average. 68 deaths occurred from small pox, 74 from scarlatina, and 47 from measles. During the week the births of 1002 boys and 973 girls, in all 1975 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1853-62, the average number was 1981.

CAMBRIDGE.—For several weeks past a number of undergraduate members of the University of Cambridge, have been in the habit of attending the evening service of the Roman Catholic chapel in Union Road, and interrupting the priest by laughing derisively, smoking clay pipes, and other unseemly conduct. The Rev. Mr. Quillinar, the priest, has remonstrated with them on several occasions, but, being anxious to spare them the disgrace and humiliation of a public exposure, he kindly abstaining from taking legal proceedings. This forbearance, however, instead of having the desired effect of quelling the disturbances, made the undergraduates more bold and violent, and last Sunday evening they conducted themselves in so outrageous a manner that the police who were in attendance for the purpose of preserving order, found it necessary to take the ringleaders into custody. On their way to the station-house a rescue was attempted by a body of students, in which the police were roughly handled. On Monday at the Borough court, two of the undergraduates concerned in the attempted rescue, Mr. Howard Simon Watson and Mr. Thomas Springett Watson, of Pembroke College, were convicted of assaulting the police, and sentenced to seven days' imprisonment without hard labour. Mr. Richard Ramsden, of Trinity College, was fined 4*l.* and expenses; and other charges were dismissed from insufficient evidence. The defendants Watson were removed to the Borough Gaol in a fly. On their exit from the Town-hall they were greeted with a sympathetic cheer from their brother undergraduates, but at the entrance to the gaol a different reception awaited them. The mob there also cheered lustily, but it was because they saw two gownsmen going to prison.

MANCHESTER.—At the weekly meeting of the Central Executive Committee on Monday, Mr. Commissioner Farnall's report stated that there was a total decrease in the number of the unemployed of 5373 as compared with the previous week. The Hon. Secretary's monthly return was no less favourable. During the month of April there were 24,954 more people were employed than in the previous month, and the local relief committees had spent 14,744*l.* less in April than in March. The total receipts for the week ending May 2 were 5787*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.*, and for the month of April 20,521*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*, balance in the hands of the bankers, 392,868*l.* 14*s.* 5*d.*

Obituary.

THE DOWAGER VISCOUNTESS ANDOVER died on the 29th ult. at Brighton. She was the eldest daughter of the first Earl of Leicester by his first marriage with the daughter of Mr. James Lennox Dutton, father of the first Lord Sherborne. Her ladyship was born in 1777, and married first, in 1796, Charles Viscount Andover, eldest son of the fifteenth Earl of Suffolk, who died in 1800; and secondly, in 1806, Admiral Sir Henry Digby, K.C.B., who died in 1842.

LORD HATHERTON died on Monday afternoon at his seat, Teddesley Park, Penkridge, in his 73d year. His lordship entered the House of Commons in 1812, and has therefore been a member of the Legislature for half a century. He was the eldest son of the niece of Sir Thomas Littleton, Bart., who died in 1812, and with whom ended the direct male line of an old English family, of which the famous Judge Littleton, "the great luminary of the law," had been one time the head. The late peer was, throughout his career in the House of Commons, a member of the Liberal party, and in the preparation of the Reform Bill of 1832 he was at the head of the Parliamentary Boundary Commission, whose report was afterwards adopted with little modification. In 1833, he was appointed Secretary for Ireland, but resigned the secretaryship in the next year, and was not a member of the following Melbourne Administration. In 1835 he was created a peer with the title of Lord Hatherton, and in 1854 was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Staffordshire. His lordship was greatly respected by public men of all parties, was profuse in his hospitality, and took a great interest in agriculture. He was twice married; lastly, in 1852, to the widow of Mr. Henry Davis Davenport, of Capesthorne. His lordship is succeeded in his title and estates by his only son, the Hon. Edward Richard Littleton, Colonel of the 2d Staffordshire Militia.

THE NILE EXPEDITION.—Another telegram reached the Foreign Office from Alexandria on Wednesday, conveying a message from Captain Speke to Sir Roderick Murchison, that "on the 27th of March he was in north latitude 14° 30′, on the Nile; that all was well, and the Nile settled." Sir Roderick Murchison in publishing this telegram says, "this is glorious news for all geographers."

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, May 4.

The number of Beasts is rather larger than last week; trade is not brisk, yet late rates are well maintained. The supply of Sheep is about the same as on Monday last; trade is slow, and that day's quotations are with difficulty realised. Good Calves and Lambs are in demand at fully late rates. From Germany and Holland there are 390 Beasts, 2510 Sheep, and 153 Calves; from Spain, 123 Beasts; from Scotland, 370; from Ireland, 30; and 2870 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

THURSDAY, May 7.

Although the number of Beasts is smaller than on Thursday last, it much exceeds the demand. Prices are lower, and several remain unsold. There is a considerable increase in the supply of Sheep and Lambs. Quotations are lower for all descriptions, and there are very few purchasers at market. Calves are also more plentiful, and are sold at lowe rates. Our foreign supply consists of 278 Beasts, 860 Sheep, and 420 Calves; the number of Milch Cows is 120.

HOPS.—BOROUGH MARKET, FRIDAY, May 8.

Messrs. Pattenden & Smith report the market very firm, with a limited supply of fine and middling sorts, for which a further allowance of 2s. to 4s. is obtained.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, May 4.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was moderate, and met a slow sale at the prices of this day se'nnight. The attendance was tolerably good, and the inquiry for foreign Wheat was limited and of a retail character, at late prices. Barley, Beans, and Peas were each rather dearer, and Oats, owing to a very short supply, brought an advance of 6d. per qr. For Flour there was scarcely any inquiry.

FRIDAY, May 8.

The weather this month has been particularly fine. The activity we had to report of the Wheat trade last week has been succeeded by dullness, and in some markets rather lower prices have been submitted to. Spring Corn, owing to the continued dryness of the season, continues to attract attention, and the tendency in the value of all descriptions is towards improvement. Oats in a few exchanges are quoted 6d. to 1s. per qr. higher. The Flour trade has been heavy; prices incline downwards. Since Friday last not any new arrivals have been reported, and the coast is cleared of cargoes for sale. A moderate business has been done in cargoes still on passage, which are held firm, and Maize has again advanced a little. The arrivals of English Wheat this week have been moderate, of all other grain and Flour small. There were very few Wheat buyers at this morning's market, and the English Wheat left over from Monday, although offered at that day's prices, remained unsold at a late hour. Very little business was transacted in foreign, and to have forced sales lower rates must have been submitted to. Barley, Beans, and Peas are unaltered in value. For Oats the trade is very firm at the extreme quotations of Monday.

LIVERPOOL, May 8.—There was a very fair attendance of buyers at our market to-day, but in Wheat there was only a poor consumptive demand at a decline of 1d. to 2d. per 100 lbs. since this day week. Flour was in less inquiry, and in some cases 6d. per barrel cheaper. Oats firm. Oatmeal held for 6d. per load advance. Barley and Beans steady. Indian Corn was wanted at 29s. 6d. for mixed, but holders insisting upon 29s. 9d. restricted business. Yellow, 30s.; white, 31s. to 31s. 6d. per 480 lbs.

FRIDAY, May 8.—Market dull in Wheat, and Flour dull trade, buyers having the advantage. Indian Corn steady demand. Egyptian Beans without change. Oats and Oatmeal better and the turn dearer.

PATENT GUTTA PERCHA SOLES.—IMPORTANT TO GARDENERS.—The Gutta Percha Company have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of the following letter from G. GLENNY, Esq., the celebrated Florist:—

"Gentlemen,—I have worn Gutta Percha Soles and Heels these two years, and being so much in a garden as I necessarily am in all weathers, and with the ground in all states, I would on no account be without them. As a matter of economy I would recommend Gardeners to use them, for they may repair the worn part at all times by warming the material at the fire, and pressing it from the thick parts to the worn parts, as easily as if it were so much dough. I think it the duty of all persons who must occasionally wet their feet to adopt a material that completely defies damp. Many a gardener would escape colds and rheumatism by the use of Gutta Percha Soles. Your obedient servant, G. GLENNY."

Every variety of Gutta Percha articles, such as Mill Bands, Tubing, Soles, Sheet, Pump Buckets, Fire Buckets, Bosses, Union Joints, Flasks, Bottles, Bowls, Chamber Vessels, Toilet Trays, Sponge Bags, Curtain Rings, Galvanic Batteries, Calbotype trays, &c., manufactured by the Gutta Percha Company, and sold by their wholesale dealers in town or country.

PATENT ELECTRICAL PLANT PROTECTOR, for the preservation of Plants, Flowers, and Shrubs from Snails, Worms, Slugs, &c.

This Protector being composed of zinc and copper, or of any two metals combined in such a manner as to form an electrical couple, constantly gives off a certain amount of electricity, rendering plants entirely secure from the attacks of slugs, &c., as it has been discovered to be perfectly impossible for any insect or worm to crawl over a combination of these two metals.

Being formed in plain and ornamental designs for borders, beds, &c., it is applicable to all gardens, terraces, &c.; it is also made in the form of plant guards to encircle the stems.

GARDEN ROLLERS, Patent Water-ballasting and Adjustable.

These Rollers, although only introduced in June last, have already attained a wide reputation. The principle of loading with water will at once commend itself to intending purchasers, for the advantages of having in one roller both a light and a heavy one at pleasure must be manifest to every one.

Besides being adjustable, they are more handy, especially on narrow walks and confined spaces; and they are cheaper, because an 11-inch size, loaded with water, has a greater crushing power than a 24-inch of the ordinary kind, and can moreover be used empty, where it would be impossible to use those of larger sizes.

For Mansion Grounds, Public and other large Gardens, Lawns, Cricket Grounds, and for the use of Landscape Gardeners, Surveyors, and others, for making new roads, the larger size for Pony and Horse-power will be found invaluable, and great numbers have already been sold for these purposes.

Agents by appointment: DEANE & Co., the Monument, London Bridge, E.C.

To Noblemen, Gardeners, Farmers, and Others.

AMIES AND BARFORD beg to call particular attention to their NEW PATENT WATER BALLASTING FIELD and GARDEN ROLLERS, which have the following advantages over all others. They are made entirely of Wrought Iron, are made water-tight, and are loaded with water to obtain increased weight at pleasure, which is moreover employed with the greatest possible per centage of crushing power directly upon the surface of the soil. The weight of a Garden Roller can thus be doubled in a few minutes, and a one, two, or three Horse Land Roller is secured, as desired, in one implement.

Great numbers have already been sold, and are giving the greatest satisfaction, and whether for Gardens, Lawns, Cricket Grounds, Road-making, or for farmers' use, they will be found superior to all others.

For Illustrated Price Lists apply to Messrs. AMIES & BARFORD, Queen Street Iron Works, Peterborough, Patentees and Sole Manufacturers.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, Class IX., No. 2119.

Mr. GRAY begs to call the attention of the Nobility, Gentry, Nurserymen, Gardeners, &c., to his

NEW OVAL TUBULAR BOILER,

acknowledged by practical judges to be a great improvement on every form of Tubular Boiler yet introduced. It has proved itself superior to all other Boilers for quickness of action and economy of Fuel, doing its work with one-third less the amount required by any other.

Extract from Report in Gardeners' Chronicle of International Exhibition, May 24, page 476.

"The upright form of Boiler is usually made on a circular plan, but the oval form given to Mr. GRAY's variety of it is said to be preferable in consequence of its bringing the tubes in closer contact with the fire. The usual form of a furnace being a parallelogram rather than a square, it seems feasible that the Boilers on the oval plan should bring the tubes more completely within range of the burning fuel; and this being so the change, though a slight one, is no doubt an improvement.

They are made of all sizes, which, with prices, may be had on application.

LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF.—The foundation for all Mattress Bedding should be elastic, and the usual Spring Mattress is too heavy and cumbersome for general use. HEAL & SON's new Patent LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF is made in three separate parts, and is therefore light and portable; it is also cheap and durable; and as it has no stuffing on the top, it cannot harbour moth.

HEAL AND SON'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing Designs and Prices of 100 Bedsteads, as well as of 150 different articles of Bedroom Furniture, sent free by post.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday the Earl of SHAFTESBURY, in presenting a petition from the City of London in favour of Poland, expressed his opinion that the only solution of the existing difficulty was the separation of Poland from Russia. The Earl of HARROWBY suggested that Russia had forfeited her rights by the violation of the Treaty of Vienna. Earl RUSSELL, in reply, said that her MAJESTY's Government had advised the EMPEROR OF RUSSIA to restore to Poland the institutions originally granted by the Emperor ALEXANDER, and had pointed out that the only means of restoring the confidence of the Poles was to entrust the judicial, civil, and political administration of the country to an assembly elected by the Poles themselves. He asked the House to rely on the efforts of the Government, on the public opinion of Europe, which not even the EMPEROR OF RUSSIA would be long able to neglect, on the general sense of justice which animated all men, and on that Heaven which would not allow oppression to go unpunished or such sufferings to endure. The Augmentation of Benefices Bill passed through Committee. On Monday, in answer to the Marquis of NORMANBY, Earl RUSSELL said that Mr. JAMES BISHOP, who is at present undergoing a sentence of imprisonment in the fortress of Alexandria, on the charge of conspiring against the Italian Government, had a fair and impartial trial, but her Majesty's Government interceded in his behalf, and succeeded in getting the sentence of 10 years' hard labour commuted to 10 years' imprisonment in a fortress, and they entertained the hope that at the first favourable opportunity the Italian Government would grant him a free pardon. On Tuesday the London Traffic Regulation Bill and the Elections during Recess Bill passed through committee. The Cayman Islands Bill and the London Diocese Bill were read a third time and passed. On Thursday, being Ascension Day, the House did not sit.

In the House of Commons on riday, on the order for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. HENNESSY moved for further papers respecting the state of Southern Italy. Mr. LAYARD opposed the motion, and after a long debate on the state of that country, the motion was withdrawn. The Offences (South Africa) Bill and the New Zealand Boundaries Bill was read a second time. On Monday the House went into Committee on the Prison Ministers' Bill, and resumed the consideration of its clauses. On Clause 3, Mr. PACKE moved as an amendment the omission of the words charging the county or borough rate with the payments for the chaplains to be appointed under the Bill. On a division, the amendment was negatived by 192 to 126. On the question that the clause stand part of the Bill, another division was taken, when the clause was carried by 166 to 71. The Bill then passed through Committee, and was reported to the House. The Customs and Inland Revenue Bill passed through committee. The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill was read a third time and passed. On Tuesday Mr. ROEBUCK called attention to the case of the two dismissed judges in the Ionian Islands, and moved for papers on the subject. After some discussion the motion was agreed to. Mr. H. SEYMOUR moved a resolution that the occupation of waste lands in India by settlers, and the redemption of a portion of the land-tax of India, are desirable objects, especially with a view to the present state of the cotton industry in this country; and that it is expedient that her Majesty's Government should take further steps to carry them out. Sir C. WOOD opposed the motion, and after a long discussion it was withdrawn. Mr. W. EWART obtained leave to bring in a Bill to decimalise the existing system of weights and measures, and to establish an accordance between them and those of foreign countries. On Wednesday Mr. HADFIELD moved the second reading of the Judgments, &c., Law Amendment Bill. On a division, the second reading was negatived by 43 to 23. The Bill was consequently lost. Sir J. FURGUSSON moved the second reading of the Accidents Compensation Bill, the object of which was to limit the liabilities of railway companies in cases of accident. Mr. LONGFIELD moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. On a division the amendment was carried by 90 to 70. The Bill was therefore lost. Mr. ALCOCK moved that the Church Rates Redemption Bill be read a second time on Wednesday, the 10th of June. On a division the motion was negatived by 39 to 25. Sir HUGH CAIRNS obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the law relating to district parochial churches in Ireland. On Thursday the Prison Ministers' Bill, as amended, was considered and agreed to. The Volunteers Bill was read a second time. On the motion for going into committee on the Thames Embankment (North Side) Bill, Mr. CRAWFORD moved that the Bill be recommitted to the select committee, with an instruction to consider an offer made by the Corporation of the City of London to appropriate 350,000*l.* out of the City funds to the construction of the new street from Blackfriars to the Mansion House. After a long discussion, the motion was withdrawn, and the Bill passed through committee. The House then went into committee on the London Coal and Wine Duties Continuance Bill, the clauses of which were agreed to. The English Church Services in Wales Bill, the Vaccination (Ireland) Bill, and the Sale of Mill Sites, &c. (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. The Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act Continuance Bill was read a second time. The Naval Medical Supplemental Fund Society Winding-up Act Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES continue at Marlborough House. On Friday the Prince and Princess de Joinville paid a visit to their Royal Highnesses. The Prince of Wales, attended by Major Teesdale, rode on horseback. The Princess took a carriage drive. The Sheriffs of London and Middlesex waited on the Prince of Wales at Marlborough House and invited his Royal Highness and the Princess to an entertainment and ball at Guildhall on the 8th June. In the afternoon their Royal Highnesses visited the House of Lords and remained for about half an hour. Towards the end of June their Royal Highnesses will honour by their presence a grand ball to be given by the Brigade of Guards.

Prince Alfred.—Prince Alfred arrived at Portsmouth on Monday morning from Osborne, in her Majesty's screw yacht Fairy. His Royal Highness landed at the dockyard, and attended at the Royal Naval College in uniform, where he successfully passed through his gunnery examinations as a Lieutenant in the Navy. His Royal Highness afterwards visited the turret ship Royal Sovereign and other objects of interest in the yard, and returned to Osborne in the Fairy.

Parliamentary Movements.—It was resolved last night on the motion of Lord Palmerston, that Parliament shall adjourn for the Whitsuntide recess from Tuesday next, the 19th inst., to the following Thursday week. Mr. O'Hagan, the Attorney-General for Ireland, has offered himself in the Ministerial interest for Tralee, vacant by the resignation of Capt. Daniel O'Connell. The Hon. Mr. Vereker, Lord Mayor of Dublin, and Mr. W. G. Howard, also announced themselves as candidates in the Conservative interest, but the Lord Mayor subsequently retired in favour of Capt. Knox, who in his turn retired in favour of Mr. William Denny. On Thursday Mr. Denny and Mr. Howard both retired from the contest, so that the Attorney-General will be elected without opposition.

Foreign.

France.—In closing the Session of the Corps Legislatif on Friday, the Duke de Morny, the President, delivered a speech thanking the Chamber for the support it had afforded to the Government. He said:—

> "The Emperor is gradually developing the institutions of the country. In the period which will now follow, the new Chamber will in its wisdom and devotion be able to maintain harmony between the great public powers, and will assure the future of the dynasty and the welfare of France."

In conclusion, M. de Morny wished re-election to all. His speech was received with much applause. MM. Drouyn de Lhuys, Reveil, Monnier, Sizeranne, Mocquard, Mentgue, and Germiny, and Generals Waldner, Marey, and Monge, have been nominated to the rank of Senators. Several evening journals announce that M. Thiers, yielding to the wishes of a great number of electors, has determined upon coming forward as a candidate for the representation of the second electoral district of Paris, and for the towns of Aix and Valenciennes. The Constitutionnel publishes an article signed by M. Paul Limayrac, stating that a perfect accord prevails among the three Powers on the Polish question. It says:—

> "The reply of Russia is by no means a refusal, as she acknowledges that the Polish question is a European one, and agrees to enter into negotiations. The agreement of Europe in this request is therefore henceforth an established fact, and everything permits the hope that in some diplomatic form not yet agreed upon it will perhaps be possible to protect the legitimate interests of Poland, which are bound up with the interests of civilisation and peace."

La France asserts that Russia accepts, in principle, the project of a Conference for the settlement of the affairs of Poland. The Pays announces that the Swedish fleet is expected to arrive at Cherbourg at the end of the present month. It is rumoured that 30 batteries are to be added to the artillery of the French army, and that the horses lent some time since by the War Department to farmers are quietly coming back. Mr. Arthur Cayley, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, has been chosen corresponding member of the Institute of France in the department of astronomy.

Spain.—A Cabinet Council was held on Tuesday at Aranjuez, under the presidency of the Queen. Her Majesty expressed to the Ministers the happiness it would afford her to see them continue at the head of affairs. King Ferdinand of Portugal has arrived at Madrid.

Portugal.—The ex-Regent Dom Fernando has gone to Spain, on a visit to the Duke and Duchess de Montpensier. The Cortes are engaged in discussing the budget. The Eastern Railway has been opened from Abrantes to Crato, a distance of about 80 leagues. The new water company of Lisbon has nearly completed its labours, and the pipes are now laid in all the principal streets of the city.

Denmark.—After three days' debate the Rigsraad, in its sitting of Tuesday, voted the address to the King. By this vote the present policy of the Government in reference to the Constitutional regulations of the Monarchy is approved.

Sweden and Norway.—In the sitting of the Diet at Stockholm on the 2d inst., a debate took place on the motion in favour of Poland. Count Manderström, Minister for Foreign Affairs, stated that the Cabinet had despatched notes on the 2d and 7th of April to St. Petersburg in reference to Poland. The nobility and clergy voted the order of the day, expressing strong sympathies for Poland, and confidence that the Government would do all in its power for Poland, with regard, however, to the maintenance of peace, unless the public interest should require war. The members representing the citizens rejected the reservation in favour of peace, and only expressed their sympathies for Poland, and their confidence that the Government would be inspired by the feeling which they know to exist in the country. The representatives of the peasants also adopted a simple vote of confidence in the Government.

Prussia.—During the debate in the Chamber of Deputies on Monday on the Military Bill, Lieut.-General Von Roon, Minister of War, designated a remark made by Herr Von Sybel as an unwarrantable assumption. The President thereupon interrupted him, when a dispute arose respecting the powers of the President, which ended by the latter putting on his hat and adjourning the House for an hour. Much excitement prevailed. At the reopening of the Chamber the Minister of War sent word to the House that he was unable to attend. At the sitting of Tuesday the President read a letter signed by all the Ministers, stating that so long as the House supports the assumption made on the previous day by the President of a right to limit the Ministers' freedom of speech, the members of the Cabinet will no longer be present at the sittings of the Chamber. The Ministers require a declaration from the Deputies that the House has no disciplinary authority over the members of their body. The letter of the Ministers was at once referred to a special committee, which summoned all the Ministers to appear before them. Count von Bismark Schönhausen, however, replied for himself and his colleagues, declining to appear. He referred the committee to the explanations contained in the former Ministerial letter, which, he said, rendered any participation of the Ministers in the debates of the committee and the Chamber utterly impossible. On Wednesday the Committee proposed to the House not to consent to the demand expressed in the Ministerial letter. Meanwhile the Party of Progress has brought in a former address of Herr Virchow, respecting the political situation of the country. The Centre, upon the other hand, wishes to await the settlement of the dispute upon the question of competence. The draught of the address of Herr Virchow, which has been adopted by the Fortschritt party, gives an outline of the political position of Prussia abroad. The address further begs the King to set aside persons and a policy which threaten to bring ruin upon the Throne and country. It also states that the Lower House will use every constitutional means to ward off a war,—at least, while the Government pursues its present policy; and concludes by expressing a hope that the King will restore to the nation its constitutional rights, and again unfurl the banner of national strength and German unity. The Judicial Committee of the Chamber has authorised the demand of the Minister of Justice for the prosecution of the Polish members Counts Dzialynsk and Guttrys for high treason.

Austria.—The Official Gazette of Sunday published an Imperial patent, convoking the Reichsrath for the 17th of June. An Imperial decree was published on Wednesday, stating that, in order to throw into oblivion the remembrance of the events which took place in Transylvania in 1848, 1849, 1851, and 1853, the Emperor is pleased to relieve those who have passed their term of imprisonment for high treason from any legal consequences of such imprisonment.

Russia.—An insurrection has broken out in the Russian province of the Ukraine, especially near the town of Bialocerdient.

Poland.—The 13th of May, the term fixed for the expiration of the amnesty, passed without any noticeable event taking place in Warsaw. The secret Provisional Government of that city has issued a proclamation pronouncing severe penalties against any functionaries in Poland collecting taxes for the Russian Government. On the 2d inst. the corps of Taczanowski was defeated near Binczszans, and Taczanowski himself was wounded. Subsequently Taczanowski, who had been surrounded by a hostile force near Konin, on the Wartha, gave battle at Kolo, in the Government of Kalisch, and repulsed the Russians. 600 insurgents, who had come from Galicia, have been defeated near Slawko; 31 of their number were taken prisoners among whom were 14 Frenchmen and Italians. On the 5th inst. the insurgent chief Bonitza, with 800 men, attacked the Russian infantry near Milzyrzecz, but was defeated and taken prisoner. On the 6th inst. Miniewski suffered a defeat, with considerable loss, at Krzejkawka. General Nulle was killed. On the 7th the insurgents were defeated and dispersed near Scyce and Wilkowinne. A portion of them fought their way into the interior, and 141 others have been conveyed to Cracow. The band of Taczanowski, united with several others, was attacked near Nikel, north of Konin, and completely routed. The insurgents lost one cannon. On the same day a considerable force of insurgents from Galicia, commanded by Jordan, was defeated near Miechalovice, on the road to Carcova, and thrown back across the frontier with heavy loss. On the 8th, Tezoranski's band was compelled to retire into Galicia. On the 10th a battle took place in the district of Ulanow between the insurgents and the Russians. The insurgents crossed the Galician frontier the same evening. On the same day 600 well-armed insurgent cavalry occupied Lubar, in Volhynia, and, having been reinforced by 200 men, marched, under the command of the brothers Dunin, upon Ostropol and Labun. Rumours are current of risings in several other districts of Volhynia and Podolia. Travellers coming from Ostrowo state that a very sanguinary engagement took place on the 12th near Kalisch, in which the Russians were said to be victorious, although they suffered very great loss. Several carts filled with wounded had entered Kalisch. In this engagement both Czeckowski's and Jezioranski's corps were dispersed, and most of their men have since crossed the Galician frontier in detachments of from 20 to 30. The greater part of them were unarmed. At the last accounts Jezioranski had scarcely 300 men left under his command. On the other hand, Mierolawski is reported to be at the head of a large body of insurgents, well equipped and armed with several pieces of rifled cannon, moving in the south-western direction of Poland. Barbarous atrocities have been perpetrated on the estates of the Counts Mole, Plater, and 11 other noblemen in the neighbourhood of Dünaburg, by Russian soldiers in the disguise of peasants. The Countesses Mole and Plater both suffered the most shocking ill usage before the eyes of their husbands, while they lay bound with cords on the ground, and the former is said to have since become a lunatic. Fresh arrests and domiciliary visits have taken place in Posen. The prisons are filled to overflowing, and all the parties arrested will be carried off to Berlin as soon as it is safe to remove them, and there tried for high treason before the Supreme Criminal Court.

Italy.—In the Chamber of Deputies on Wednesday Signor Massari contradicted Lord Henry Lennox's assertion that he had visited the Neapolitan prisons in company of a member of the Italian Parliament. He also contradicted the alleged seizure of the Perseveranza. In the sitting of Thursday M. Lacaita declared that Lord Henry Lennox visited the Neapolitan prisons accompanied by M. Dassi, who was not a deputy, though he had been elected, but not admitted into the Italian Parliament. The Chamber has resolved to appoint a parliamentary committee for a general inquiry into the military and commercial navy of the kingdom. The Pope left Rome on Monday evening for Velletri, escorted by detachments of French and Pontifical troops. His Holiness will return to Rome on the 20th inst

Greece.—The English, French, and Austrian Ministers have addressed Notes to the Provisional Government relative to excesses committed by the military, and calling upon the Government to take energetic measures to prevent the recurrence of similar acts.

The Herzegovina.—The Paris papers publish telegrams from Ragusa, dated Wednesday, announcing that fresh disturbances have broken out in Trebigne. The wives of the Turkish inhabitants in the environs of the town assembled in arms, demanding the release of the rioters who were arrested when the Greek school was destroyed, and who are now confined at Mostar. The assembly was dispersed by the regular troops.

Turkey and Egypt.—General Türr has arrived at Constantinople. The Porte has received a Note from France inviting it to join the diplomatic action of the Western Powers in favour of Poland. The Shah of Persia is said to have received a similar Note. Aali Pasha, Minister for Foreign Affairs, has addressed a despatch to the Turkish Minister in Paris relative to the conditions originally imposed by the Porte on the execution of the Suez Canal, and which have been evaded by M. Lesseps. The despatch says that the Sultan will only assent to the further prosecution of the scheme on the conclusion of international engagements guaranteeing the complete neutrality of the channel, like those of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus. It also insists on the immediate abolition of the forced labour employed on the canal, and on the annulment of the clause in the contract ceding to the company all the land bordering upon the different canals, the effect of which it says would be to create at the pleasure of the company on important points of the Ottoman Empire colonies almost independent of the Empire. The despatch adds that when these conditions are fulfilled, the Porte will take the contract into serious consideration, but at present it has not the slightest validity, as the company had no right to commence operations without the consent of the Porte. If the company cannot fulfil these conditions the Porte will endeavour, as a matter of grace, to return it the money it has expended, and will also adopt such measures, in conjunction with the Viceroy, as may be deemed expedient for continuing the works, if the realisation should be found feasible. The Prince and Princess Napoleon have arrived at Alexandria. Letters from Khartum mention the arrival there of English travellers, coming from Zanzibar, who have discovered the source of the Nile.

Syria.—A disastrous earthquake took place in the island of Rhodes on the 22d ult., by which 2200 houses were destroyed in 22 villages, with a great loss of life.

Cape of Good Hope.—The Cape Parliament was to meet on the 16th of April. The expenditure for 1862 had exceeded the revenue by 70,000*l*. The colony was suffering under very serious depression. Three years' drought and the long winter had reduced the agricultural population to great straits. Almost universal insolvency pervaded large farming districts, and the trade of the towns had suffered severely through distress in the country. Seven miles more of the Cape Town Railway had been opened. Orders had been received for the recall and breaking up of the Livingstone expedition. The latest news from the missionary stations was favourable. Messrs. Chapman and Baines had effected their passage across from Walwich Bay to the Zambezi, and confirmed Dr. Livingstone's glowing description of the Victoria Falls. On the 12th of March the Federal corvette Jamestown, 20 guns, for China, put into Table Bay, having damaged her rudder. She was suffered to remain two days on a plea of effecting repairs. During that time she shipped surreptitiously about 20 seamen there. Severe retribution had been exacted of the Arabs for murdering the Penguin's seamen.

India.—A cousin of Nana Sahib, who was recently arrested, has been tried and sentenced to transportation for life. A despatch from Bombay, April 28, says that the Bhore Ghât incline of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway has been successfully opened. Lord Elgin finished his "progress" and reached his residence at Simla, on the 4th ult. The last place he visited was Umballa, where he was accompanied by Sir Hugh Rose. They were received with great pomp by the troops of the garrison and the united forces of the Cis-Sutlej States; the troops of our allies Putteeala, Jheend, and Nabha, and a large number of Sirdars, making up the show. The troops of the Rajahs of Putteeala and Jheend, who took part in the capture of Delhi in 1857, and the men of the Nabha Contingent, who were engaged with the Jullundhur mutineers at Loodiana, have, through their chiefs, petitioned the Government to grant them the Indian medal. The Government has decided that they are entitled to the decoration, and has ordered the requisite medal rolls to be sent in. The Viceroy has at the request of the Rajah of Kupoorthalla conferred upon that chief the title of "Dowlut-i-Inglesia," which signifies "wealth of the English," and that his services are always at the command of the Crown. The Government of India has received authentic information that the rebel leader, Feroze Shah, and several other rebels of note, are now at the Court of Teheran. The Lucknow Begum, Huzrat Mehal, and her son, Brijis Kadr, the principal leaders of the Oude rebellion, having at last expressed their wish to surrender to the British authorities, the Government have directed that their names be expunged from the list of proscribed outlaws, and they are now added to the roll of our State prisoners. The orders for the first distribution of the proceeds of the booty captured in Pegu many years ago have been issued in the Calcutta Gazette. The total sum to be distributed is 335, 211 rs. Locusts have made great devastation in the Punjab. At Nynee Tal the valley was filled with them, and the lake covered with their corpses.

China.—A despatch from Shanghai of March 25 says that the new organisation of the Ward force has caused dissatisfaction among the troops composing it. The banditti who menaced Tien-tsin have been repulsed by the Chinese troops. The rebels have evacuated Shaou-Shing. No news has been received from Admiral Kuper's fleet.

United States.—A despatch from New York of the 1st inst. says that General Hooker's whole army is in motion. A portion of the army crossed the Rappahannock at Kelly's Ford, above Fredericksburg, on the previous Monday, and captured the Confederate pickets. General Hooker sent out skirmishers, but found no enemy. Since that time the remainder of the army has been crossing at three other fords above and below Fredericksburg, and it is supposed that the whole army is now across the Rappahannock. The Confederates are reported to have been everywhere surprised, and to have offered no serious resistance to the passage of the army at any point. The Federals have captured from 300 to 500 prisoners, who state that General "Stonewall" Jackson commands the right wing of the Confederate army. Advices previously received stated that differences had arisen between the President and General Hooker on the occasion of the last visit of Mr. Lincoln and General Halleck to the Army of the Potomac. General Hooker submitted his ideas of a forward movement, which required for its success the co-operation of the greater portion of the troops defending Washington, thereby exposing that city to the chances of an attack by the Confederates. General Halleck at once denounced the scheme as foolhardy; and the fears of the President becoming aroused, a warm discussion ensued, which terminated in an open quarrel. As General Hooker still adhered to his plan of campaign, it was thought that he would be removed, and strong efforts were made by the friends of General Fremont to obtain his appointment to the succession, but it was believed that General Halleck would himself assume the command of the Army of the Potomac. The present advance seems to prove that General Hooker's plans are to be carried out. General Stonewall Jackson, at the head of a large Confederate force, has taken possession of a portion of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad between Cumberland and Piedmont. A Confederate force has also appeared at Morgantown, Western Virginia, on the Monnagavelli River, near the frontier of Pennsylvania. This raid has created intense excitement all along the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Fears are entertained for the safety of Wheeling and Pittsburg; and the Federal Government has despatched a force of 8000 men from Washington to Cumberland to guard the threatened points westward of that city. The place of these men was supplied from Baltimore, by a portion of the force under General Schenck. A body of Confederate cavalry appeared near Murfreesborough on the 28th ult., causing much activity among the soldiers of General Rosencrans, a general attack being apprehended. Subsequent despatches from Murfreesborough state that the report of the advance of the Confederates against General Rosencrans is confirmed by accounts from Confederate deserters. Late arrivals from New Orleans give accounts of the successful progress of the Federal expedition into the Bayou Têche country. On the 17th inst. a battle took place on Vermillion Bayou, between the forces of General Banks and the Confederates, which resulted in the defeat of the latter, with the loss of 1500 prisoners. General Banks has since taken possession of the Opelousas Railroad, and is in communication with Admiral Farragut. General Banks is sending in prisoners daily to New Orleans. The Confederate batteries at Bute la Rose have been captured, with the valuable saltworks of Petite Anse. Large quantities of Confederate stores and ammunition had been destroyed, and several gunboats had been burnt or blown up by the Confederates themselves, to prevent their seizure by the Federals. Official despatches received at Washington on the 26th announce that a second fleet of six transports and gunboats has run the blockade of Vicksburg. Some 500 shots were fired from the batteries, and all the vessels were hit, but none received serious damage, except one of the transports, which was sunk. Special despatches from Memphis, however, assert that out of this second fleet, four were known to have been sunk, and the other two had succeeded in passing the batteries, but were seriously disabled. The whole of General Grant's army has since marched across the peninsula in front of Vicksburg. Two tugs, towing four heavy barges, ran the blockade of the batteries on the night of the 25th. It was also stated that the Federal General Osterhouse occupied Grand Gulf. Despatches from St. Louis of the 26th state that the Confederates, under General Marmaduke, attacked General McNeill at Cape Girardeau on that day. After three hours' severe fighting the Confederates were repulsed. By despatches of the 27th, Generals McNeill and Vandervere are reported to be in pursuit of the Confederates, and to have captured many prisoners, horses, arms, &c. The New York Express states that it has been ascertained that General Hill's investment of Washington, North Carolina, was merely a feint to cover his real object of collecting and removing large quantities of grain from Hyde County, in that State, and that all the waggons he could get were so employed from the 31st March to the 18th April. The correspondent of the Tribune, writing from Hilton Head on the 20th, states that preparations were making for another attack upon Charleston by the combined forces of General Hunter and Admiral Dupont. The report of the Congressional Committee on the conduct of the war has caused general discouragement. The Herald says the revelations it has made are scandalous, calculated to damage the President and his Cabinet, and to throw a wet blanket on the national enthusiasm for the war, so as to prepare the way to bring it to a close as soon as possible, with a divided Union and two independent general Governments. It also says that General Hooker's declarations before the War Committee, attributing the failures of Burnside and M'Clellan to incapacity, place him in an extraordinary position of responsibility, and he has now no alternative before him but death or victory—death in the field or death to his military reputation. He has voluntarily set himself up as a superior to M'Clellan and Burnside, and he must make good his pretensions or sink into irretrievable disgrace. The New York Times hopes that if General Hooker fails the nation has acquired sense enough to dismiss him to obscurity without wrangling for half a year. The New York press generally considers that the action of Mr. Adams in giving a certificate to a vessel bound to Matamoras with arms for Mexico does not justify the severe comments of the British press upon the subject, and thinks it proves there is a hostile feeling in England, ready to resent even the shadow of affront. Some journals consider Mr. Adams's action perfectly justifiable, and the Herald thinks the time has arrived when the United States, conceding to England her just dues, may peremptorily demand of her an honest and consistent neutrality, or the last alternative of war. The Polish Committee of New York has issued an appeal to the American people for aid. The Herald urges the people not to contribute, as Russia is the only country showing sympathy with the North, and such proceedings would be certain to destroy the cordial relations existing between the two countries. The arrears of pay due to the army, amounting to nearly 60,000,000 dols., have been liquidated. The arrears due to the widows of soldiers have not been paid. The Confederate steamer Alabama is reported to have coaled and received a supply of powder at Ronce, Porto Rico, on the 7th inst., and on the 8th to have captured the American ship Morning Star, which was afterwards released, upon giving bonds to the amount of 60,000 dols. Mr. W. Cornell Jewett has been sent by the Southern Government to Europe by this mail, for the purpose of again urging England to join France and other Powers for mediation in American affairs.

Mexico.—Telegraphic despatches from San Francisco report that General Forey had captured most of the fortifications around Puebla and surrounded those remaining, so that their capture, with the whole Mexican army, appeared imminent. The losses of the French are stated to be very heavy. General Vernet de Laumière, of the Artillery, was among the killed.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Friday.—Poland.—The Earl of Shaftesbury, in presenting a petition from a meeting of merchants and others, held at the Guildhall, in favour of the Poles, said that separation of Polan from Russia must be the issue of the present struggle. He contended that, on grounds of expediency and of gratitude, Europe ought to insist on the settlement of this dangerous question. Poland had formerly stemmed the tide of Turkish invasion, and Europe ought not to forget it.—The Earl of Harrowby also condemned the policy pursued by the Russian Government, and was of opinion that by the violation of the Treaty of Vienna it had forfeited its rights as regards Poland.—Earl Russell alluded to the responsibility under which he spoke lest he should lead either the House or the Poles to think Her Majesty's Government were prepared in any way to take part in the present movement, or do more than address such representations to Russia as became a Government like our own. Having shown the good effects of the remonstrances of Lord Palmerston in behalf of Poland in 1831, he proceeded to express his belief in the benevolence and sincerity of the Emperor Alexander, who, by emancipating the Russian serfs, had given grounds for thinking that he would be animated by the same benevolent feelings towards the Poles. As yet nothing had been done to guarantee the rights which the Poles were entitled to expect. Prince Gortschakoff had stated that the development of the future institutions of Poland depended upon the confidence placed in them by the Poles; but so often had these institutions been violated by arbitrary measures that it was impossible for the Poles to place any confidence in the professions or promises of Russia. Having denounced the act of the conscription as the immediate cause of the outbreak, he stated that her Majesty's Government had recommended Russia to restore the constitution given by Alexander I. in 1815 to Poland; and had also suggested that an Assembly chosen by the Poles themselves would be the best means of conciliating confidence. Whether these or other steps were adopted, he had told the Russian Government that, unless civil, political, and judicial institutions in Poland were placed in the hands of the Poles, there was no chance of tranquillity. By tranquillity he meant lasting peace, without assuring which we should deceive ourselves, the Poles, and Europe. He examined at some length the proposition of Lord Shaftesbury as to the separation of Poland from Russia, and the forfeiture of Russian rights by violation of the Treaty of Vienna, as suggested by Lord Harrowby; and pointed out the apparently insurmountable difficulties which Austria, as well as Prussia and Russia, would oppose to such a policy, declaring at the same time that her Majesty's Government could not entertain such a suggestion. In conclusion, he requested the House to rely on the efforts of the Government, on the public opinion of Europe, which the Emperor of Russia could not neglect, on the general sense of justice of mankind, and on the never failing but sure justice of Heaven.

Monday.—The Royal Assent was given by commission to several public and private Bills. Case of Mr. Bishop.—The Marquis of Normanby, in presenting a petition from the Rev. Alfred Bishop in reference to his son Mr. James Bishop, now a prisoner in the fortress of Alexandria, undergoing a sentence of 10 years' imprisonment, called the attention of the House to the proceedings of her Majesty's Government and their local agents in their conduct of this case. He animadverted in severe terms on the course pursued by Mr. Consul Bonham, and stated that Mr. J. Bishop had not met with that lenity which the Italian Government had extended to other political prisoners, owing to the refusal of Mr. Bonham to have him treated otherwise than a Neapolitan subject. He concluded by reading a letter from Mr. J. Bishop on his present weak state of health, and appealed to her Majesty's Government to exert its influence on Mr. Bishop's behalf.—The Duke of SUTHERLAND gave his experience from recent visits of the state of the Italian prisons, and asserted that Mr. J. Bishop was very comfortably provided for, and very kindly treated, as the authorities considered him weak in the head, and a friend of Lord Normanby. —The Earl of HARDWICKE protested against the language used by the Duke of Sutherland in describing the position of Mr. Bishop, whose position was worthy of the deepest sympathy. —Earl GREY objected to the practice of putting the worst possible construction on every act of the Italian Government. The experiment of Italian unity was one of the greatest moment, not only to Italy, but to the whole of Europe, and it was exceedingly hard that in the midst of unparalleled difficulties the Italian Government should be vilified night after night by Lord Normanby. As far as regarded Mr. Bishop, he saw nothing harsh in the sentence passed upon him, as he would, under similar circumstances in this country, have been hung as a traitor.—The Earl of CARNARVON thought if Englishmen mixed themselves up in the complications of foreign politics they must bear the consequences if they were seized by the Government against which they were conspiring. He did not believe there was any unfairness in the trial of Mr. J. Bishop, but he was inclined to think that the Italian Government would have performed a graceful act if they had passed a lighter sentence. He hoped the Foreign Secretary would take this view of the case, and press it on the attention of the Italian Government.—Earl RUSSELL, in stating the course he had taken in this case, expressed great sympathy for the Rev. A. Bishop and the misfortunes of his son, an additional one being that his noble friend had taken up the case. Having quoted the authority of Mr. Panizzi as to the fairness and impartiality of the Italian tribunals, he protested against Lord Normanby's assertions that Mr. Bishop had been convicted on insufficient evidence, especially as the decision had been confirmed on appeal, and thought it most unfair to impugn the justice of the Italian Government, and to make the House of Lords as it were a Court of Review. On hearing of the arrest of Mr. Bishop he had taken steps to procure him a speedy trial, and after conviction a full pardon, and when that was not deemed admissible a remission of the harder part of his sentence, on the ground of his ill-health. He had received a promise that on the first fitting occasion Mr. Bishop would be proposed to the King for a free pardon. He concluded by defending the Italian Government from the attacks of Lord Normanby.—After a few words in reply from Lord NORMANBY, the subject dropped. The Hares (Ireland) Bill, and the Cayman Islands Bill were read a third time and passed. The Elections During Recess Bill, the Telegraphs Bill, and the Marriages, &c. (Ireland) Bill were read a second time.

TUESDAY.—Lord CHELMSFORD, on the motion for going into Committee on the City Traffic Regulation Bill, said the object of the measure was to enable the City authorities to relieve the overcrowded streets, by regulating the great amount of traffic in the City, subject to the sanction of the Home Secretary.—Lord REDESDALE admitted the necessity of legislating on the subject, but proposed to limit the duration of the Bill to seven years, to see how the measure worked.—After a few words from Lord CRANWORTH and Lord Derby the House went into committee on the Bill, and the various clauses were agreed to. The Cayman Islands Bill and the London Diocese Bill were read a third time and passed. The Elections During Recess Bill passed through committee.

THURSDAY.—To-day being Ascension Day the House did not sit.

FRIDAY.—Ludgate Hill Viaduct.—The Bishop of LONDON having presented a petition from the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's against this viaduct, Lord REDESDALE said that though the Railway Company had power to make the viaduct, they did not intend to continue their line beyond Earl Street at present, from want of capital, and they had now a Bill before Parliament for the purpose of obtaining further powers in reference to Faringdon station. It was a very important question as to what the House could do with regard to withdrawing powers already granted, and ought not to be disposed of at a moment's notice.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH called attention to the Schleswig Holstein question.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY. — Southern Italy.—On the order for going into Supply, Mr. HENNESSY moved for further papers respecting the state of Southern Italy. He pointed out the discrepancies between the statements contained in the despatches of Mr. Consul Bonham and the returns of the Board of Trade with regard to the commerce of England with Naples and Sicily, the former representing that British trade had increased in 1862 over the previous year, while according to the latter there was a large falling off.—Mr. C. BENTINCK seconded the motion, and said that he himself had twice in that House convicted Sir J. Hudson, the British Minister at Turin, of withholding from her Majesty's Government information with regard to the state of Italy of which they ought to be in possession. He reviewed the present state of the Neapolitan provinces, and declared that the brigandage which prevailed there was in reality a national protest under the national flag against the presence of the foreigner. — Mr. LAYARD, in opposing the motion, declared that the brigandage was not a popular movement, but that of an insignificant reactionary section, whose only object was to involve the country in confusion and bloodshed, and the sympathy for which expressed by the party on the Conservative benches showed that they were not the friends of Italian liberty. He read returns to show that great commercial activity prevailed throughout nearly the whole of the Italian empire. He spoke warmly in favour of the Government of Victor Emmanuel, and expressed his opinion that it enjoyed the confidence of the Italian people, and was calculated to bring about that great desideratum, Italian unity. — Lord H. LENNOX emphatically denied that the Government of Victor Emmanuel was entitled to the admiration of the House, or the respect of the English people. On the contrary, he contended, not only from recent personal observation, but from official documents, that an odious system of domestic espionage was carried on, that the people were dragged out of their beds to prison, that liberty of the press was suspended, that the freedom of the subject was a mockery, that the state of the prisons was disgraceful to humanity, and that even ladies were imprisoned for "political sympathies." He gave a graphic description of the visits which he had paid to the Neapolitan prisons, the inmates of which he described as being reduced to the most deplorable condition of moral and physical destitution. — Mr. BUTLER JOHNSTONE defended the Italian Government, which he said was compelled to adopt strong measures in order to secure law and order, and to uproot the vicious system which so long had been in vogue in that country. With regard to brigandage there could be no doubt that it was organised by a Bourbon committee sitting at Rome, of which the ex-King is the chief.—Mr. L. GOWER also defended the Italian Government, and thought that Lord H. Lennox had been misled by the Mazzinian and reactionary agents.—Sir G. BOWYER called upon the Government, which had been mainly instrumental in bringing about the present state of things, to use its influence to mitigate the despotism under which Southern Italy was groaning.—After some observations from Mr. AGAR ELLIS and Sir P. O'BRIEN, Mr. B. COCHRANE read a long list of atrocities committed by the Italian Government during the last few months, and declared that the despotism practised in the Neapolitan provinces was a disgrace to a civilised State.—Mr. MAGUIRE denounced the monstrous cruelties committed by the Government of Victor Emmanuel, and expressed his opinion that a dynasty commenced in knavery, fraud, and treachery, would end in shame and disappointment.—After some remarks by Mr. WHALLEY, Mr. ONSLOW, Mr. SCLATER-BOOTH, and Sir J. WALSH, Lord PALMERSTON did not object to set up the affairs of Italy for debate in the House of Commons, as he considered that the result would be to elicit truth. The statement made by Lord H. Lennox, so far from inculpating the Italian Government, only showed how difficult it was to eradicate the abuses of an old system. Her Majesty's Government did not deny the existence of a great number of abuses in the Neapolitan provinces; but the cause was to be traced to the vicinity of Naples to Rome, where a committee composed of 200 persons was labouring in the interests of the ex-King, and sending forth the most reckless and desperate outlaws from society to prey upon the newly-annexed territory. Five out of the six States added to Piedmont were now prosperous and happy, and it was only in Naples that any one cared to see the restoration of the Bourbon dynasty. He believed that the unity of Italy would endure, and if the whole peninsula could be placed under one form of government the result would no doubt be even more gratifying than at present.—Mr. DISRAELI said that the policy of her Majesty's Government, so far from developing and consolidating the Italian empire, had weakened it, while it had distracted Europe and paved the way to ceaseless complications. That policy had alarmed and irritated Rome and France, and had not grappled with the great interests which were hostile to the unity of Italy. The result was the dismemberment, dilapidation, and utter confusion of the country.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER commented upon the manner in which Lord H. Lennox had conducted his inquiries into the condition of Southern Italy, and said it was his duty, as a liberal-minded Englishman, and not as a partisan, to have frankly and generously laid before the Italian Government the result of his investigation. He admitted that much still remained in the government of Italy that was lamentable and disgraceful, but he contended that the light of day had been let in to the darkest places, and that a vigorous attempt was making to cleanse the lamentable abuses in the former dynasty. The policy of her Majesty's Government in the affairs of Italy was conceived in equity and justice, and was directed towards a wise and righteous end. It had received the approval of the people of England, who would, he was convinced, be rewarded by beholding a free and united kingdom. The motion for papers was then withdrawn, and the House went, pro formâ, into a Committee of Supply. The Offences (South Africa) Bill and the New Zealand Boundaries Bill were read a second time.

MONDAY.—Greece.—Mr. B. COCHRANE inquired whether any final decision had been come to in reference to the throne of Greece.—Lord PALMERSTON said that no final decision had been arrived at, but he hoped the arrangement with which the public were already acquainted would be carried into effect. The House then went into committee on the Prison Ministers' Bill, and resumed the consideration of its clauses. On the 3d clause, Mr. PACKE moved to omit the words which declared that the sum to be awarded as a recompense for the services of a minister appointed under the Bill shall be deemed "a part of the expenses of the prison to which he is appointed, and be paid out of the funds legally applicable to the payment of such expenses." His object was, he said, to prevent the same being a charge upon the county-rates.—After a long discussion, in the course of which Mr. HENLEY suggested that the sums might be made payable out of money voted by Parliament, the Committee divided, when the amendment was negatived by 192 to 126. Other proposed amendments of the clause were also negatived. A division then took place upon the clause itself, which was carried by 166 to 71. The other clauses were agreed to, with a few amendments. The House then resumed in Committee the consideration of the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill.—Lord R. CECIL moved a new clause to remedy the inconveniences experienced by persons assessed to the Income-tax under 150*l.* a year by the present mode of appeal, by substituting another mode of hearing appeals. He accompanied his motion with remarks upon the vexations attending the collection of the tax.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER professed his readiness to listen to and redress any well-grounded complaint against an officer employed in the collection of the tax; but he observed that the Revenue must have vigilant officers in the collecting of a tax so often evaded, and that he believed the instances of excess were exceedingly rare. With reference to the proposed clause, he suggested various objections to its adoption. The clause, after some further discussion, was withdrawn. The House then went into Committee upon the Inland Revenue Bill. Clause 1, imposing an excise duty on club licences, was negatived. On Clause 9, reducing the rates of duty on stage carriages licensed to carry not more than eight persons, Mr. AYRTON moved to reduce the mileage duty on such carriages from $\frac{1}{2}$d. a mile to $\frac{1}{4}$d., and to impose a duty of $\frac{1}{2}$d. a mile on stage carriages licensed to carry more than eight passengers.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in opposing the motion, said that he felt compelled to defend his surplus, which had now shrunk to 400,000*l.* The amendment was, on a division, negatived by 81 to 35, and the Bill passed through committee. The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill was read a third time and passed. — The Solicitor-General moved the discharge of the order for the committee on the Assurances Registration (Ireland) Bill. He explained that the Government did not feel themselves justified in pressing the Bill in view of the great opposition raised against it in Ireland—chiefly, too, by those who had a year or two since declared that some such measure was absolutely necessary. After some remarks by Mr. WHITESIDE, Mr. BUTT, Colonel FRENCH, and Mr. HASSARD, the motion was agreed to, and the Bill was withdrawn.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL, in moving the second reading of the Church Building and New Parishes Acts Amendment Bill, briefly explained the objects of the Bill, which it was proposed, he said, to refer to a Select Committee. —Mr. R. MILLS pointed out what he regarded as an omission in the Bill. After some observations by Mr. HADFIELD, Sir G. Grey, and the SOLICITOR-GENERAL, the Bill was read a second time. The Sale of Mill Sites, &c. (Ireland) Bill, the Drainage and Improvement of Land (Ireland) Bill, and the Poor Removal (No. 2) Bill were read a second time. The Marriages Registration (Ireland) Bill was committed pro formâ. The select committee on the Partnership Law Amendment Bill was nominated.

TUESDAY.—Flogging in the Navy.—In reply to a question from Mr. HADFIELD in reference to a case of flogging on board her Majesty's ship Majestic, Lord C. PAGET said that the article which had appeared in a Liverpool journal on the subject was a gross libel upon the conduct of one of the most distinguished officers in her Majesty's service. He read a letter signed by 35 of the petty officers of the Majestic, complaining of the article in question as a malicious attack upon Captain Inglefield, than whom there was no more humane commander in the service of the Crown. French Occupation of Rome.—In reply to questions relating to Italian affairs, Lord PALMERSTON made some very pointed allusions to the disturbing effects of the prolonged occupation of Rome by a French garrison. Ionian Judges.—Mr. ROEBUCK moved an address for a copy of memorials presented by Sir George Marcoras and Sir Typaldo Xydras, on the 16th of September, 1862, to Major-General Sir H. Storks, her Majesty's Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands. He said that the two gentlemen in question, judges of the Supreme Court, had passed a long life in honour and in doing service to England, and had been treated with injustice in being removed without cause assigned. —Mr. C. FORTESCUE consented to produce the memorials, and said the case of these gentlemen must be judged by the law and constitution of the Ionian Islands, and that their non-reappointment was justified by the charter and as a measure of policy. He had not a word to say against their character, and they would enjoy their pensions; but there were considerations which had operated upon the mind of Sir H. Storks and his Senate in not reappointing them, and the decision had been received with satisfaction in the islands.—General PEEL, from official knowledge of Sir H. Storks, said he was the last man who would be guilty of an unconstitutional or a harsh action.—Lord STANLEY thought that upon the face of the case, a wrong had been inflicted upon these two gentlemen, although the act was legal by the Constitution.—Mr. EVANS, Mr. COCHRANE, and Mr. HENLEY also considered that the two judges had been placed in an unfair position. — The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER defended Sir H. Storks, and said that the Senate of the Islands was responsible for the proceeding complained of. The motion was then agreed to.—Mr. H. SEYMOUR submitted a resolution to the effect that the occupation of Waste Lands in India by settlers, and the redemption of a portion of the land tax of India, were desirable objects, especially with a view to the present state of the cotton industry in this country; and that it was expedient that her Majesty's Government should take further steps to carry them out. In a speech of great length he urged that the heavy land tax imposed in India had a depressing effect upon the country, decreased the other sources of revenue, and impoverished the people. He complained of the apathy and neglect of the Government in not taking measures to irrigate the enormous breadth of waste land which might otherwise be brought into culture, and which was capable of supporting almost any number of settlers. He likewise deprecated the conduct of the Secretary and Council for India in having reversed the policy of Lords Stanley and Canning with reference to the sale of lands, which he described as narrow-minded and short-sighted. What, he asked, had been done to encourage the growth of cotton throughout the vast dominions of the Crown in India? While other foreign countries were endeavouring to stimulate the culture of that substance, and while even the Government of Turkey had translated into the native language and circulated instructions for the cultivation of the plant, the Government of India had done literally nothing to promote its production.—Mr. BUXTON seconded the motion.—Mr. SMOLLETT said that the outcry raised against the amended rules for the sale of waste lands came, he said, from a set of land-jobbers; they had given the utmost satisfaction to the natives of India. On the subject of the sale of waste lands he thought the proposed measure was a faulty one; that in the plains, as regarded the settlement of Europeans, it would be inoperative; and with regard to the redemption of the land-tax he believed it was utterly impossible, in the present state of India, to be carried out.—Mr. VANSITTART approved the modifications of the rules for the sale of waste lands.—Lord STANLEY expressed his regret that the two subjects embraced in the resolution, namely, the redemption of the land tax and the sale of waste lands, were not separately presented for discussion. With regard to the former he had been, and still remained, of opinion that a very considerable number would not avail themselves of the opportunity to redeem the tax, yet that it was most important to offer encouragement to that step. As to the other subject, the sale of waste lands, he believed the quantity of these lands was practically unlimited, and the question was how best to open them to Europeans or natives, and whether it was best done by Lord Canning or Sir C. Wood. He did not blame the latter for expressing his opinion of the rules promulgated by Lord Canning; but he thought Sir C. Wood was wrong in delaying his revision of them. For his own part he was anxious to see the introduction of English capital and the establishment of a system of English colonisation in our Indian possessions; and although the difficulties were many, he trusted that the Government would use all their influence to effect their removal.—After a few words from Colonel SYKES, Mr. J. B. SMITH, and Mr. AYRTON, Sir C. WOOD defended himself from the charge of having been indifferent to the cultivation of cotton in India. As early as February, 1861, the Council offered prizes for the culture of the plant; they did all in their power to make known the scarcity of cotton in Europe, and they had distributed seed by means of the collectors in the various districts. Everything had also been done to stimulate the settlement of colonists in India. With respect to the sale of waste land, he approved of the regulations of Lord Canning, with two exceptions, namely, that there should be a survey previous to sale, and that there should be a sale by auction, even though there was no more than one applicant in the market.—The motion was ultimately withdrawn.—Mr. W. EWART obtained leave to bring in a Bill for decimalising our existing system of weights and measures, and for establishing an accordance between them and those of foreign countries; and Mr. Cox obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act of 1856.

WEDNESDAY.—The Statute Labour Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Bill and the Statute Labour Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Transfer Bill were read a second time.—Mr. HADFIELD moved the second reading of the Judgments, &c., Law Amendment Bill, explaining the state of the existing law and its injurious effects in certain cases, and the provisions by which he proposed to remedy them.—Mr. HUMBERSTON and Mr. MALINS supported the motion.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL opposed it on the ground that the Bill would subvert a fundamental principle of the law of debtor and creditor, taking away rights which belonged to the latter. The tendency of the measure would be either mischievous, or the mischief must be prevented by multiplying the number of legal securities. On a division, the second reading was negatived by 43 to 23. The order for the second reading of the Poisoned Grain Prohibition Bill having been discharged and the Bill withdrawn, Mr. PAULL moved for leave to introduce in lieu thereof a Bill to prohibit the sale and use of poisoned grain or seed or poisonous preparations in certain cases, and the destruction of birds and animals not already protected by law. After a short conversation leave was given to bring in the Bill.—Sir J. FERGUSSON, in moving the second reading of the Accidents Compensation Bill, said that the railway companies did not desire to be exempted from a just responsibility, or to upset Lord Campbell's Act; but so to regulate and limit its operation, which had gone far beyond what Lord Campbell intended, that while it should protect the public interests, it should not injure those of railway proprietors. He dwelt upon the fraudulent claims made upon them. The companies were now exposed to an organised system of fraud provided by needy attorneys and medical men, and appeals were made to the feelings and prejudices of juries, who sometimes gave the parties double what they claimed before going into court. Having regard, then, to all the difficulties of the case and the just liabilities of the companies, the Bill proposed that in case of accident where there was an equal payment there should be an equal liability; and that if any passenger estimated the value of his life at a higher rate than was provided by the Bill, he should insure himself for that amount with the company, who should then be responsible for the claim.—Mr. LONGFIELD moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. He argued that the Bill, so far from providing a remedy for a grievance, was a most indecent and outrageous proposition to limit the liability of railway companies in order to increase dividends by a quarter per cent. If the Bill were carried, human life would be placed on the same category with sheep and cattle, and deaths would be appraised at the rate of 400*l.* for a first-class passenger, 300*l.* for a second, and 200*l.* for a third class. No advantage would be gained by legislation of this sort, which would merely serve to increase the dangers of railway travelling in order to stimulate the cupidity of railway directors.—Mr. BENTINCK seconded the amendment, and called upon the House not to sanction a measure which would deprive the public of all protection against the carelessness and recklessness of those who had monopolised the travelling power of the country.—Mr. THOMPSON defended the Bill, arguing that it would directly and indirectly benefit the public.—Mr. DUTTON and Mr. CLAY also supported the Bill.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL, without denying that the practical application of the law might in some cases bear hard upon railway companies, said that the Bill proposed to affix an arbitrary money value upon lives, or to compel an insurance with the companies themselves against their own wrong, contrary to the principle of insurance.—Mr. BOVILL and Mr. AYRTON opposed the Bill.—After a few words from Mr. PAULL, Sir J. FERGUSSON offered to refer the Bill to a Select Committee. On a division, the amendment was carried by 90 to 70; so the Bill is lost.—Mr. ALCOCK moved that the Church-rates Redemption Bill be read a second time on the 10th of June.—Mr. MOWBRAY opposed the motion, which was negatived on a division by 39 to 25.—Sir H. CAIRNS obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the law relating to District Parochial Churches in Ireland.

THURSDAY.—Loss of the Anglo-Saxon.—In answer to Mr. DAWSON, Mr. M. GIBSON said that no detailed report of the loss of this vessel had yet been received at the Board of Trade. Last year the Associated Press of New York had offered to erect a fog-signal at Cape Race, but neither the Colonial Government nor the Colonial-office was of opinion that a foreign company should obtain a site for the purpose. The Government had, however, urged on the steam-shipping companies the necessity of erecting a fog-signal, but they had not done so, and as the Government had the power of making it, and of levying a toll upon passing ships to defray the expense, it might be desirable that the subject should be reconsidered.—On the Report upon the Prison Ministers' Bill, Mr. BENTINCK moved to omit from the third clause the words authorising the payment to a minister appointed to attend upon prisoners a reasonable sum as a recompense for his services.—Sir G. GREY said that this question had been disposed of in the Committee, and, after a short discussion, the motion was withdrawn.—Some amendments were introduced into the fourth clause on the motion of Mr. HENLEY. The Bill as amended was then agreed to.—On the order for the second reading of the Volunteers Bill, the Marquis of HARTINGTON said that the measure was rendered necessary by the report of the Royal Commission, recommending further assistance by the Government, and by the subsequent vote of the House of a sum for that object. He explained the principal points in respect to which the Bill would alter and amend the law relating to Volunteers, and concluded by giving a very favourable report of the condition of the force, now numbering upwards of 150,000 men. After some remarks by Major EDWARDS, Colonel FRENCH, Sir J. SHELLEY, and Colonel DUNNE, the Bill was read a second time. On the order for the re-committal of the Thames Embankment (North Side) Bill, Mr. CRAWFORD moved that the Bill be re-committed to the Select Committee, with instruction to take into consideration certain proposals made by the Corporation to the Government, since the report of the Select Committee. He said that the Corporation had offered to make the proposed improvements, which, in the hands of the Metropolitan Board of Works, would cost a sum of 650,000*l.*, for 300,000*l.*, paying the rest of the cost out of their corporate funds.—Mr. COWPER said, after all the inquiries he had made, he had been unable to ascertain where the corporate resources lay that were to furnish the 350,000*l.*, except the corporate coal duties, which had been granted by Parliament only till 1872, and which the Corporation erroneously regarded as theirs by right. This was a question which ought to be decided by a committee of the whole House. To accept the proposal of the Corporation would be a retrograde movement, and no case whatever had been made out for disturbing the arrangements.—The LORD MAYOR said the Corporation objected to raise funds in the city and intrust their distribution to a foreign body. The city had never failed in any undertaking, and would give a guarantee for providing the necessary funds.—Mr. NORRIS also insisted that the city of London had means to fulfil its engagements, and felt naturally jealous of the intrusion of the Metropolitan Board of Works.—Mr. DOULTON said that the principle of allowing the Board of Works jurisdiction in the city of London had been already sanctioned by Parliament and been conceded by the Corporation.—Lord J. MANNERS, as a member of the Select Committee, was bound to say that the city did not establish their case so as to justify the Committee in altering the Bill.—After some remarks by Mr. TITE, Alderman SIDNEY, and Mr. W. WILLIAMS, the amendment was withdrawn. The House then went into committee upon the Bill. A motion that the new street should be called "Mansion House Street" and another that the name should be "Palmerston Street," created some amusement. Both motions were withdrawn, and the Bill passed through committee. The House then went into committee on the London Coal and Wine Duties Continuance Bill, when a discussion took place upon Temple Bar, Middle Row, Holborn Hill, and other obstructions, the prolonged retention of which was universally condemned.—Mr. COWPER stated that when the Thames Embankment, which was the first charge upon the fund, was disposed of, attention would be turned to Holborn Hill and Middle Row, which he admitted were disgraces to the metropolis. The Bill passed through committee with certain verbal amendments, and was reported to the House. The Vaccination (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. The Naval Medical Supplemental Fund Society Winding-up Act (1861) Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed.—The Sale of Mill Sites, &c. (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee. On the consideration of the report of the General Committee of Elections on the Lisburn Election Petition, the ATTORNEY-GENERAL moved that the petition of William John Knox and Moses Bullick, complaining of an undue election and return for the borough of Lisburn, do stand referred to the General Committee of Elections, the document withdrawing such petition not having constituted a withdrawal thereof under the Election Petitions Act, 1848. After some discussion, in which the general opinion appeared to be adverse to re-opening the inquiry, the motion was agreed to. The English Church Services in Wales Bill was recommitted. After a long time spent in discussing and amending the first clause, the CHAIRMAN was ordered to report progress.—Mr. M. GIBSON obtained leave to bring in a Bill to authorise the taking of harbour dues at Port Erin, in the Isle of Man, in order to provide a fund for the improvement of the harbour, and for other purposes.—Mr. HUNT obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the law relating to Election Petitions; and Mr. BUTT obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the law relating to the giving of Security for Costs by plaintiffs residing out of the jurisdiction of the Courts; and a Bill to make better provision for the enforcement throughout England and Ireland of the decrees and orders of the Courts of Chancery, Probate, and Divorce.

FRIDAY.—The Whitsun Holidays.—Lord PALMERSTON moved with regard to the Whitsuntide holidays, that the House at its rising on Tuesday next, should adjourn until the Thursday in the following week. The motion was agreed to. Regimental Quartermasters.—On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Sir F. SMITH brought under the notice of the House the necessity of improving the condition of the regimental quartermasters of the army, and moved for correspondence on the matter.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON could not hold out any hope that the Government would recommend an increase of pay to the quartermasters, but there would be no objection to the production of the papers. On this understanding the motion was withdrawn. China.—Mr. LIDDELL called attention to events in China, with a view of obtaining an expression of opinion from the House upon the course of policy pursued in that country. [Left sitting.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.—The report of the Royal Commissioners on the late Exhibition is now completed, and will be made public in the course of a few days. It is stated that the balance-sheet appended to the report will show a small surplus, and that the guarantors will not be called upon for a single shilling. This satisfactory result is entirely due to the liberality of the contractors for the building, who, besides waiving many of their claims, made good what was a deficit of 15,000*l.* by handing over that amount to the Royal Commissioners, thus enabling them to present their report and wind up their affairs with a balance of some few hundreds in hand.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION BUILDING.—The daily papers state that the Government have at last made up their minds to purchase the "Exhibition Building" for national uses, in connection with the artistic and scientific education of the country. This decision was arrived at in the beginning of the week, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer is prepared to justify the bargain which he has made, and by which the building is virtually acquired for nothing, and the ground on which it stands is purchased of the Commissioners of 1851 at less than one-half of the value it could command in the public market. The Commissioners of 1851 will expend the purchase-money in the improvement of the remainder of the South Kensington estate, at present occupied by the Royal Horticultural Society. The roads and approaches and the ground on either side will remain under the care of the Commissioners, and the design, which was in the mind of the Prince Consort, from the day when the surplus fund of the first Exhibition was invested in the grounds of Gore House, to embellish the public buildings devoted in this neighbourhood to schools of art, museums, and galleries, with gardens, terraces, and arcades for sculpture and external decoration, will be realised under the present transactions between the Government and the Commissioners of 1851.

LOSS OF THE ANGLO-SAXON.—The steamship Anglo-Saxon, from Liverpool and Londonderry, for Quebec, ran ashore in a dense fog, about three miles distant from Cape Race, on the 27th of April, and in a short time became a total wreck. Of 445 passengers and crew who were on board, only 33 cabin passengers, 103 steerage passengers, and 71 of the crew were saved. The remaining 238, with all the mails and cargo, were lost. The following particulars of the catastrophe are given in the official statement of the first officer:—

"St. John's, Newfoundland, April 29.

"The Anglo-Saxon left Liverpool on the 16th inst. at 5 p.m. She experienced strong westerly gales until Saturday, the 25th, at 8 p.m., when she fell in with ice and a thick fog. The engines were immediately slowed. At 10 p.m., the ice being so thick and heavy, the engines were stopped altogether, a light breeze from the south forcing the ship ahead about one knot an hour. At 5 p.m. on the 26th the fog lifted, and the ice having slacked, we set the foretop sails and head sails, moving the engines occasionally at a dead slow. At half-past 10 a.m. the fog cleared away altogether, and we saw clear water to the west-north-west from the masthead. We continued our course towards clear water. At 2 p.m. we got the ship clear of ice, and steered north west by west with full speed, and with all possible sail. A moderate breeze was blowing from the southward at this time—at noon, lat. 46° 57', long. 57° 24' by the chronometer. At 10 p.m. the breeze freshened, and blew strongly from the south-south-east, and a dense fog set in. We took in all sail at 8 a.m. on the 27th. The fog still continued to be dense, and, supposing the ship to be 40 miles off Cape Race we altered her course to the west, half north, and slowed the engines to half speed, which we supposed would have taken us 17 miles south of Cape Race. At ten minutes past 11 a.m. breakers were reported on the starboard beam. Captain Burgess immediately ordered the engines to be reversed at full speed, but before her headway could be stopped she struck flat on the rocks of Clam Cove, about four miles north of Cape Race. A heavy sea rolling in drove her quarter on the rocks, carrying away her rudder, sternpost, and propeller. Finding that there was no possibility of the ship coming off, the order was given to let go both anchors, to hold the ship on the rocks. The carpenter was forthwith sent to examine the fore peak, and found it filling fast with water. He also examined the fore hatch, but found no water there. The chief engineer coming up immediately afterward reported the forward stoke-hole filling fast. He opened the valves and blew the steam out of the boilers. The boats were all immediately lowered successfully, except No. 1 and No. 3. The ship was so close on the rocks these could not be got out. Boat No. 2, with some of the crew and passengers, commanded by Captain Crawford, was sent to find a place to land the passengers. Some of the crew being landed on the rocks by means of the studdingsail-boom, with the help of some of the passengers, got a hawser secured to a rock to keep the vessel from listing out. We then commenced to land the female passengers on the rocks by means of the foreyard arm. The first-class passengers were put into a boat. At about noon the ship's stern swung off from the rocks, and she settled down very fast, listing to port at the same time, and sunk in deep water. The Captain and a great many passengers were on deck at the time, and, with a part of the crew, are all lost."

The following is the official list of the passengers saved :—

Cabin Passengers.—The Hon. John Young, wife, seven children; Miss Hope, Miss Bertram, Miss Euglis, Miss Kerwood, Mr. Caldwell, Mr. Eaton, Mr. Kirkwood, Mr. Christien, Mr. Towers, Mr. Kirkness, Mr Fraser, Mr. Martin, Mr. Tealy, Mr. Whites, Captain Reed, Captain Hyles, Captain Cassidy, Lieutenant Simpson, Mrs. Stoddard, Mrs. Caristien, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. James, and Mrs Jackson and child. Steerage Passengers.—Mr. Parker, Mr. Parsons, Mr. St. Marie, Mr. Collogan, Mr. Dallie, Mr. Wilpolm, Mr. George Wood, Mr. Stanley, Mr. Naglies, Mr. Lahn, Mr. Barbour, Mr. Coulter, Mr. Finley, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Rooke, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Turre, Mr. Gones, Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Churchchard, Mr. Wickett, Mr. Burrow, Mr. Nance, Mr. Black, Mr. Jones and wife, Mr. Cooth, Mr. Fleck, Mr. Furgusson, Mr. Callaghan, Mr. Pantrie, Mr. Barclay, Mr. Jamieson, Mr. Small, Mr. Bishop, Mr. Gormley, Mr. Corder, Mr. M'Killary, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Dinsmore, Mr. Reid, Mr. Honnell, Mr. M'Kay, Mr. Mustagh, Mr Garretty, Mr. Christienson, Mr. Davies, Mr. Tapper, Mr. M'Nally, Mr. Atkinson, Mr. Fideles, Mr. Jones, Mr. Wood, Mr. Danco, Mr Hall, Mr. Harrison, Mr. Walter, Mr. Bruce, Mr. Loubrier, Mr. Jones, Elizabeth Waunby, Mary Ann Thomas, Mary Ann Adams, Mina Christian, Jesse E. MILITIA REVIEW IN HYDE PARK.—Four metropolitan militia regiments now out for training, comprising the Royal London, Colonel S. Wilson; the King's Own, Colonel W. L. Grant; the 1st (East) Middlesex, Colonel Alcock; and the 3d (Royal Westminster) Middlesex, Colonel Glossop, were reviewed on Tuesday, in Hyde Park, by the Commander-in-Chief, in the presence of the Prince of Wales, and numerous officers of high rank. The men were put through various movements, which they performed in such a way as to call forth the approbation of his Royal Highness. Though the weather was unfavourable, there was a large concourse of spectators.

DIOCESS OF LONDON.—A meeting of property-owners and employers of labour in the metropolis, and other noblemen and gentlemen, was held at London House on the 29th ult., by invitation of the Bishop of London, to consider the best means of providing for the spiritual wants of the poorer districts of the diocess. Among those present were the Earl of Shrewsbury, Lord Egerton of Tatton, Lord Radstock, Viscount Sandon, Sir George Baker, Sir Fowell Buxton, Mr. Beresford Hope, the Deans of St. Paul's and Westminster, the Archdeacons of London and Middlesex, Sir W. C. James, Mr. W. Cotton, Mr. J. H. Baxendale, Mr. W. H. Smith, Mr. John Murray, Mr. C. E. Mudie, Mr. C. J. Freake, Mr. George Moore, Mr. Lucas, Mr. Cubitt, Mr. F. Charrington, Mr. R. T. Pritchett, Mr. Lancaster, Mr. A. Head, Mr. Claude Ash, the chairman of the Metropolitan Railway, the Master of the Stationers' Company, Mr. Arthur Powell, Mr. A. Hall Hall, the Rev. C. Girdlestone, Mr. C. H. Blake, Mr. Rydon, Mr. Jay, Mr. Merceron, Mr. Rokeby Price, Mr. W. Rivington, the Master of the Grocers' Company, the Master of the Drapers' Company, &c. The Bishop of London, in addressing the meeting, called their earnest attention to the pressing spiritual needs of the diocess—the want of additional churches and clergymen, the necessity for increased endowments, and the building of parsonage-houses in the poorer districts. He urged that some great effort should be immediately made to cope with what, in spite of all that has been done, is a growing evil. He pointed out an organisation already existing in the Diocesan Church Building Society, in connection with which such an effort could most effectually be made. This Society, by its varied operations of aiding in the erection of churches and mission chapels, as well as by employing missionary curates, and giving assistance towards parsonages and endowments, had already proved itself of the greatest value, and was well worthy of far more extended support. The Bishop requested the meeting to consider what steps could best be taken to effect the purpose which he had in view. In conclusion he called upon the hon. secretary of the Society to read an appeal which, with the approval of the meeting, it was proposed to circulate. The meeting was afterwards addressed by the Rev. C. Girdlestone, Mr. Beresford Hope, Lord Egerton, Archdeacon Sinclair, the Earl of Shrewsbury, Mr. W. Cotton, Mr. John Murray, Viscount Sandon, Mr. W. H. Smith, Mr. J. Charrington, Mr. Robert Few, Sir Walter James, and others, and resolutions were passed pledging the meeting to co-operate with the Bishop, through a committee of laymen, in raising a fund of 1,000,000*l.* within 10 years, to carry out the objects of the meeting.

THE TRADES' UNIONS AND THE AMERICAN MINISTER.—The address adopted by the meeting of the trades' unions held some time ago, congratulating the American President on his proclamation for the abolition of slavery, was presented to Mr. Adams, the American minister, a few days since by a deputation of the trades' delegates, who were introduced by Mr. Bright. The address having been presented, and several of the deputation having addressed his excellency, Mr. Adams said:—

"Gentlemen, I accept with pleasure the duty you have imposed upon me on receiving your address to the chief of my government. Representing as I do my country in England, you must be aware that I stand outside all local questions, therefore it is not my province to express dissatisfaction or satisfaction with those persons or parties in England who may express their opinions upon America. If there are some persons in this country who from prejudice or ignorance put a harsh construction on the conduct of the American Government, it is not my place to find fault, or my right to criticise. It is however my duty to accept from the representatives of any body of Englishmen their favourable sentiments towards the Government I represent, and to reciprocate the frank, manly, and independent spirit in which they have been tendered. I understand, gentlemen, you attend here as representing large bodies of working men who advocate and uphold the rights of labour, and it is therefore but natural you should look with dislike upon any parties, in whatever country they may exist, who infringe on those rights. You perceive that in the struggle now going on in America an attempt is being made to establish a government on the destruction of the rights of labour—a government of physical power to take away the rights of labour. It is a question above all local right—it is a general principle; and therefore, though taking place in a foreign country, you have a right to express your opinion thereon. Gentlemen, I accept the duty you impose upon me with great pleasure, the more so as you have taken advantage of the occasion to speak on the question of war. I agree generally with your views on the subject. But with two nations of the same race, of the same high spirit, both feeling a natural pride in their superiority on the ocean, I think it almost impossible, under existing circumstances, to prevent some things springing up that might occasion a collision; I therefore concur with you, gentlemen, as to the necessity for great forbearance being exhibited by both countries and Governments in construing the actions of each other. I trust that in spite of all that has occurred there is in the government of each country a sufficient sense of responsibility which will induce them to maintain friendly relations with each other. There must naturally be a feeling of pride—of fear—lest one nation should appear to refrain from properly resenting what it might deem to be an offence from the other; and in this feeling lies the great danger. I feel confident, however, that if the two peoples and the two governments would speak together in the same sense, in the same frank and unreserved tones, as you have spoken to me this evening, all fear of any collision would be at an end. I can assure you that notwithstanding the speeches of some of my countrymen, notwithstanding the writings in some of the American journals, there is no nation under the sun for which America entertains a greater regard than England; and if the real sentiments of the people of each country can be clearly established to each other, I shall have no fear of their coming into collision. I believe, gentlemen, you have taken the right course to produce this desirable understanding, and I undertake with great pleasure the duty of transmitting your address to President Lincoln."

THE VIADUCT OVER LUDGATE HILL.—At a special meeting of the Common Council on Thursday, it was unanimously resolved to continue the opposition to the viaduct over Ludgate Hill, notwithstanding the modifications which the railway company have offered to make in their plans. A petition against the structure has been signed by more than 1000 leading city firms, the following being among the names already affixed to it:—Baring Brothers & Co.; Prescott, Grote, & Co.; Frederick Huth & Co.; N. M. Rothschild & Sons; Glyn, Mills, & Co.; Hankey & Co.; Finlay, Hodgson, & Co.; Thomson Hankey & Co.; Smith, Payne, & Co.; Heywood, Kennards, & Co.; Barclay, Bevan, & Co.; Copestake, Moore, & Co.; Dimsdale & Co.; Western Wood; Jones Loyd & Co.; Robarts, Lubbock, & Co.; Hanbury & Lloyds; George Moffatt; Spooner, Attwood & Co.; J. & R. Morley; Leaf, Sons, & Co.; Masterman & Co.; Gregson & Co., &c. The clergy within the civic boundaries have also got up a petition to be presented to the House of Lords by the Bishop of London. It sets forth that the proposed viaduct will be a perpetual disgrace and disfigurement by obstructing the view of St. Paul's, entirely destroying the architectural character of the approach to the west front of the Cathedral, and so defacing the most picturesque street in the whole city. On Tuesday a deputation from the inhabitants of Ludgate Hill and vicinity waited upon the Court of Sewers and asked permission to erect a model bridge across Ludgate Hill, similar to the one which is to be erected by the company, that the public might see the inconvenience which would arise. The Court, however, declined to give their sanction.

WESTMINSTER IMPROVEMENTS.—Mr. Gilbert Scott, in giving evidence before the Thames Embankment Commission early in the present year, produced a plan showing the improvements he recommends in the immediate neighbourhood of Westminster Abbey and the Houses of Parliament. The Abbey is so filled with monuments that the Dean and Chapter have been obliged to refuse permission for the erection of memorials to very eminent men, and he suggests the erection of a large cloister, a sort of Campo Santo, round College Gardens, with a communication from the cloisters of the abbey, so that the funeral services could take place as at present in the abbey, and afterwards the procession could pass to this new cloister, in which also the monuments would be erected to the persons buried there. He would stop the cloister at the Jewel Tower, so as to preserve that as an interesting remnant of antiquity, and not hide the chapter-house. He would clear away the houses in Poet's Corner and Old Palace Yard and from Abingdon Street to the ancient boundary of the precincts of the Abbey, leaving a much wider approach and throwing the Abbey open to view. The buildings also on the south side of the Houses of Parliament cannot be allowed to remain, and Mr. Scott proposes to clear the ground as far as the new suspension bridge; the consideration of cost would probably prevent more than a partial removal of the wharves, but as a matter of taste, it would be highly desirable to have no buildings whatever between the Houses of Parliament and the new bridge. The Lord Chamberlain had it brought to the notice of the commission that the buildings on the south side of the Houses of Parliament cause great danger of fire, and that there is a stable loft only 16 yards distant, the door and window of which completely command the throne in the Queen's robing room, on which Her Majesty sits on State occasions; any maniac or evil-minded person secreted there might do incalculable mischief. The commissioners, in their report, recommend that the property south of the Houses be purchased, and the ground embanked as far as to the line of Wood Street, and that, so far as extends to the line of Great College Street, it be kept clear of buildings, and laid out and planted as ornamental grounds; but they think that beyond this latter point six or eight first-class residences might be erected, looking on to the proposed ornamental ground, being built at right angles to the river, like Richmond Terrace. They recommend that the houses in Poet's Corner, Old Palace Yard, and Abingdon Street, and "the mews" in the rear be taken down, and the residences between the Chapter House and the garden to the south removed, and that the site so cleared be laid open, by which a clear space from Henry VII.'s Chapel to Great College Street would be obtained, about 200 feet wide in its narrowest part. The space at present on State occasions is quite insufficient. The ultimate cost of these improvements would be 214,000*l.*, and it falls properly to the Imperial treasury. The ultimate cost of widening Millbank Street and the road beyond, so that there may be standing room for 300 carriages, would be 157,900*l.*; and the ultimate cost of widening King Street by setting back the houses on its west side, giving a very beautiful view of the Abbey, would be 78,000*l.* These two charges may be fairly considered metropolitan charges. The ultimate cost is here given; the first outlay would be much larger. The plan includes a short road through the inclosure on the north side of St. Margaret's Church, so that the traffic from Victoria Street to the Houses of Parliament should not be brought into contact with Westminster Bridge traffic. To throw King Street into Parliament Street would make a street so wide as to be dangerous to foot passengers; it would require a platform of pavement in the middle; which, however, says Mr. Scott, might have public statues upon it. Lord Redesdale suggested another improvement—namely, either widening and continuing College Street or making a new street, so as to give a passage round the abbey for anything coming up Millbank, because it might be expedient to shut up the street in front of the Houses of Parliament either in times of great public excitement, or for the few hours during which the Queen occupies the whole street in coming down to the Houses of Parliament; and Sir R. Mayne added that a new street from Millbank to Victoria Street would greatly relieve Westminster Bridge, by diverting part of the Lambeth traffic from Westminster Bridge to the new bridge.

LANCASHIRE RELIEF FUND.—At a meeting of the Mansion House Committee on Friday it was resolved whenever any emigration committee is prepared to send out a given number of emigrants, to advance a capitation grant of 2*l.* a head for the purposes of outfit. The total sum received up to the previous evening was 491,382*l.*, of which 398,746*l.* had been remitted to the affected districts, exclusive of a grant of 1000*l.* for emigration.

THE PROPOSED MARKET IN LEICESTER SQUARE.—The Parliamentary Committee, after hearing Mr. Dangerfield for the authorities at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields and others, have decided unanimously that the preamble of this Bill was not proved.

THE BLOOMSBURY MURDER.—The inquest on the body of the man who was found drowned in the river and supposed to answer the description of the murderer of Emma Jackson, was resumed on Saturday. An adjournment had taken place in order that an attempt might be made to combat the results of decomposition, and by some scientific process to restore the countenance to its natural hue; but on the re-assembling of the jury nothing had been elicited to throw any light on the affair, and the jury returned a verdict of "Found drowned." The witnesses examined stated that the body was not that of the man who was in company with the murdered woman, and no person came forward to identify it.

ATTEMPTED MURDER AND SUICIDE.—On Thursday some excitement was caused at Woolwich by the suicide of Mr. George R. Roberts, a master baker, for many years residing in that town, the act having been committed under circumstances of an extraordinary nature. It appears that a young woman named Francis Eliza Paxton, for some months servant at the residence of Mr. Roberts, surrendered herself to the police, on her own confession of having attempted to poison her mistress on the previous Sunday, by putting oil of vitriol into her beer, stating that she had been instigated to commit the act by her master, between whom and herself an improper intimacy had existed. The young woman was removed to the police-station, and subsequently Inspector Linvell had an interview with Mr. Roberts, informed him of the serious charge made against him, and requested that he would attend the Police Court at 3 o'clock in order to be present at the examination of his accuser. To this request Mr. Roberts readily assented, but about an hour afterwards he was found suspended to the beam in the roof of his stable, having committed suicide in a determined manner. The female prisoner has been remanded, and the magistrate has directed that the beer, which has been preserved, should be subjected to analysis.

The Public Health. — The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week ended Saturday, May 2, were 1459. The average number in the corresponding weeks of the 10 years 1853-62, corrected for increase of population, was 1244. The present return is therefore 215 above the average, including 76 deaths from small pox, 54 from measles, and 73 from scarlet fever. During the week the births of 1078 boys and 1077 girls, in all 2155 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1853-62 the average number was 1911.

Aldershot.—The recent murder of Mr. Henry Holton, of Bagshot, in the canal at Aldershot, appears to be one of those cases in which the ends of justice are likely to be defeated. Bills offering 100*l.* for the conviction of the murderer or murderers have now been issued more than two months, but, though the police have been unremitting in their exertions, not the slightest clue to the guilty party has been discovered. The deed was without doubt committed under cover of the night, and, as the body had been some days in the water when discovered, the chance of unravelling the mystery was considerably diminished, and it is now feared that nothing further will be elucidated.

Bedford.—A shocking outrage was committed on Sunday night in this town. A gentleman named Budd from Buckingham was proceeding towards his home, with his wife, about 11 P.M., when he was set upon by a mixed mob of labourers and militiamen, at present out for drill, and so seriously beaten by two of the labourers that he died on the following morning. The shock of the outrage was so great to an aged lady, Mrs. Higgins, a friend of the deceased, that she died under the excitement, and his wife, who does not appear to have been assaulted, is in such a precarious condition that doubts are entertained of her recovery. Seven men who were present when the assault took place were apprehended and charged before the magistrates, two with causing the death of Mr. Budd, the others with being accessories before the fact. The two principal culprits, Craddock and Jordan, were remanded, bail being refused, and the inquest has been adjourned for a week.

Blackburn.—Mr. Robert Rawlinson, civil engineer, acting inspector under the Local Government Act, and formerly Sanitary Engineering Commissioner in the Crimea, is now in the cotton districts with very extensive powers from the Government, for the purpose of organising a scheme of out-door labour, at fair wages, for the unemployed workpeople in Lancashire. He visited this town on Monday, and is engaged in inspecting the wants, and judging of the capacities for improvement of all the towns in the district. From his explanations to the local authorities it appears that Government is willing to advance money for a term of years, and at a low rate of interest, to municipal bodies, boards of health, &c., to carry out sanitary improvements and other works for the convenience and health of the towns.

Brighton.—A serious accident occurred on Wednesday evening at the Pavilion. The Christy Minstrels were announced to give a concert in the Music Room, and a very numerous audience had assembled. Just before the commencement of the performance an escape of gas took place. Search was made to discover where the escape was, and a light being applied several explosions took place. One side of the room was completely wrecked. Frightful confusion ensued, but as the means of egress were good, the audience escaped without any serious accident. The building, however, caught fire, and the flames were with some difficulty extinguished.

Clifton.—The works of the Suspension Bridge are so far advanced that the two piers on the Somersetshire and Gloucestershire sides of the Avon are expected to be connected by wire ropes in about a fortnight. These ropes will form the temporary platform on which the men will work to erect the permanent structure. They have been manufactured by Messrs. Glass, Elliot, and Co., of Cardiff, and are nine in number, measuring 1150 feet in length and weighing 2 tons each.

Herne Bay.—On Saturday week a brutal murder was perpetrated at a little village called Maypole, situate in the parish of Herne. The murdered man, named Richard Steed, was a carrier between Herne Bay and Canterbury, and a dealer in stock. Early in the evening he was drinking at a public-house in Herne with a number of navvies and a man named Alfred Algar, who has recently been discharged from St. Augustine's Gaol, where he had been confined for stealing timber. The murdered man (who was of a very quarrelsome disposition while under the influence of drink) quarrelled with some of the parties in the public house, and left for the purpose of going home. He was accompanied by Algar. He was not seen afterwards until between seven and eight o'clock, when he was found, almost in a lifeless state, in a middle road leading from Herne to Maypole, where he resided. He was frightfully disfigured, his face being completely battered in, and his head forced into the ground as if by a severe kick. Though in this state life was not quite extinct, as he was still breathing. He was removed to his home as quickly as possible and medical assistance sent for, but it was of no avail, as he immediately expired. The county constabulary immediately apprehended Alfred Algar, who was placed at the bar of the County Police Court at Canterbury on Monday charged with the murder. The prisoner, who is 32 years of age, is a native of North Kent. He has served 12 years in the army—first in the 92d and afterwards in the 52d Regiment, and has been discharged without a character. He is married and has one child, and for about four months has resided at Maypole, as a labourer on the railway works in that neighbourhood, but bears a very indifferent character. At the termination of the examination of the witnesses, the Chairman said it was their duty to commit him for trial. The prisoner said he hoped that something would be found out to clear him of the charge of murder, or at all events to lighten his crime. He had not seen the deceased since they parted after leaving Herne Street.

Holyhead.—An investigation was made on Friday and Saturday, under the authority of the Board of Trade, into the circumstances under which the Telegraph steamer struck against a rock near this harbour on the 17th ult. It will be recollected that the steamer was crossing from Dublin with a heavy cargo of goods and cattle, and more than 200 passengers, when she struck upon an islet during a very thick fog, and that the passengers were landed there, and had to find their way by boats to the adjacent mainland, three miles from the town. It was fully proved by the inquiry that the South Stack light was quite invisible to the steamer, and that the great fog-bell on the Stack, as well as the signal gun on the mountain, was inaudible, though both were going at the time. It was stated in evidence by Captain Priest, R.N., that the great fog-bell is very ill set. After a great many witnesses had been examined the Court fully exculpated Captain Warren, and said that the fortitude he had shown in keeping his post after being severely injured at the moment of the collision, and the successful landing of so many people in such a situation, were circumstances that reflected great credit upon him.

Liverpool.—A shocking murder was committed in this town on Friday. The wife of a sea captain let a portion of her house out as lodgings, and a sailor named Thomas had been lodging with her for some time. On Friday afternoon a young woman called on the landlady, and while they were sitting conversing together, the sailor, who was in the kitchen below, asked his landlady to come down. She did so, and a few minutes afterwards the sailor rushed upstairs, struck the young woman in the parlour a severe blow on the head, and also attacked another woman who entered the house attracted by her cries. Soon after, when the people had time to seek after the landlady, she was found lying in the kitchen bleeding from terrible wounds, of which she soon afterwards died. The other two women were so much injured that it was necessary to take them to the hospital. It is supposed that the sailor was labouring under delirium tremens.—Another murder was committed in the town on Tuesday. A Chilian sailor stabbed a man named Harrison in the street, inflicting injuries from which he shortly afterwards died. The sailor was arrested.

Manchester.—At the weekly meeting of the Executive Committee on Monday it was reported that the receipts of the past week amounted to 3280*l.* 8*s.* 2*d.*, and that the balance in the bank was 389,506*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* Mr. Commissioner Farnall reported that there was a further decrease last week in the number of persons receiving parochial relief in 27 Unions, as compared with the previous week, of 5073. The total decrease since the 6th of December last is 84,348.

Oxford.—The Rev. Dr. Pusey and his associates in the prosecution of Professor Jowett, of Oxford, for heretical teaching, have abandoned their appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench. They state that they have been advised by the Queen's Advocate and Mr. Coleridge that the Court of Queen's Bench were not likely to grant a mandamus to compel the Vice Chancellor's assessor to take up the cause. There was another Court, within the bounds of the University itself, to which they might have appealed; but the time for appeal to that tribunal is now gone by. They therefore abandon the prosecution altogether.

Sheffield.—On Saturday two men named Edwin Hides and Henry Light, engravers and lithographers, were brought before the magistrates for final examination on a charge of forging and uttering large numbers of Federal Treasury notes (greenbacks) of 5, 10, and 20 dollars. A mass of evidence was adduced to prove their complicity in the forgery, which appeared to have been suggested to them by an American called Clifford Webster, who absconded as soon as he had got a supply of notes without paying them the money for which they had bargained. The magistrates committed the prisoners for trial at the assizes, and refused to accept bail. The case was brought under the Consolidated Act, which makes the offence a felony, punishable with 14 years' penal servitude.

Ireland.

The Alleged Violation and Poisoning near Ballymena.—The case of Miss Amelia Cary, which excited a good deal of interest, and was for two or three months a general topic of conversation, has been abandoned by order of the Crown, and Dr. Courtenay has been released from his recognisances.

Scotland.

The Yelverton Case.—It is considered probable that Mrs. Theresa Yelverton's appeal from the Scottish court, affirming the validity of her marriage, will not be argued before the House of Lords this session. The pursuer is ready with her case, but the defender, Major Yelverton, has applied for and obtained an extension of time to prepare his case; and the probability is that, as the session is now half over, and as a good many appeals are before the House, the pursuer is destined to remain for another year in her present equivocal position.

University of Glasgow.—Lord Palmerston, the Lord Rector of Glasgow University, has given a donation of 100 guineas, to be divided into three prizes, to be competed for by the students enrolled during his lordship's Rectorate—one prize of 35*l.* in each year.

Railways.

Collision on the London and South-Western.—On Tuesday morning a serious accident occurred between the Wilton and the Dinton stations. It appears that passengers are taken every Tuesday morning by the up luggage train from Yeovil to enable them to reach Salisbury market earlier than by the ordinary train. This train, consisting of an engine, four passenger carriages, and a number of luggage waggons, arrived at the Dinton station shortly before 9 o'clock, and was allowed to go on by the stationmaster. A mixed train also left Salisbury some time after 8 on Tuesday morning, and this was despatched by the stationmaster of the Wilton station. There is a double line of rails between Salisbury and Wilton, but from Wilton to Dinton it is single, the additional line not being yet completed. The consequence was that the two trains came violently into collision near Hurdcott. The breaks were put on, and everything done to prevent the accident, but the rails were very slippery, and the breaks would not act. The engines ran into each other, and the 40 passengers in the up train received a severe shock, all being more or less injured. Mr. Thomas Wright, of Shaftesbury, received very serious wounds on the arm and hands, and was generally bruised. Several farmers from Shaftesbury, Tisbury, and Barford were also injured about the arms and legs, and one sustained a severe blow in the mouth. The passengers were all thrown one upon another, and the carriages were greatly damaged. A special train was sent down from Salisbury, and the injured passengers on their arrival in that city were immediately sent to the Infirmary, where they received every attention. The down luggage engine was thrown off the line by the collision, but a number of labourers were soon at the scene of the accident, and after some difficulty the line was cleared.

The Blackfriars Railway Bridge.—The foundation stone of the new railway bridge across the Thames, in connection with the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, was laid on Saturday week by Lord Sondes, in the presence of a numerons company, including Lord Harris, the vice chairman, Mr. Cubitt, the engineer, Sir Morton Peto, &c. The bridge crosses the Thames a few yards only from the intended site of the new Blackfriars Bridge, and is to consist of five arches. The block of stone was about five tons weight. After the ceremony a collation took place, at which all prosperity was wished and anticipated for the new railway. It is expected that the bridge will be opened for traffic in May next year.

Law.

Court of Arches.—The Sudbury Union.—A case of some interest to chaplains of unions was decided by Dr. Lushington on Monday. The Rev. Mr. Molyneux, incumbent of the parish of Sudbury, in Suffolk, where the union is situated, objected to the Rev. Mr. Bagshaw officiating there as chaplain without his consent, as holding the spiritual cure of the parish. Dr. Lushington decided that, supposing Mr. Bagshaw to have been legally appointed by the poor-law guardians, he had an undoubted right to officiate without asking leave of the incumbent. Notice of appeal was given.

Court of Queen's Bench.—Dickson v. Combermere.—The Court on Friday gave judgment on the question whether Colonel Dickson, who is prosecuting Lord Combermere, Lord Wilton, and General Peel for a conspiracy to stop his rise in the army, should be allowed to put certain questions to General Peel. The General objected that he ought not to be called upon to answer questions as to what he did as Secretary for War. The decision of the Court was that Colonel Dickson should be allowed to put the questions, leaving it to General Peel whether he would answer them or not.

Miscellaneous.

Eclipse of the Sun.—The sun will be partially eclipsed to-morrow afternoon, the 17th inst. As seen near the metropolis, the moon will enter upon his disc at 5h. 24m. 42s. p.m., Greenwich time, at a point 88° from the vertex towards the west, or nearly at the right hand extremity of the sun's horizontal diameter. The eclipse will be at its maximum at 6h. 28m. 30s. p.m., when very nearly one-third of the solar diameter will be covered by the moon, and will end at 7h. 12m. 0s. p.m., about half an hour before sunset, the last contact occurring a little to the left of the apparent upper point of the disc.

The Atlantic and Pacific Railway.—The advices from Nicaragua by the West India mail give some particulars of the progress of the exploration just commenced by Captain Bedford Pim, R.N., with the view to establish a railway and steam transit from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Captain Pim arrived at Greytown from England on the 9th of April, and started on the 11th for Bluefields, accompanied by two civil engineers whom he had brought with him, where he obtained a large force of Indians and Creoles to cut a path through the woods. Returning with these men to Gorgon Bay, which he contemplates as the starting point of the line, he built a house as a general rendezvous, and stored it with provisions under charge of a Rama chief. From Gorgon Bay he took his party about eight miles south to the Rama River, with the idea that its course might pass somewhere near his proposed route, and thus enable him to start two parties from about the centre of his line, and so to cut east and west at the same time. Captain Pim was right in this conjecture. He explored and made a survey of the river, and landed on the left bank about 20 miles from the sea, whence he started off two parties—one cutting through the forest easterly towards the Atlantic: the other westerly towards the Lake of Nicaragua. Each party consisted of 14 men, headed by a civil engineer. They commenced work on the 16th, and when Captain Pim left on the morning of that day each party had cut about a mile through the bush, with every prospect of running a line of levels right across by the end of the month. The starting station, nearly midway, was only 127 feet above the level of the sea, and not a hill of any sort could be seen. It was considered, therefore, that there is every chance that the route will afford easy gradients from end to end. Each party was supplied with needful stores and provisions, and the weather was favourable. The political condition of the Republic, however, was as threatening and uncertain as possible.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

Monday, May 11.

Although we have a larger supply of Beasts, the demand being good a fair clearance is effected, and late quotations are fully maintained. The supply of Sheep is larger, and trade is dull. Big fat Sheep are difficult of sale; but sizeable qualities are not lower. Trade is heavy also for Lambs and Calves at about late rates. From Germany and Holland there are 485 Beasts, 2680 Sheep, and 128 Calves; from Spain, 61 Beasts; from Scotland, 450; from Ireland, 42; and 2950 from Norfolk and Suffolk.

Thursday, May 14.

The supply of Beasts is smaller than for many Thursdays past. The average quality is also inferior, consequently choice qualities are in demand at rather higher rates. The number of Sheep is not quite so large as on Thursday last, yet the supply is good. Trade is dull at about Monday's quotations. There is more inquiry for choice Lambs, and small Calves are rather dearer. Our foreign supply consists of 188 Beasts, 810 Sheep, and 310 Calves; Milch Cows, 105.

BRITISH WOOLS.—London, May 15.

Our market continues in a healthy state, the supply being unequal to the demand for all descriptions of long wool. Flannel and Blanket wool are the only exceptions, and they are in very limited supply, and their influence on our present trade unimportant.

Colonial Wool Sales.—These sales progress with more spirit than they opened, and the Port Philip qualities that were the most depressed are recovering from their depression somewhat. Large quantities are being taken for exports, and the sales are expected to improve as they go on.

HOPS.—Borough Market, Friday, May 15.

Messrs. Pattenden & Smith report a good steady trade doing in Hops, fine samples being very scarce, and higher prices demanded.

MARK LANE.—Monday, May 11.

The supply of English Wheat to this morning's market was moderate, and taken pretty freely on the terms of this day se'nnight. The market was tolerably attended, and foreign Wheat met an improved inquiry at late rates. For Barley, Beans, and Peas there was a good demand at the extreme rates of this day se'nnight. The Oat trade was firm, and previous prices were well supported. Flour was neglected.

Friday, May 15.

The weather continued very fine with strong N.W. winds until the 11th, when the latter changed to S.W., and we have since had some heavy showers of rain, but not sufficient to be of much benefit to the Grass or Spring Corn. The Wheat trade during the past week has been inactive, and a decline of 1s. per qr. is pretty generally reported from the country. Former prices for Spring Corn were well supported, Oats and Beans being quoted dearer in many markets, but the change of weather has made the trade dull here. The sale of Flour has been very heavy, with a downward tendency of prices. Since Friday last 18 vessels have been reported off the coast. The floating trade has been quiet during the last week; there is no disposition to buy Wheat; in Maize a moderate business has been done at last prices: Linseed and Rye are in good demand at an advance of about 1s. per qr. In Paris (May 13), rather higher prices were asked for Flour, which limits business, but at last week's rates there was a good inquiry. Wheat remained unaltered. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 16,900 cwts. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 40s. per 280 lbs. The arrivals of foreign Oats and Barley this week have been moderate, of all other grain very small. The market was not well attended, and on the business transacted in Wheat, which was limited for both English and foreign, Monday's prices were maintained. Barley, Beans, and Peas are unaltered in value. The Oat trade is quiet, and Monday's prices are barely supported.

LIVERPOOL, May 12.—We had a very fair attendance of town and country millers and dealers at to-day's market, but they acted with great caution, and only a small retail business was done in either Wheat or Flour at about Friday's prices, or a shade under. Indian Corn was neglected, and the slight improvement made in the interval since Friday was lost. Oats and Oatmeal maintain the late advance with great firmness. Beans, Peas, and Barley remain as last quoted. The market closes inactive.

FRIDAY, May 15.—The market quiet; Wheat moderate demand at late rates. Flour dull; no change in prices. Indian Corn sells slowly at 29s. 9d. Egyptian Beans steady. Oats and Oatmeal unchanged.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH called attention to the Schleswig Holstein question, and expressed his hope that her Majesty's Government, in conjunction with France, would insist upon the designs of Germany being abandoned. Earl RUSSELL said that it appeared to him that Germany was wrong in her demands, and Denmark was wrong in not redeeming the engagements into which she had entered. He had proposed that Schleswig and Holstein should be divided and have a separate budget, and regretted that Denmark had not adopted his recommendation. The Earl of DERBY said that Denmark had made grave concessions to the German Diet for the sake of peace; while Germany had exerted her influence over Holstein to prevent the conclusion of any arrangement. He looked upon the independence of Denmark as a matter of vital interest to this country, and he hesitated not to declare that there was no alternative which he was not prepared to accept in supporting that Power, which would be by no means a contemptible ally of England in the event of a European war against the aggressions of the German Powers. The Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill, the Augmentation of Benefices Bill, and the Elections during Recess Bill, were read a third time and passed. On Monday the Marquis of CLANRICARDE moved for copies of any reports from our consular or diplomatic agents in North America of the decisions of proceedings of the prize courts of the Federal States. He complained of the continued seizures of British vessels by the Federal cruisers, and contended that it was the duty of her Majesty's Government to take more energetic and decisive measures to prevent them. Earl RUSSELL in reply defended the conduct of Mr. SEWARD, and said that the Federal Government had uniformly expressed their desire to respect the law of nations. Every case of seizure had been referred to the law officers of the Crown, who had reported that there was no rational ground for objection to the decisions of the Federal prize courts. The Earl of DERBY concurred in the opinion that every allowance should be made for the American Government, and that their prize courts should not hastily be accused of acting contrary to international law. After a few words from Lord CRANWORTH, the motion was withdrawn. The Marriages (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee. On Tuesday Lord EBURY moved the second reading of the Acts of Uniformity Amendment Bill, the object of which was to repeal the clause imposing on the clergy of the Church of England the necessity of subscribing their assent to the 39 Articles and everything contained in the Book of Common Prayer. The Archbishop of CANTERBURY moved that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. The Bill was supported by the Bishop of LONDON, the Bishop of ST. DAVID's, the Bishop of LLANDAFF, and Earl GREY, and opposed by Lord LYTTELTON, the Bishop of OXFORD, and the Bishop of LICHFIELD. On a division the amendment was carried by a majority of 40, the numbers being 90 to 50. The Bill was therefore lost. The Redemption of Rents (Ireland) Bill passed through committee pro formâ. The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill and the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill were read a second time. On Thursday the Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill and the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill passed through Committee. Their Lordships then adjourned to Monday, the 1st of June.

In the Commons on Friday Mr. LIDDELL called attention to events in China, and moved for papers relating to them, with the view of obtaining an expression of opinion by the House upon the course of policy pursued by her Majesty's Government in that country. Mr. BAILLIE supported the motion. No Minister having risen to continue the debate, the SPEAKER put the question, which was negatived in a very thin House without a division. Mr. COBDEN, Mr. H. D. SEYMOUR, Lord NAAS, and other members, complained of the conduct of the Government, and Mr. LAYARD explained that he was reserving his speech in order to answer other questions of which notice had been given. The House then went into Committee of Supply, when the CHAIRMAN was ordered to report progress. The London Coal and Wine Duties Bill and the Sale of Mill Sites, &c., Bill were read a third time and passed. On Monday, on the motion for the third reading of the Prison Ministers' Bill, Mr. BLACK moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a third time that day six months. On a division, the amendment was negatived by 196 to 167. The Bill was then read a third time and passed. The House then went into Committee of Supply, when Mr. PEEL moved a vote on account of the packet service, including the amount due to Mr. CHURCHWARD for the conveyance of the mails from Dover to Calais and Ostend up to the 20th June next, the resolution being so worded as to put an end at that date to the contract entered into by Lord DERBY's Government with Mr. CHURCHWARD in 1859. Sir S. NORTHCOTE moved, as an amendment, that all the words in the resolution relating to Mr. CHURCHWARD's contract be struck out. After a long discussion the amendment was negatived on a division by 176 to 168. The resolution was then agreed to. The Thames Embankment (North side) Bill and the Vaccination (Ireland) Bill were read a third time. On Tuesday Mr. DILLWYN moved for a Select Committee to inquire how far the present distribution of endowments for religious purposes in Ireland may be so amended as to conduce to the welfare of all classes of HER MAJESTY's Irish subjects. Mr. H. SEYMOUR moved, as an amendment, that an address be presented to HER MAJESTY to appoint a Royal Commission to inquire into the territorial arrangements of existing benefices, the circumstances of the different parishes, and other matters, with a view of readjusting the incomes to the population and to the amount of ministerial work. Mr. NEWDEGATE seconded the amendment. Mr. WHITESIDE opposed both the motion and the amendment. The debate was ultimately adjourned to the 28th inst. Sir R. PEEL obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the procedure in the Civil Bill Courts in Ireland; the LORD-ADVOCATE obtained leave to bring in a Bill to make provision in regard to Vaccination in Scotland; and LORD PALMERSTON obtained leave to bring in a Bill to carry into effect an additional article to the treaty of the 7th April, 1862, between HER MAJESTY and the United States, for the suppression of the Slave Trade. The House then adjourned to the 28th inst.

From the United States we have the important news that the advance of the Federal army under General HOOKER has been checked by a counter movement on the part of General LEE. On the 2d inst., the right wing of the Federal army was attacked by General STONEWALL JACKSON, who had made a flank movement from Fredericksburg for the purpose, and was only saved from destruction by the advance of General HOOKER's own division. On the following day the battle was renewed, and after a desperate struggle of seven hours and a half, the Federals again retired. On the 4th the Confederate General LONGSTREET attacked General SEDGWICK's column which had taken possession of the heights of Fredericksburg, and compelled it to recross the Rappahannock. On the 5th General HOOKER followed the example of General SEDGWICK, and recrossed the Rappahannock with his whole force. The losses on both sides have been enormous. The Confederate General PAXTON is among the killed, and General STONEWALL JACKSON and General HILL are severely wounded.

A despatch from Berlin states that the King of PRUSSIA has personally interposed in the quarrel between his Ministers and the Chamber of Deputies. In the sitting of Thursday Count VON BISMARK read a Royal Message, in which his MAJESTY characterises the conduct of the Chamber as unconstitutional, and advises them to terminate such a state of things in order that the business of the country may be resumed. The Chamber referred the Royal Message to the committee on the Address.

Mr. Tottenham having retired from the representation of New Ross, his eldest son, Colonel Tottenham, has offered himself to the electors in the Conservative interest. It is rumoured that he will be opposed by Mr. M'Kenna, manager of the local Bank.

CONVOCATION.—On Tuesday morning both Houses of Convocation assembled at Westminster for the despatch of business, and as it was known that Bishop Colenso's book was to be discussed, on a report to be presented from the Lower House, there was an unusually large attendance of members. In the Upper House, after addresses to the Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales had been adopted, a deputation from the Lower House, consisting of the Deans of Bristol, Canterbury, and Norwich, Archdeacon Bickersteth, Canon Wordsworth, and the Rev. Mr. Vincent, brought up a report from the committee appointed last session to examine Bishop Colenso's work on the Pentateuch. The report stated that the committee had examined the book generally concerning its contents and substance, its reasonings and conclusions. They found that the substance of the book was a series of arguments issuing in a denial that the Pentateuch was written by Moses, and a denial that the Pentateuch and the Book of Joshua were historically true. They found that one of the propositions it contained was that the Bible itself was not God's word. The committee observed that this proposition was, both in its terms and its meaning, as used in the book, contrary to the faith of the universal Church, which had always taught that Holy Scripture was given by inspiration of the Holy Ghost, and in particular to the Articles and the formularies of the United Church of England and Ireland, in which Articles and formularies the Holy Scriptures were constantly designated as the Word of God. A second proposition contained in the book was, that not Moses but Samuel and other persons of a later age composed the Pentateuch. Upon this the committee observed that Moses was spoken of by our blessed Lord as the writer of the Pentateuch. Among the "chief portions of the story," the historical truth of which was denied, were "The Deluge"—"The giving of the law of Moses"—"The institution of the Passover"—"The Exodus." They considered that the book involved errors of the gravest and most dangerous character, subversive of faith in the Bible as the Word of God, and they therefore submitted a resolution, adopted by the Lower House, praying their lordships to take such action upon the matter as they might think fit. The Archbishop of Canterbury having read the resolution, the Bishop of Salisbury moved that the report be read. The Bishop of London objected to the motion, on the ground that some of their body might be called upon to sit as judges on the question in the ecclesiastical courts. He moved as an amendment that no further steps be taken in the matter until the decision of the Bishop of Cape Town became known. The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of Oxford, Winchester, Lincoln, and Lichfield supported the motion. The Bishop of St. David's supported the amendment. After a long discussion the Bishop of London withdrew his amendment at the present stage, and the motion of the Bishop of Salisbury was agreed to. The Bishop of London brought up a report on foreign chaplaincies, recommending the appointment of a bishop, so soon as the funds will allow, for the supervision of foreign chaplains, and the appointment of missionary clergy for the instruction of foreigners in London. The Bishop of Oxford suggested that a fee should be levied upon all foreign chaplaincies, and so the necessary funds for the maintenance of the bishop might be obtained. Several matters were referred back to the committee for consideration. In the Lower House, after the report of the Committee on Bishop Colenso's book had been received and sent to the Upper House, the report on foreign chaplaincies was read and agreed to. A discussion took place on church music and other subjects. On Wednesday in the Upper House, the Bishop of Winchester moved that the following resolutions be sent to the Lower House as an answer to the report of their committe e on Bishop Colenso's work:—1st. That the said book does, in our judgment, involve errors of the gravest and most dangerous character, subversive of faith in the Bible as the Word of God. 2d. That this House, having reason to believe that the book in question will shortly be submitted to the judgment of an ecclesiastical court, declines to take further action in this matter, but that we affectionately warn those who may not be able to read the published and convincing answers to the work which have already appeared, of its dangereus character. 3. That these resolutions be communicated to the Lower House. The Bishop of Oxford seconded the motion. The Bishop of St. David's said he could not concur in the first resolution, because it assigned no grounds for the condemnation. The Bishop of Salisbury agreed with the first resolution, but could not agree to the second, because he considered further action necessary, quite independent of anything that might be done by the Metropolitan of South Africa. The first resolution was then carried—the Bishop of St. David's being the only prelate holding up his hand against it. The second resolution was also carried—the Bishop of Salisbury being the only dissentient. The third resolution was carried unanimously. The Bishop of Oxford presented a petition, numerously signed by clergy and laity of the diocese of Exeter, praying that a bishopric might be erected for the county of Cornwall. The discussion of the petition was adjourned to a future day. In the Lower House the Rev. Dr. M'Caul moved that it is inexpedient, especially at the present moment, to alter the terms of subscription now recognised by the law for the protection of the doctrine and discipline of the Church, and that this resolution be respectfully communicated to the Upper House. Archdeacon Denison seconded the motion. The Dean of Canterbury moved, and Archdeacon Sandford seconded the adjournment of the debate. After some discussion the further consideration of the question was adjourned to the next session. The Rev. A. Oxendon moved the appointment of a joint committee to consider the means of providing a special and distinct training of candidates for holy orders. Archdeacon Harris seconded the motion. After some discussion the motion was agreed to. On Thursday the Upper House did not meet. In the Lower House Dr. Williams, Principal of Jesus College, Oxford, presented a gravamen against the Bishop of Bangor's Bill now before Parliament, giving power to introduce the Church service in the English language into Welsh parishes, even where the incumbent objected. After a long discussion, it was agreed to address the Upper House on the subject, suggesting that further time should be allowed for the consideration of the Bill and for consultation with the Welsh clergy. A resolution was then adopted to the effect that if the Upper House should think fit to adopt the course recommended by the committee as to the best method of securing the united action of the provinces of Canterbury and York, the Lower House, saving its rights and privileges, would gladly welcome the presence of the Lower House of the Convocation of York.

Foreign.

France.—M. Baroche has been seriously ill for some days, and continues in a state of great debility. No symptoms however have appeared giving cause to apprehend an aggravation of his malady. Madame Lamartine, the wife of the poet, is dead, and M. Lamartine himself is so seriously ill that his recovery is considered hopeless. The Presse of Tuesday contains an address from the five Opposition deputies—Darimon, Favre, Ollivier, Picard, and Dr. Henon—to the electors of Paris, extending to seven columns, which thus concludes:—

"If you think there are others better qualified to take par in political struggles, then prefer them. All we ask in such case is that you will not completely forget the Five who did not despair when nearly all political men held aloof. Recollect those who would not allow that history should have to say that Liberal France had ever abandoned herself."

The recent accounts from the French army in Mexico have caused a great deal of uneasiness in Paris, and it is said that reinforcements of 8000 men, with a battery of artillery, and another general of division, are to be sent out forthwith. The Duke of Chartres, second son of the late Duke of Orleans, is about to marry his cousin, the daughter of the Prince de Joinville. To legalise the marriage in France it is necessary that notice shall be posted up in the Mairie of the former domicile of both. Accordingly, the following notice has been exhibited at the Mairie of the Louvre:—

"M. Ferdinand d'Orleans, Duke de Chartres, at present domiciled in England, in the Palace of Claremont, and at France in the Palace of the Tuileries, and Madlle. Amélie, Princess of Orleans, aged 18, also in the Palace of Claremont, and in France in the Palace of the Tuileries.

The marriage will be celebrated on the 11th of next month. The Débats of Tuesday says:—

"Queen Victoria has just sent to M. Guizot a magnificent copy of the "Speeches and Addresses of his Royal Highness the Prince Consort," to the French translation of which work he had written a preface. This volume is bound in white morocco, and upon the fly-leaf the following words are written in the Queen's own hand:—'To M. Guizot, in remembrance of the best of men, and with the expression of gratitude for the sincere homage which he has rendered to him, from his unfortunate widow, Victoria R.' Can anything be more touching and more noble than this simplicity in grandeur and in grief?"

Colonel Colson, who had been sent by the Government to the Crimea to examine into the state of the French cemetery at Sebastopol, has returned to France. He reports that he found the place in the most deplorable state; the tombs had been profaned and the burying ground treated in the most disgraceful manner. It has, therefore, been resolved that all the remains of the French soldiers shall be collected together into one spot, over which a commemorative monument will be erected. The whole will be surrounded by a strong wall, and a person placed in charge of it. The town of Sebastopol is not, it is said, in a better condition than the French cemetery; everything is in ruins, and scarcely any houses have been rebuilt.

Spain.—The sentence of imprisonment and hard labour at the galleys against the Granada Protestants has been commuted into the same number of years' banishment. The European deputation is at Madrid. It is said that the Ministers intend to appoint new prefects for the provinces.

Portugal.—The King has returned from Cintra, and is now residing at the Ajuda. The Duke de Brabant has arrived in Lisbon. He was received at the Royal Arsenal, where he disembarked, by the ministers and other high functionaries. A portion of the Crown diamonds are about to be sold to realise the value of about 60,000*l*. Several foreign dealers have appeared as bidders, but it is probable that the sale will be made in London. The premiums awarded to the Portuguese exhibitors of the London Exhibition have been presented. The King presided at the ceremony.

Denmark.—Accounts from Copenhagen state that at a sitting of the Privy Council, on the 16th inst., it was resolved that the answer of the Royal family to the Greek deputation should be postponed until the 1st of June. The deputation had intended to leave Copenhagen on the 25th, without waiting for a definite reply, but out of respect for the Danish Government and for the Ministers of the protecting Powers, they have now delayed their departure. It is considered at Copenhagen that the affair is terminated, and that it is only a question of time.

Sweden.—Letters from Stockholm, addressed to the Czartoryski party at Paris, state that a large transport of arms has left Stockholm, to be conveyed to the Baltic coast. The transport consists of 12,000 muskets, 6000 Minié rifles, and 50 cannons, the carriages of which are already in Poland.

Norway.—Prince Czartoryski has arrived at Christiania, where he met with a most enthusiastic reception. Manifestations in favour of Poland have been made in the theatre. The President of the Chamber has expressed the universal sympathies of the Norwegians in favour of Poland.

Finland.—The Senate of the Academy and the Municipality of Helsingfors have refused to sign the address of devotion to the Emperor of Russia relative to the Polish insurrection. The inhabitants of Abo, the second capital of Finland, have also refused to sign the address which has been recommended to all the Russian provinces by the military Governors.

Saxony.—The Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Prince George of Saxony, died at Dresden on Monday evening.

Prussia.—In the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies on Friday, the proposition of the committee that the House should not consent to the demand expressed in the Ministerial letter was agreed to by 295 to 20 votes. The President, Herr Grabow, suggested that they should give the Ministers time until Monday, and then, communicating the resolution of the Committee, request their attendance at the sittings of the Chamber. Herr Forkenbeck moved that a distinct summons should be addressed to the Ministers to be present at the sittings, in accordance with article 60 of the Constitution. The latter motion was carried by 167 to 138 votes. On the re-assembling of the Chamber on Monday the Ministers did not make their appearance, but sent a letter to the President relative to the recent resolution, in which they said:—

"The Ministry have not asked that the President should relinquish his right of interrupting their speeches, but only that he should declare that he has no disciplinary privilege, especially that of calling the Ministers to order. The Ministry repeat that unless such a declaration be made they will not be present at the sittings of the Chamber."

Herr Hoverbeck then moved that the Chamber sees no reason to make any addition to its resolution of the 15th inst. This motion was passed by a large majority. The Chamber further resolved, on the motion of Herr Forkenbeck, that the question of the reorganisation of the army should be removed from the order of the day until the Ministers, in fulfilment of their constitutional duties, made their appearance in the House. It was also resolved that the debate on the Address to the Crown should be placed on the order of the day for the next sitting. On Tuesday the committee appointed to draw up this Address decided upon its form, and incorporated the draughts of Herren Virchow and Gneist, with the addition of the following passage:—

"The Ministers have absented themselves from the debates of the House upon the most trivial pretext, and have made their appearance dependent upon a condition calculated only to raise a fresh point of dispute upon constitutional right."

On Tuesday and Wednesday the military Ministerial representatives from the department of the Marine were present at the meetings of the Committee on the Budget. The appearance of these gentlemen caused great surprise among the members of the Committee. At the sitting of the Upper House on Wednesday a vote of thanks, as proposed by the Committee, was passed to the King for the attitude taken up by the Government in the Polish question. The Ministers Von Bismark Schönhausen and Von Roon were present, but did not speak. Attacks of the most violent character upon the Chamber of Deputies took place during the debate. On Thursday the Minister von Bismark made his appearance at the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies, and read a Royal Message, in which the King said:—

"The House has indirectly approved the conduct of its President, which was in violation of the constitutional rights of the Ministry. Such a position for the Ministers does not correspond with the dignity of the Crown. The King can only advise the Chamber to terminate such a state of things, in order that the business of the House may be continued.

Herr von Bismark then left the House. Herr Virchow moved that the Royal Message be referred to the Committee on the Address, as the Ministers had misinformed the King. Herr von Sybel and Count Schwerin seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

Italy.—A Royal decree was issued on Wednesday, proroguing the Italian Parliament. The new session will be opened by the King on the 25th inst. In the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies on Thursday, Signor Lacaita declared that Lord Henry Lennox visited the Neapolitan prisons accompanied by M. Dassi, who was not a deputy, though he had been elected, but not admitted into the Italian Parliament. In the sitting of the Senate on Friday, a debate took place on the questions put to the Ministry by Signor Deforesta respecting the state of the Southern Provinces. Signor Peruzzi expressed his thanks to the statesmen who had defended the cause of Italy in the English Parliament. He refuted the assertions relative to the press, the prisons, and public safety made by those members of the English Parliament hostile to Italy. He stated that economic improvements and judiciary and administrative reforms had been realised within the last two years, and defended the policy of the French Government against the accusation of duplicity which had been brought against it by a senator. "The occupation of Rome," he said, "is a fact no less painful for the Government of the Emperor than for that of King Victor Emmanuel; but it is impossible to overlook the difficulties of the Emperor's position." He then demonstrated the complicity of the reactionary party in all the countries of Europe with Rome. He further stated that brigandage had sensibly declined, and that the support of the country was secured to the Government, "which," he said, "employs its efforts in order that the French flag should no longer protect the conspiracies going on in Rome." In reference to the cases of Mr. Bishop and Count Christen, Signor Peruzzi proved the legality of their condemnation. The Italian Government could not make any difference between foreigners and Italians. This speech produced a great sensation. The Minister of Justice then refuted the assertions which had been made in the British Parliament relative to the administration of justice. Signor Deforesta declared himself satisfied with the explanations of the Ministry. The Italian Government having learned that a Bourbon expedition, under the command of officers sent from Rome, was organising on the Albanian coast, for the purpose of conducting a number of Albanian brigands into the province of Puglia, despatched several men-of-war to cruise off the Albanian coast, and requested the Porte to arrest the conspirators. A domiciliary visit was accordingly made at the house of the Austrian Consul at Valona, when a quantity of arms and ammunition was discovered and seized. Three persons at the Austrian Consulate were arrested. The Chamber has resolved to appoint a parliamentary committee for a general inquiry into the military and commercial navy of the kingdom. The Pope returned to Rome on Wednesday evening. An immense crowd was present at his arrival. Bengal lights were displayed on the road taken by his Holiness, who was greatly cheered. It is said that the Pope is preparing a memorandum on the sufferings and condition of the Catholic Church in Poland.

Russia.—A decree of the Minister of War has been issued, ordering the formation of new regiments for the occupation of the fortresses of Finland, and the placing of eight battalions on a war footing in that province. Private letters state that the Russian Government has ordered the officers and civil functionaries in Poland to send their wives, without delay, into the interior of Russia.

Poland.—The Warsaw Credit Bank has declined to afford the Government a loan of a million roubles. The Provisional Government in Volhynia has issued proclamations declaring the peasants free, and assuring to them religious liberty and the partition of all landed property. This proclamation has produced an excellent effect. The Revolutionary Committee for Lithuania has published a reply to the Imperial ukase granting an amnesty, which says:—

"As the object of the insurrection is not to obtain concessions from the Emperor, but to establish the independence of the whole of Poland within the frontiers which existed before its partition, the national struggle shall continue until the last Muscovite soldier has been driven from these Polish provinces, or till the last Polish army has ceased to fight."

The Lithuanian Committee has also sent to the Provisional Government a proclamation, which they say has been addressed by the Russian Commanders to their troops, ordering the latter to exterminate all Catholics, especially the noblemen, and promising the partition of all landed property among them, as well as the blessing of Heaven and the thanks of the Emperor. The Warsaw National Committee issued a proclamation on the 5th inst. prohibiting any change in the present state of the accounts of the National Treasury. It also ordains that no private person or official shall be connected with any financial operations, or participate in any way in the public works, and declares null and void all future financial acts and ordinances of the Russian Government. It further warns foreign capitalists against acting in violation of the above regulations. Another ordinance of the National Committee forbids the Paris banker, M. Alexandre Laski, from accepting the Presidency of the Warsaw Bank. A proclamation has also been issued forbidding any person to leave Poland without a passport from the National Government. The insurrection has broken out in Machnowska, in the Government of Kiew; 1000 students from the University of the province have joined it, and an engagement has taken place between Berdyczow and Machnowska, which resulted in favour of the insurgents. Near Kiew however the insurgents have suffered a defeat. The insurrection has also broken out in Little Russia, on the further side of the Dnieper, at Charkow, Pultawa, and Czernigow, four districts of Podolia, and in the Polish provinces now incorporated with Russia proper. Near Charkow 1000 insurgents are posted, under Russian officers, and above 1000 have occupied Zwiahel, in Volhynia. The peasants have not yet joined the movement. Three insurgent corps have made their appearance in the districts of Wladimir and Luck. The Russians are fortifying Luck. The whole of the Ukraine is in a state of insurrection, with the exception of the districts of Czerkask and Czechryn, where the nobility are favourable to Russia. A provisional insurgent chief has been proclaimed in the province, and an insurrectionary proclamation has been issued recognising the rights of the Russian nationalities. Between the 8th and 10th inst. the insurrection broke out at five different points of Volhynia. An engagement took place on Wednesday between the Russians and the insurgents near Lachow. Oninski has had a successful engagement with the Russians in the environs of Zarki, while Dombrowski was successful near Kleszewo. The Czas publishes a memorandum of M. de Pogodine, pointing out the means for the extirpation of the Poles in the provinces incorporated with Russia. The Prussian Ambassador at Paris has written to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, contradicting the statement of the Czas, that the Prussian Commandant at Inowraclaw had arranged with a Russian General the movements of troops upon the frontiers; but the Czas reiterates the charge.

Greece.—The Budget has been voted. Its principal features are the reduction of the ground rent to 5 per cent., and the raising of the tax upon house property. A complete change of Ministry has taken place. The National Assembly has voted an Address, conveying its thanks to the three Protecting Powers for the benefits they have hitherto conferred upon Greece.

Turkey.—M. de Moustier, the French Ambassador, having invited the Porte to co-operate with the other Powers in diplomatic action at St. Petersburg in favour of Poland, the Porte refused, on the ground that Turkey was not a party to the Treaties of 1815. In consequence however of fresh remonstrances, the Porte assented to the proposal of France, and despatched a note to St. Petersburg in favour of Poland in the same spirit as those sent by England, France, and Austria.

Egypt.—Prince Napoleon has presented his Highness Ismail Pasha, the Viceroy of Egypt, with the Grand Cordon of the Legion of Honour.

India.—The financial statement of the Indian Chancellor of Exchequer is expected to be made on the 29th inst. The Indian navy ceased to exist as an effective service on the 30th of April. The rebel Rao Sahib, apprehended by Captain Nuttall, and tried and convicted at Sholapore, has been sentenced to penal servitude for life. There was a rumour in Cabul that Dost Mahomed was dead, but no confirmation of the report had been received.

China.—A despatch from Shanghai of April 9 says that Pekin is quiet. The rebel bands have been driven away from the vicinity of the settlement at Tien-tsin. Reinforcements are supposed to have been sent to the relief of Fooshan. Japan is reported quiet.

Cochin China.—Official despatches to the 31st of March state that public order was re-established in Cochin China, and that Admiral Bonnard and a Spanish Plenipotentiary were to leave for Hué on the 3d of April, to exchange the ratifications of the Treaty of Peace of 1862. All the Spanish troops were to re-embark on the 2d of April on their return to Manilla.

Australia.—Accounts from the Australian colonies state that they have expressed a firm determination to resist the revival of transportation to their shores. The news from the gold-fields is good, and the state of trade generally was sound and progressive.

United States.—The army of the Potomac, under General Hooker, crossed the Rappahannock on the 27th ult., in two divisions. The smaller division crossed below Fredericksburg, in front of the scene of General Burnside's disaster; the larger, commanded by Gen. Hooker in person, crossed about 15 miles above the city, at a place called Kelly's Ford. The Confederates were prepared to receive them at the former spot, but are said to have been taken by surprise by the latter movement. Nothing, however, of any importance occurred until the afternoon of Saturday, the 2d inst, when the Confederate General Lee sent forward General "Stonewall" Jackson, by a flank movement to make a vigorous attack upon the right wing of the Federals near Chancellorsville. General Schurz's division, composed principally of Germans, was the first to feel the shock, and immediately gave way. No efforts of the officers to rally their men were of any avail, and the retreat became a rout; whole regiments threw down their arms and fled towards head-quarters. The panic soon extended to General Deven's division, which also broke and ran. Two brigades of General Howard's division alone retired in order, to the support of whom General Hooker sent his own division, commanded by General Berry. The united and desperate exertions of these troops, after a most sanguinary struggle, succeeded in checking the Confederate advance, and prevented General Jackson from completing his victory. At daybreak on Sunday the 3d, the Confederates again advanced, this time being met upon the extreme right by General Berry. The battle raged for three hours and a half, during which General Berry was killed. The Federals then fell back, the Confederates pursuing. The fighting continued four hours longer, when, the Federals having succeeded in getting the Confederates in their front, the conflict was suspended. The carnage on both sides is described as being awful, but no numbers are given. The Federal dead in the battle were left unburied, and the wounded without attention. On the same day the left of the Federal army captured the heights in the rear of Fredericksburg, and the Confederate forces at that point joined General Lee at Chancellorsville. General Hooker was busy throughout the 3d and 4th intrenching his line. The 4th was a quiet day until late in the afternoon, when General Hooker advanced a division of the Fifth Corps for the purpose of feeling for the enemy and ascertaining his position. The column moved out in line of battle across the fields and into the woods, in the direction of Fredericksburg. Soon after the skirmishers had entered the woods they met the skirmishers of the Confederates and drove them back. The main body then pushed on, and soon found a large body of Confederates drawn up in a formidable double line of battle, on a slope facing the main position. A brisk action ensued, lasting half an hour, during which time the musketry fire was nearly equal to that of the previous Sunday. The Federal batteries also opened on the ascertained position of the Confederates, who were soon compelled to fall back, somewhat in disorder. The Federal troops then returned to the main line and rested. The news from General Sedgwick's detachment was less encouraging. It appears that after the struggle of the 3d General Lee detached a large body of his main army to go down and meet General Sedgwick, and that at the same time General Longstreet was rapidly getting into his rear. Early on the morning of the 4th large masses of Confederates appeared on the heights to the east of Fredericksburg, which had been partially evacuated by the Federals in order to strengthen Sedgwick's column. It is understood that this force was Longstreet's column just arrived from Suffolk. General Sedgwick was hotly engaged throughout the entire day, the Confederates pressing him at all points, and cutting him up badly. He at length saw that it was impossible he could hold his position, and therefore determined to extricate himself by recrossing the river. This hazardous expedient was attempted and successfully carried out between midnight and 2 o'clock on the morning of the 5th. The Confederates held positions with their artillery raking the bridges over which Sedgwick was obliged to move his men, necessarily creating some confusion in his ranks as the columns moved over, and causing considerable loss of life. They also pressed hotly upon his rear when they discovered he was retreating, and harassed him incessantly. But he succeeded in getting his force over in wonderfully good order, and marched immediately in the direction of the United States Ford, to join the main army under General Hooker. At daybreak the Confederates had obtained a position on the hills on the south bank of the Rappahannock, scarcely two miles below the United States Ford, and commenced a vigorous shelling of the Federal trains lying posted on the north side of the river, close to the Ford. Several men were injured by these shells, and one or two killed. On the 5th General Hooker prepared to follow General Sedgwick's example by retreating across the Rappahannock, and on the following day his army had returned to the camp near Falmouth, after being absent nine days. His artillery commenced crossing the river at night, being very dark, and completed crossing by three o'clock on the following morning. The infantry then crossed, their rear being well covered. The crossing was entirely completed by daylight on the 6th, the rear guard having some severe fighting in getting over. Various reasons are assigned for this retreat—one is that General Sedgwick's repulse uncovered the line of the Acquia Creek railroad, and endangered General Hooker's communication and supplies. Another is that General Hooker did not consider his position tenable after the rout of the 11th corps of his army, which is described as disgraceful. General Lee's despatch to President Davis says that General Jackson penetrated to the enemy's rear, driving him from all positions to within one mile of Chancellorsville. General Lee further states that many prisoners were captured, and says in conclusion:—"The enemy's loss in killed and wounded was large. We have to thank God for a great victory. Paxton was killed, and General Jackson severely wounded." President Lincoln and General Halleck visited General Hooker's army on the 7th. It is rumoured that General Heintzelmann will supersede General Hooker. The Democratic journals urge General M'Clellan's appointment to the Command-in-Chief. General Hooker is reported to have captured 6000 to 15,000 prisoner and to have lost 6000 men. General Sedgwick's command lost 5000 men. General Stoneman's Federal Cavalry approached within two miles of Richmond, causing considerable excitement in that city. General Stoneman is reported to have returned safely to the Rappahannock. Admiral Porter reports that he has taken possession of Grand Gulf, Mississippi, which the enemy had abandoned, after blowing up their ammunition and spiking their guns. The forts were torn to pieces by the fire from the Federal fleet. On the 21st ult. General Banks occupied Opelousas and Washington, in Louisiana. General Banks's intention is to proceed northward, to form a junction with the forces under Admirals Farragut and Porter and General Grant, designing thereby the complete severance of the Confederate line of communication for supplies from Texas to Port Hudson. General Grant has landed a large force below Vicksburg, on the Mississippi shore, and General Sherman has landed up the Yazoo River, where he made his last attack. It is supposed that Generals Grant and Sherman will now make a combined attack on Vicksburg. The Federals are reported to have cut the Confederate railroad communication between Vicksburg and Richmond, Charleston, and Tullahoma. It is reported that the Confederate force in Arkansas under Generals Stirling Price and Kirby Smith is rapidly augmenting in numbers, and will soon resume operations in Missouri. Despatches from Cairo of the 6th say the attack of Federal gunboats on Haines Bluff was repulsed, and they were returning to Young's Point. The Choctaw was much damaged, her turrets penetrated with 64-pound round shot. The Federal loss was 80 killed and wounded. The attack on Charleston was to be renewed on the 4th inst., when the iron-clads were again to cross the bar. It is supposed that the Government intends to enforce the conscription forthwith. A list of provost-marshals for different districts is published. Mr. Chase has made a speech in Boston, expressing the opinion that the war was near its termination. Mr. Vallandigham, ex-member of Congress from Ohio, has been arrested at his residence in Dayton, by a detachment of soldiers, who battered down the doors of his house to reach his room. His friends endeavoured to rescue him; but he was carried prisoner to Cincinnati. General Burnside is said to have ordered his arrest for making disloyal speeches in Ohio. The arrest caused a riot, and it became necessary to send military from Cincinnati and Columbus to quell it. Telegraphic communication to Dayton was interrupted. Mr. Redgate, one of the owners of the cargo of the Peterhoff, has applied to the Court for permission to testify on his own account. The Court refused the application on the ground that Mr. Redgate, being a citizen of Texas at the time of the secession, must be regarded as an alien enemy. The examination of the cargo continues. The investigation into the alleged frauds committed in prize cases is to be conducted with closed doors. It is reported that the privateer schooner Retribution has been captured by the Federal steamer Alabama, off St. Domingo. The Federal sloop-of-war Tridle (?) has been burnt off Pensacola. The Confederate Alabama has captured, near Pernambuco, the Kingfisher, from Liverpool to Calcutta; the Charles Hill, from Liverpool to Montevideo; the Louisa Hatch, with a cargo of coals, from Cardiff to Ceylon; the Kate Corey, and the Lafayette. The Florida has captured the barks Henriette and Oneida, and put 15 of their crews on board the French transport Tremonton for conveyance to Pernambuco.

Brazils.—The Marquis Albuquerque, Minister of Finance, is dead. His portfolio has been provisionally intrusted to the Marquis Abrantes. The outbreak at Cordova has been suppressed.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Friday.—The Earl of Ellenborough called attention to the Schleswig Holstein question, and inquired whether the Government were prepared to produce any further correspondence respecting it. He regretted to be obliged to call attention to a danger which, if not met at once, might seriously threaten the future peace of Europe so soon as the state of Poland would permit the German Powers to take up the matter. For the last two years negotiations had taken place, with no result but to increase the irritation. A most extraordinary despatch had been published last autumn, in which Earl Russell had reversed the policy of this country, and had threatened the integrity of Denmark, though the latter had made all the concessions which Germany was entitled to ask. Denmark was entitled to the sympathy of this country in her attempts to maintain her connection with Schleswig, which had been a portion of her dominion for 400 years. With respect to Holstein the recent proclamation by which the King of Denmark had conceded the demands of the German Diet ought to have satisfied the latter. The ambitious designs of Germany were prompted by the desire of obtaining possession of the harbour of Schleswig, and of thereby becoming a naval Power. He hoped that the Government, in conjunction with that of France, would insist upon the designs of Germany being abandoned. If this course were not adopted he saw no other alternative but to refer the question to a European Congress, as in its present condition it was a source of danger to the peace of Europe.—Earl Russell said that both Germans and Danes, being heated by their differences, had alike fallen into error, and had made demands and done acts which were not to be justified. The Germans were wrong in their demands, and Denmark was also wrong in not performing the diplomatic engagements into which she had entered. He had proposed that Schleswig and Holstein should be divided, and should have a separate budget, but this recommendation had not been accepted. He still thought that his proposal of 1862 would settle the question, for although it did not satisfy the German Diet, Prussia and Austria were willing to receive it. It would have preserved the independence of Denmark, and he thought Denmark had unwisely refused her assent, considering the non-fulfilment of the engagements of 1851 on her part. Germany insisted on the fulfilment of these engagements, and the efforts of France and England were directed to obtain such a modification of them as would suit both parties. To override a solemn compact as to the duties of the Federal Diet, would be a most arbitrary act of international power. The treaty of 1851 ought to be adhered to by both parties, as it afforded the only ground for a fair settlement, and was a position which the English Government should maintain.—The Earl of DERBY expressed his surprise that Earl Russell should have charged Denmark with not keeping faith, as regarded her diplomatic arrangements, with the Federal Diet. The difficulty as regarded Holstein was the absolute refusal of that duchy, backed by German influence, to prevent any arrangement being made. This being the state of things, Denmark had made grave concessions to the Diet for the sake of peace, and the only question that now remained was in reference to Schleswig, over which the Federal Diet had no more control than had any other Power in Europe. Schleswig had been made a stalking-horse for the ambition of Germany, and there was no pretence for saying that the duchy ought to be disconnected from Denmark because the German and Danish population did not agree as to mutual rights and privileges. He looked upon the independence of Denmark as vital to England, and he contended that there was no alternative which he would not accept in supporting that Power (no contemptible ally to England in case of a European war) against the aggression of the German Powers.—Lord WODEHOUSE said that if Denmark was bound in honour to fulfil her diplomatic engagements, Germany was equally bound in honour not to put insurmountable obstacles in the way of that fulfilment. This, however, was precisely what Germany had done. He was of opinion that we were fully justified in supporting Denmark in maintaining her ancient connection with Schleswig. At the same time, he could not approve of the conduct of Denmark in not conceding to the inhabitants of that province all the rights and privileges which the inhabitants of Denmark proper enjoyed.—Earl RUSSELL remarked that it would not be expedient to produce the correspondence at the present moment, but he had no objection to do so at a later period. The subject then dropped. The Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill, the Augmentation of Benefices Bill, and the Elections During Recess Bill, were read a third time and passed.

MONDAY.—Metropolitan Railways.—Earl GRANVILLE, in reply to Lord STRATHEDEN, said he could not held out any hope that the Government would appoint a commission to inquire into the subject of metropolitan railways until they had an opportunity of considering the report of the Select Committee now sitting upon the subject.—The Marquis of CLANRICARDE, in moving for copies of any reports of decisions of the Prize Courts of the United States, said that the spirit evinced in the capture of our merchant ships by United States' cruisers was not only unfriendly, but contrary to international law. He insisted on the propriety of her Majesty's Government taking action in the matter, as, owing to these repeated seizures, it was impossible to effect insurances on ships trading to the Western hemisphere, except under ruinous rates. He contended that the seizure of the Labuan, the Adela, the Springbok, the Dolphin, and the Peterhoff was clearly illegal and contrary to international law, and he could see no prospect of an end to these captures, unless more energetic measures were taken by the Government.—Earl RUSSELL defended the American Government from the charge of violating international law, declaring that Mr. Seward had always acknowledged its force, and said that there must be a certain and legal cause of capture before a ship was taken. Admiral Milne had been instructed to protect vessels from unjustifiable seizure in the neighbourhood of Matamoras, although it did not appear that the American cruisers had done any great injury to the trade of that port, as its harbour was crowded with ships. He vindicated the justice and impartiality of the United States' Prize Courts, and stated that on referring their decisions to the law officers of the Crown no rational ground of objection could be found against them. No doubt, many swift vessels were employed in running the blockade, the owners of which, if their ships were seized, put on airs of injured innocence and demanded redress of the Foreign Office. There was also no doubt that the Americans were much incensed by the proceedings of the Alabama but he denied that she had been fitted up with the cognisance of the Government, and repudiated the idea of any wish on our part to interfere unfairly in the struggle now going on.—The Earl of DERBY concurred with Earl Russell's remarks on not imputing partiality to the American Prize Courts. We ought also, he considered, to make allowance for the very natural irritation felt in America at the breaking of the blockade and supplying the wants of the Confederates.—After a few words from Lord CRANWORTH, the motion was withdrawn. The Marriages (Ireland) Bill passed through committee.

TUESDAY.—Lord EBURY moved the second reading of the Acts of Uniformity Amendment Bill, stating that its object was to repeal the clause imposing upon the clergy of the Church of England the necessity of subscribing their assent to the 39 Articles, and to everything contained in the Book of Common Prayer. He added that he had brought forward the Bill at the request of a large body of clergy, and he called their lordships' especial attention to the fact that there had not been a single petition presented against it. He contended that the present state of the law was neither a benefit nor a safeguard to the Church, that it pressed heavily on the consciences of many, while it prevented many estimable young men from entering the ministry.—The Archbishop of CANTERBURY opposed the Bill as unnecessary, and not desired by the majority of the clergy. It would certainly confer no benefit upon them or upon the Church itself He therefore moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months.—The Bishop of LONDON supported the Bill, declaring that, in his opinion, the declaration, or rather certain words which had crept into it, for the express purpose of catching persons whom it was desired to exclude from the Church, were not only useless but mischievous.—Lord LYTTELTON spoke against the Bill, which was supported by the Bishop of ST. DAVID'S.—The Bishop of OXFORD did not believe that the declaration had kept one conscientious person out of the Church of England, or that its effect had been to reduce the number of young men entering the universities, and from thence going into orders.—The Bishop of LLANDAFF said that the amendment of the Archbishop would close the door to all concessions, and hoped that some middle course might be suggested.—The Bishop of LICHFIELD opposed the Bill: Earl GREY supported it. On a division the second reading was negatived by 90 to 50. The Bill was therefore lost. The Redemption of Rents (Ireland) Bill passed through committee pro formá, and was referred to the law officers of the Crown for Ireland for consideration during the recess. The Marriages (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed. The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill and the Inland Revenue Bill were read a second time.

THURSDAY.—International Exhibition Building.—In reply to a question from the Duke of RUTLAND, Earl GRANVILLE said that the subject of the purchase of the Exhibition building of 1862 was under the consideration of the Government, and was in so forward a state that it would be brought before Parliament after the recess. The Savings' Banks Moneys Bill was read a second time. The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill, and the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill passed through committee. Their lordships then adjourned to Monday, June 1.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—Southern Italy.—Sir G. BOWYER asked Lord Palmerston if he had any official documents in proof of his statement that there existed at Rome a committee of no less than 200 persons, by whom bands of murderers were organised and sent forth into the Neapolitan territory to commit every sort of atrocity.—Lord PALMERSTON replied that he was not prepared with documentary proofs, but he could refer the hon. baronet to an authority who perhaps could give him all the information he desired—namely, to Father Cucci, who when preaching on Sunday the 3d of May, before the ex-King of Naples and the members of his Court, said that his auditors, instead of submitting to the decrees of Providence, had kept stirring up by promises and money and inflammatory addresses the ignorant masses in Southern Italy, hounding them on to pillage and slaughter; and that, while money was found for the outfit of brigands, the Bourbonists would not give a single bajocco to their suffering fellow countrymen, who, but for Roman charity, would die of starvation. China.—Mr. LIDDELL called attention to events in China, with a view of obtaining an expression of opinion from the House upon the course of policy pursued in that country. That policy, he said, was not one of non-intervention, but of active interference, with the view of propping up by force of arms a weak Government against its own subjects. He entered upon a detailed narrative of the transactions in China, of the proceedings of the Taepings, and the operations of the British and French forces against the rebels, of the disorders and bloodshed attending them, and of the results, political, commercial, and social, of these transactions. He said that we had assumed a joint protectorship of China with other European Powers, in which he foresaw the seeds of interminable complications and embarrassments. Our commercial interests, instead of being promoted by the policy we were pursuing, were, on the contrary, prejudiced thereby, even the burden of the indemnity having fallen upon the foreign trade. He complained of the employment of British officers in the service of the Emperor of China, under the sanction of their own Government, being relieved from the penalties of the Foreign Enlistment Act by a Royal Proclamation; and, in conclusion, he asked the House to consider the whole question in all its bearings. He moved for copies of correspondence upon the subject.—Mr. BAILLIE supported the motion, and protested against the policy of the Government in endeavouring to prop up an effete Government in China—a policy justified, he said, by representations of the character and acts of the Taepings which he believed were not founded on facts. No other member rising, the question was put from the Chair, and the motion was negatived, without a division, in a very thin House.—On the question that the Speaker leave the chair, Mr. COBDEN protested against the conduct of the Government in giving no answer to the speech of Mr. Liddell. He thought it was scarcely decent on the part of the Premier and the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs to have remained silent under such circumstances.—Mr. H. D. SEYMOUR thought that the House had been treated with gross and studied disrespect.—Lord NAAS said he had never recollected such an occurrence, and gave notice that he would take an opportunity of again calling the attention of the House to the subject.—Mr. LAYARD said that, as there were several other questions on the paper relating to foreign affairs, he had intended to reserve his reply to the motion of Mr. Liddell until he should have come to deal with the whole of them seriatim. After a few words from Mr. S. FITZGERALD, Colonel SYKES, and Sir H. VERNEY, the House went into committee pro formâ and immediately resumed. The London Coal and Wine Duties Continuance Bill, and the Sale of Mill Sites, &c. (Ireland) Bill, were read a third time and passed. Leave was given to bring in a Bill to amend the laws relating to Fisheries in Ireland.

MONDAY.—China.—Lord NAAS gave notice that he intended, after the Whitsun holidays, to call the attention of the House to the state of affairs in China. Greenwich Hospital.—In reply to Mr. LIDDELL, Lord C. PAGET said that Sir R. Bromley, the late accountant-general to the Admiralty, had been in receipt of 300*l.* per annum as auditor of prize accounts, not from the funds of Greenwich Hospital, but from the 5 per cent. deducted from the prize money. The subject of a successor to Sir R. Bromley, and of the salary to be paid for the office, was under consideration. Brazil.—Mr. POLLARD-URQUHART inquired whether the Brazilian Minister had demanded his passports, or had informed the Government that he had instructions which might require him to suspend diplomatic relations.—Mr. LAYARD said he could only answer that the correspondence was still pending, and that it would be very inconvenient to the public service to produce it. Southern Italy.—Lord J. MANNERS, Mr. HENNESSY, and Sir G. BOWYER asked if any despatch had been received from Mr. Odo Russell, upon which the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs in his recent speech on Italy had based what he described to be his "moral convictions" in respect to the state of Rome.—Mr. LAYARD denied that he had referred to any "despatch," and Lord PALMERSTON said he must decline to furnish any materials for getting up a quarrel between Mr. Odo Russell and the Governments of France and of Rome.—Sir G. GREY having moved the third reading of the Prison Ministers' Bill, Mr. BLACK moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a third time that day six months. He argued that the Bill would be injurious to criminals who might be Protestant Dissenters, while it would be of no substantial benefit to those who were Roman Catholics.—Mr. NORRIS seconded the amendment.—Mr. NEWDEGATE and Mr. ADDERLEY spoke in opposition to the Bill.—Mr. BRIGHT said he agreed with a great deal of what had been said by Mr. Newdegate and Mr. Adderley. He believed that one of the effects of the Bill would be to stir up angry feelings in some counties. But, in the whole of the discussion, the opponents of the measure had left out of consideration the religious wants of Roman Catholic prisoners; they had sought only to maintain the supremacy of their own Church. Those prisoners, however, had a right to be treated, as regarded their moral and religious teaching, as Protestant prisoners were, and, as he could not leave the state of things as he found them, he should vote for the Bill. On a division, the amendment was negatived by 196 to 167. The Bill was then read a third time and passed. The Packet Contracts.—The House went into a Committee of Supply, when Mr. PEEL, in moving a vote, on account, of 956,878*l.* for the packet service for the current year, explained the nature of the several contracts, and entered very fully into the history of Mr. J. G. Churchward's contract and its incidents, in order to state the reasons for including in the vote provisions for payments to Mr. Churchward for the conveyance of mails between Dover and Calais and Dover and Ostend from the 1st of April, 1863, to the 20th of June, 1863, but excluding any payment in respect of the period subsequent to the latter date to Mr Churchward, or to any person claiming through him by virtue of a contract, dated the 26th of April, 1859, between him and the Board of Admiralty. The question for the Committee, he said, was whether, taking into consideration the whole of the transaction, and what was due to the purity of the public service, and the honour and dignity of the House, they would or would not continue the payments to Mr. Churchward under the contract of 1859. He stated, in conclusion, the steps the Government had taken to provide for the service in the event of the Committee adopting his proposal.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE, in order to raise the question as to the contract of 1859, moved to omit from the vote all the words relating to Mr. Churchward. He reviewed the salient points of the case, pointing out the legal position of the Government in relation to the contract by their present form of proceeding, and the unfair position in which Mr. Churchward was placed. He warned the Government that they were bringing about a collision between the House of Commons and the courts of law, inflicting serious damage upon Mr. Churchward, and establishing a precedent which would make it impossible to get a contractor to enter into a contract; and all without the prospect of any solid advantage, and without, as he contended, any evidence of corrupt considerations influencing the contract. In justification of his own conduct in the transaction, when financial Secretary of the Treasury in 1859, he described the share he had in it and the course he had pursued, observing that, if he was not to be stigmatised, he could not see why a stigma should rest upon Mr. Churchward.—Mr. BOUVERIE objected to the amendment in point of form, as the vote in its present shape raised a question inconsistent with the functions of a Committee of Supply. Its object was to obtain a definite expression of opinion as to what ought to be done in respect to a particular transaction, which was a question for the House.—Mr. WALPOLE said that the amendment would get rid of Mr. Bouverie's objection to the vote.—The CHAIRMAN decided that it was not competent to him to refuse to put the resolution, and that the amendment was admissible.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL explained the legal aspect of the question as regarded the contract of 1859, and stated the reasons why the matter had been propounded to the House in the present form, which, he admitted, was a special and unusual form.—Mr. MALINS argued that the Government were bound by the contract, and were not at liberty to repudiate it.—Mr. COBDEN, as Chairman of the Committee on Contracts, said that Captain Carnegie had stated that Mr. Churchward proposed to him at the Admiralty to give him his support at the Dover election, on the condition of his having a renewal of his contract. The Committee believed Captain Carnegie's evidence, and considered that there was an attempt to suborn a public functionary, and to induce him to accept a bribe; it meant that or it meant nothing.—Sir H. CAIRNS dwelt upon the irregularity of the proceeding taken by the Government in a Committee of Supply, and of the prejudice it would have upon the case of Mr. Churchward if he should be driven to a court of law. Mr. Churchward directly denied Captain Carnegie's evidence. He hoped, for the sake of order, of public advantage, expediency, and justice, that the House would accept the amendment.—Mr. HUBBARD said, with regard to the charge against Mr. Churchward, that where there was a balance of evidence of one man's against another's it was impossible to say the charge was proved; and that men were not to be punished by breaking contracts with them.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL said that the Government could not have taken any other course, in deference to a decision of the House in 1860, than to bring this matter before a Committee of Supply; and the form in which it was presented would furnish a complete answer to an action upon the contract. He discussed the general merits of the case, calling attention to the principal dates and to the circumstance of the extension of the contract being on the eve of a general election, and maintained that, upon the merits of the case, the House would be justified in repudiating the contract, though satisfied that the members of the Government of the day acted on public grounds. On a division the amendment was negatived by 176 to 168. The vote was then agreed to.—On the question that the resolution be reported, Mr. WALPOLE suggested that there should be a further opportunity of discussing the question. It was a new mode of taking votes in a Committee of Supply, and a precedent, he thought, of the worst description.—Mr. DISRAELI concurred in the suggestion.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that the resolution would be reported on Thursday week.—The Thames Embankment (North side) Bill and the Vaccination (Ireland) Bill were read a third time and passed. The House then went into Committee on the Offences (South Africa) Bill, the New Zealand Boundaries Bill, the Land Drainage (Provisional Orders) Bill, and the Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act Continuance Bill. The Vice-Admiralty Courts Bill was read a second time.

TUESDAY.—International Exhibition Building.—In reply to Sir H. VERNEY, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he was unable to state for what sum the building of the International Exhibition of 1862 could be purchased with a view to convert a portion of it into a museum or gallery for works of art, as the Commissioners of the former Exhibition had not yet considered the matter; but he hoped to be able to give the House some information on the subject on the re-assembling of the House after the Whitsun holidays. American Affairs.—In answer to Mr. WARNER, Mr. LAYARD said that Mr. Magee, British Vice-Consul at Mobile, had been dismissed because he had endeavoured to violate an honourable understanding which had been come to between her Majesty's Government and that of the United States by placing on board the Vesuvius a large sum of money in specie intended for England. Poland.—On the motion that the House at its rising do adjourn to Thursday the 28th inst., Mr. HENNESSY called attention to the breach of international law committed by Prussia in the war now raging between Russia and Poland, and expressed a hope that the Government would address some remonstrance to Prussia on the subject.—Lord PALMERSTON gave a definition of the law of neutrals on the subject, and said it had been laid down that a neutral was to be at liberty to furnish warlike stores to either or both belligerents.—Mr. PEACOCKE complained of the manner in which the foreign relations of the country were carried on, and said that five Cabinet Ministers, holding important offices, had seats in the House of Lords, while four of the principal departments of the State were represented in the House of Commons by under secretaries. He warned the House of Commons of the danger of surrendering its high position, and descending to the level of a bad debating club, with no more political authority than a parish vestry.—After some remarks by Mr. LAYARD, Lord R. CECIL, and Mr. COCHRANE, Sir G. GREY stated, in answer to Mr. BENTINCK, that the first order of the day on Thursday, the 28th inst., would be the report of the resolution passed in committee of supply on the Dover Mail Packet Contract.—Capt. JERVIS called attention to the subject of naval courts of inquiry, and the Case of Lord Elphinstone, the commander of the Vigilant.—Lord CLARENCE PAGET defended the conduct of the Admiralty in having severely censured that officer for having run his ship on the Swin Sands. Irish Fisheries.—Mr. ESMONDE called attention to a report in the Irish papers of a speech delivered by Sir R. Peel at a meeting of Irish members which he had convened, on the subject of the Irish Salmon Fisheries, to which meeting other members, representing large interests in connection with the fisheries, were not invited.—Sir R. PEEL said that he delivered no such speech at the meeting in question, but he had received a letter from an Irish gentleman who was not present, stating that he had supplied the report to the papers, believing that Sir R. Peel would certainly address the meeting in terms similar to those he had imagined in his behalf. The motion for the adjournment was then agreed to. The Irish Church.—Mr. DILLWYN moved for a select committee to inquire how far the present distribution of endowments for religious purposes throughout Ireland may be so amended as most to conduce to the welfare of all classes of her Majesty's Irish subjects; to search the journals of the House for any resolutions passed since the Act having reference to the application of any surplus revenue arising from ecclesiastical endowments in Ireland; and to report how far such resolution or resolutions appear to have been subsequently carried into effect. He described the steps which had been taken in former years to deal with the great abuses connected with the Irish Church. He admitted that the inquiry for which he moved would probably result in the transfer of a large portion of the revenues of the Established Church in Ireland; but this he regarded as a great desideratum, considering that the Church as by law established was based on injustice, and was the chief source of all the discontent which existed in the country.—Sir J. Trelawny seconded the motion.—Mr. H. Seymour moved as an amendment the appointment of a royal commission to inquire into the territorial arrangement of existing benefices; the provision of the cure of souls; the amount of population and number of Protestants in each benefice; the erection of new parishes where required, having regard to amount of ministerial work, and the circumstances of surrounding parishes; the districts which it might be desirable to serve provisionally by stipendiary curates; the incomes of benefices and parts of benefices in Ireland, so far as might be necessary fairly to adjust the incomes of parishes proposed to be erected; the incomes of parishes or districts proposed to be served provisionally by stipendiary curates; poor benefices which need to be augmented; the liability of appropriators and impropriators, and the provision made by them for the cure of souls; and the revision and amendment of the law which would be required to give effect to their recommendations. He believed that the settlement of the Irish Church question might be effected without entering into the subject of appropriation. If abuses could be proved to exist in the Irish Church all the friends of that Church would desire to see them removed. His plan, which contemplated a reform of the Church suggested by Archdeacon Stopford, was a practical one and would be better conducted by a Royal Commission than by a Select Committee, which could not ascertain points within the scope and power of a commission to examine, while a Commission would save time, and settle the question speedily, and without strife or animosity.—Mr. Newdegate seconded the amendment.—Mr. Whiteside opposed both the motion and amendment, contending that there was no ground for the attack which Mr. Dillwyn had made upon the Irish Church, the existence of which, he said, was one of the articles of the union which was founded upon the principle of one constitution, one legislature, and one Church. He admitted that the Irish Church was the Church of a minority of the population; but he supported it because he regarded it as the depository of truth, as the representative of the early Catholic Church which existed in Ireland long before the time of Henry II., and as the natural ally of the constitution and liberties of the country.—On the motion of Mr. Osborne the debate was adjourned to the 28th inst.—Sir R. Peel obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the procedure in the Civil Bill Courts in Ireland.—Lord Palmerston obtained leave to bring in a Bill to carry into effect an additional article to the Treaty of the 7th April, 1862, between her Majesty and the United States of America, for the suppression of the African Slave Trade. The District Parochial Churches (Ireland) Bill was read a second time. The other orders of the day were disposed of, and the House adjourned to Thursday the 28th inst.

Trades Unionist Deputation in favour of Poland.—The deputation appointed at the trades unionist meeting in favour of Poland, held at St. James's Hall on the 28th ult., had an interview with Lord Palmerston on Monday evening, by appointment, in the library of the House of Commons. The deputation was introduced by Mr. Stansfeld, M.P., and consisted of Professor Beesly, of University College, the chairman of the meeting; Mr. G. Potter, the secretary; Mr. Coulson (bricklayer), the president; with Mr. Odger (shoemaker), secretary of the London Trades Council, and the following officers and members of the trades societies:—Messrs. Graham, Hamlyn, Applegarth, Merrifield, Harry, Smith, Eglinton, Cremer, Garland, Tremlett, Dormer, Mildred, Evans, Llewellyn, Burgess, Petherbridge (carpenters' societies), Facey, Vise, Vickers, Lambelle (painters), Stainsby (tailor), Grey, Connolly, Cruse, Pearson, Gibbon (mason), Butler, Jones (tin-plate workers), Miles (cabman), Nash (wire worker), Wigmore (bricklayer), Fast (zinc worker), Shave (plumber), Dodson, Murray, Bassett (boot and shoe makers), Osborne, and Nilass (plasterers). Prof. Beesly explained to his lordship the constitution of the society as one consisting entirely of trades unionists, of which the deputation now present were representatives. The trades unionists might claim to speak in the name of the large body of the labouring classes, and they had sought an interview with his lordship, because, working men not being represented in the House of Commons, they were obliged on any matter which was particularly interesting to them to address themselves directly to the Government. Their desire was to see France and England co-operating cordially in the cause of Poland. They were not jealous of the influence of France in Europe. That feeling might be entertained and expressed in other quarters, but among working men it did not exist. Mr. G. Potter then read the resolutions agreed to at the meeting, three in number, denouncing the conduct of Russia, expressing sympathy with the Poles in their insurrection, and calling upon the Government to interfere by force, if necessary, to secure the independence of Poland. Mr. Connolly (mason) said the working men of England considered it necessary for the peace of Europe that Poland should be again a nation; and though not insensible to the evils of war, they were prepared to encounter those evils, to bear suffering and increased taxation, if by so doing Poland would be made free. Mr. Cremer (joiner) said that the great bulk of the working men of this country desired the Government to take immediate action, to tell Russia to relinquish her hold on Poland, and if she would not do that, to compel her by force of arms. Mr. Murray (bootmaker) said they were no admirers of his lordship's domestic policy, for he refused workmen the right of representation; but they admired his general foreign policy, and trusted he would act on this question with his usual vigour. If Russia persisted in her present diabolical conduct his lordship should withdraw the English ambassador from St. Petersburg, and send the Russian ambassador home with a message to his master that an English fleet and army would follow him if necessary. Mr. Petherbridge (joiner) thought the time had passed for expressions of barren sympathy for the gallant Poles. The working men of this country desired to see a speedy termination to the savage atrocities of Russia in Poland, and thought that could only be accomplished by the determination of the English Government to proceed to the extremity of war if necessary. Mr. Nilass (plasterer) said that to preserve the balance of power it was the duty of the Government to restrain the growing power of Russia, whose ambition, if not kept within proper limits, would always be detrimental to the peace of Europe. The conduct of Prussia at this moment with respect to the Polish question was disgraceful to her as a civilised nation. Mr. Applegarth (joiner), Mr. Wigmore (bricklayer), Mr. Facey (painter), and Mr. Eglinton (joiner), contended that if war with Russia became necessary to set Poland free, it would be one of the most popular wars ever entered into by England, and the Government might depend on the support of the country at large. Lord Palmerston in reply said:

"I have felt considerable pleasure in listening to the members of the deputation, who have spoken in such clear and unmistakeable terms, and which do much credit to their intelligence and good feeling. I think it is always useful that a person occupying the position I do in her Majesty's Government should clearly understand the opinions and feelings of that numerous and important class represented by this deputation. I think the generous sympathy and feeling you have displayed for Poland highly creditable; indeed, the sympathy of Englishmen for the victims of wrong and bad government is so general as to have become almost a proverb. No nation has been so long the victims of wrong as the Polish people. By the Treaty of Vienna a constitution was guaranteed to Poland by Russia, and the Emperor of Russia of that day gave a constitution, but it was soon put to sleep, and never yet tried. Russia never did, nor does she to this day, fulfil the compact she entered into. I entirely share in the general feeling expressed towards Poland, but peace or war is a grave question, requiring much deliberation, and one that I would not enter upon without consulting my colleagues in the Government. Be assured, however, gentlemen, that I will represent the opinions you have so ably laid before me to my colleagues, and that we shall do our best for the cause of Poland."

Mr. Cremer: We are men of action, my lord, and have come to the conclusion that the only way to aid the Poles is to call on Russia to desist from her present conduct, and, if she will not attend to that call, thrash her into compliance. Lord Palmerston said:—

"I cannot pledge myself as to the course her Majesty's Government will ultimately take on this question. You must be aware, gentlemen, that the duty of a man in office is to give his opinion on the past, to speak of the present, but not to talk about the future. I can only say that I will faithfully convey the opinions of this important deputation, whom I have been very glad to have met, to my colleagues in the Government, and that they will secure every consideration."

The deputation then retired, thanking his lordship for the courtesy with which they had been received. The interview lasted nearly an hour.

Launch of a Russian Iron-clad.—On Monday an iron-cased vessel, built for the Russian navy from a Russian design, was launched at the Thames Iron Works at Blackwall, in the presence of an immense concourse of spectators. She is named the Pervenitz, or "Firstling," and is the first iron-clad ship in the Russian navy. She is built as a ram, and has not only a beak, but a monstrous projection under her bows level with the water-line, strong enough to transfix the stoutest three-decker that ever floated. Her sides slope inwards at an angle of 27 degrees with the view of assisting shot in glancing off them in action. These peculiarities are said to make her the ugliest vessel ever seen upon the river, and though in fair weather she would be a formidable antagonist to sailing vessels, it is expected that she will roll heavily and be very uncomfortable in a sea way. She will however draw only 14 feet of water when fully equipped for sea, less than any ship in the English iron-cased fleet, except the Enterprise, which is only one-third her size.

Election of a City Police Commissioner.—A Court of Common Council was held on Thursday for the election of a Commissioner of Police for the City, in the room of the late Mr. Daniel Whittle Harvey. There were twelve candidates, all of them military men. By successive votes this number was at last reduced to two—Colonel James Fraser, Chief Constable of Berkshire, and Captain Congreve, of the Brigade Office, Chatham. At this stage the majority was nearly 100 in favour of the colonel, and Captain Congreve declined to put the Council to the trouble of another division. Colonel Fraser was therefore declared by the Lord Mayor to be duly elected.

LANCASHIRE RELIEF FUND.—At the meeting of the Mansion House Committee on Friday, the report stated that the total amount received up to the previous evening was 492,122*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* The amount received during the week was 740*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.*, of which 181*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* was from home, and 559*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.* from colonial sources. The sum already remitted for distribution in the distressed districts, including the amount for emigration, was 402,336*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* 17 grants, amounting to 4430*l.*, were voted, and in consideration of the improved condition of the labour market, and the consequent diminution of distress, it was resolved to meet only once a fortnight for the future.

GRESHAM COLLEGE.—The Rev. Charlton Lane, M.A., of Jesus College, Cambridge, Incumbent of St. Mark's, Kennington, and rural dean of Southwark, has been elected Professor of Rhetoric in Gresham College. There were 14 candidates.

THE PEABODY FUND.—It is said that the trustees of this fund have nearly completed an arrangement for the purchase of a portion of the vacant ground in Victoria Street, Holborn Hill, for the purpose of erecting dwellings for the industrial classes.

THE ATTEMPTED MURDER AND SUICIDE AT WOOLWICH.—The inquest on the body of Mr. Roberts, the baker, at Woolwich, who hung himself in consequence of his servant girl charging him with having induced her to put poison in her mistress's supper beer, was resumed on Monday. The widow was examined, and stated that the girl had confessed to her she had put the poison in the beer, but said nothing about the complicity of her master. She also gave reasons for disbelieving the story altogether. Several witnesses deposed to the depressed spirits of the deceased, and the jury returned a verdict of Temporary Insanity. The girl herself has since been committed by the magistrate for trial on the charge of feloniously administering poison with intent to cause the death of Mrs. Roberts.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week ending Saturday, May 16, were 1350. The average number in the corresponding weeks of the 10 years, 1853-62, corrected for increase of population, was 1214. The present return is therefore 136 above the average. The deaths from smallpox were 61, from scarlatina 89, from measles 55. During the week the births of 919 boys and 956 girls, in all 1875 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1853-62 the average number was 1881.

BEDFORD.—The magistrates met on Friday to inquire further into the death of Mr. Budd, who was assaulted by some ruffians on Sunday week, and died on the following day. There were two civilians and three militiamen in custody on the charge, but at the commencement of the proceedings the magistrates ordered the militiamen to be set at liberty, stating that there was no evidence to implicate them, and expressing regret that suspicion should ever have been thrown on their conduct, as it appeared that instead of attacking the deceased, they came up after he had been assaulted and assisted him home. The case against the two civilians was adjourned. At the inquest on Wednesday, the evidence tended to turn the tables again against the militiamen. Lieut. Boultbee and a policeman, who saw deceased immediately after the outrage, deposed that he had told them the assault was made by soldiers. In this conflict of testimony the inquest was adjourned to obtain the evidence of Mrs. Budd, who was present with her husband when he was assaulted.

BRADFORD.—Mr. Rawlinson, the commissioner who was sent by Government into the manufacturing districts to report on the capability of the towns to afford employment for the distressed operatives, has made an interim report, in which he states the various towns that are in want of drainage, formation and pavement of streets, water works, parks, &c., at which the operatives could be profitably employed if Government would lend the money at a low rate of interest, and would pass a short Act to remove the difficulties in the way of the towns accepting it. Mr. Rawlinson reports that the operatives would almost all be willing to accept this kind of work, and he calculates that after a few weeks' practice, they would earn enough to take their families off the lists of charity.

LIVERPOOL.—The Great Eastern, under the command of Captain Paton, left the Mersey on Saturday morning for New York. She took out 600 passengers, 80 of whom were first-class. The rumour that the ship was to carry out 1300 recruits for the Federal service was incorrect, no application having ever been made to the agents of the Company to fit up accommodation for such a large number of male passengers.

MANCHESTER.—At the weekly meeting of the Executive Committee on Monday, the hon. secretary reported that the receipts of the week had been 1226*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.*, leaving a balance in the bank of 382,850*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.* Mr. Farnall reported that there was a further decrease on the 9th inst., in the number of persons receiving parochial relief in 27 unions, of 5071 as compared with the previous week, being a total decrease of 89,419 since the 6th December.

NORWICH.—About three weeks Mrs. W. F. Windham arrived in this city, with a view of effecting a reconciliation with her husband, though apparently without the slightest chance of effecting that object. Despite the indisposition at first manifested by Mr. Windham to receive her overtures, it is now reported that he has "made it up" with her. The suit which has been instituted in the Divorce Court will doubtless under these circumstances be abandoned, or, if prosecuted, will be evaded on the ground of condonation.

EPSOM SUMMER MEETING.

TUESDAY.—The Craven Stakes.—Mr. Hart's Adventurer beat Isoline, Comet, and 6 others. The Heathcote Plate.—Lord Stamford's Livingstone beat Miss Julia, Welland, and 8 others. The Brighton Stakes.—Mr. R. C. Naylor's Drummer Boy beat Libellous, Ellerton, Spicebox, and 14 others. The Woodcote Stakes—Count Lagrange's ch. f. Fille de l'Air beat Molly Carew, Procella, and 12 others. The Rous Stakes.—Baron Rothschild's Wingrave beat Ace of Clubs, Prince Plausible, and 7 others. The Horton Stakes.—Baron Nivière's Dirt Cheap beat Mr. R. Wales's b. f., Surbiton Hill, and Andromeda.

WEDNESDAY.—The heavy rain and cold north-east wind made this the most miserable Derby Day which has been known for years. The Prince of Wales was present, but the company as well as the amusements, were a sad falling off. The Epsom Town Plate.—Mr. W. Clay's Selection, beat Merry Maid, Libellous, and 9 others. The Derby Stakes—Mr. R. C. Naylor's b.c. Macaroni, beat Lord Clifden, Rapid Rhone, Blue Mantle, and 27 others. Upwards of an hour was consumed in 32 attempts to commence the race before the flag was lowered for the start, Lord Clifden took the lead and kept it round the Corner, and into the straight with the crowd of antagonists nearly two lengths behind him. But near the Stand the head of Macaroni showed nearer and nearer, and the powerful frame of Early Purl began to clear itself from the ruck, with Rapid Rhone close upon it. In 20 yards more Macaroni was close on Lord Clifden, who was called upon by his jockey with whip and spur. The favourite with an evident distress made an effort, turned his head from side to side as his lead diminished, and the head and mane of Macaroni showed clear above, but not beyond the favourite's. For 50 or 60 yards he struggled to maintain his lead, then slackened for a few seconds visibly, and lost by a head. There was a great shout as the numbers went up at the post, and Macaroni, Lord Clifden, and Rapid Rhone, were ranked respectively the first, second, and third in the Derby of 1863 The Manor Plate.—Mr. Rayner's Dirt Cheap beat Belgrave, Santhal, and 6 others. The Bentinck Plate—Mr. Bryan's Welland beat Creole, Queen of the Vale, and 10 others. The Burgh Stakes.—Mr. York's Blanche of Lancaster beat Wangle-eye, Neilgherry, and 2 others

CRICKET.—A single-wicket match between five players each, selected from the clubs of Messrs. Beck, Henderson & Child, Adelphi, Strand; and Messrs. James Carter & Co., Holborn, was played at Balham on Saturday, the 16th inst. The former was represented by Mr. W. Child, R. Dean, J. Braithwate, J. Cheeseman, and J. Tabritt; the latter by Mr. B. Ainsworth, one of the principals, A. Fraser,—Sharman, J. Ellis, and S. Simpson. A very close and exciting match resulted in a victory for the Adelphi Club by a very narrow majority. Messrs. Sharman and Dean "handled the ball" for their respective sides. The same houses will meet in an eleven-a-side contest at Balham on the 30th inst.; and a match is in contemplation about the latter end of June, between eleven of Messrs. Beck, Henderson, & Child's club and a like number from the firm of Messrs. Barr & Sugden, Covent Garden.

Potatoes as last week; large supplies of new ones are still making their appearance from Cornwall and the Channel Isles. ### METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, May 18.

The number of Beasts is not quite so large as on Monday last, and on the average that day's quotations are exceeded; yet trade was dull towards the close of the market. The supply of Sheep and Lambs is larger. Trade is slow, and late prices are with difficulty realised. Good Calves are not very plentiful, and command rather higher rates. From Germany and Holland there are 250 Beasts, 3820 Sheep, and 184 Calves; from Spain, 330 Beasts; from Scotland, 400; from Norfolk and Suffolk, 2800; and 100 from the Northern and Midland counties.

THURSDAY, May 21.

The supply of Beasts is again small and the demand good, consequently Monday's prices are well maintained, and in a few instances exceeded. The number of Sheep is larger than on Thursday last. The trade is dull and no advance is realised on Monday's quotations. The demand for Lamb has decreased, and several remain unsold. Trade is slow for Calves at Monday's quotations. From Germany and Holland there are 95 Beasts, 1620 Sheep, and 372 Calves; and from Spain, 30 Beasts. Milch Cows, 105

BRITISH WOOLS.—London, May 22.

Our trade continues in a healthy state, and prices firm, but from the short supply of many articles the prices quoted are almost nominal.

Colonial Wool Sales.—These sales are progressing at about the same rates as our last report, and fine parcels are taken on Continental account at the improved quotations then noticed.

HOPS.—Borough Market, Friday, May 22.

Messrs. Pattenden & Smith report the demand for Hops not quite so brisk as in the early part of the week. Prices firm.

MARK LANE.—Monday, May 18.

The supply of English Wheat to this morning's market was small, and met a slow sale at last week's rates, particularly the secondary and inferior qualities; the market was fairly attended, but foreign Wheat, both old and new, was neglected, and prices were unaltered. Barley brings last week's prices, and Beans and Peas are each 1s. per qr. dearer. Oats are a slow sale at a decline of 6d. per qr. Flour is but little inquired for, and prices are rather easier.

Friday, May 22.

Since the 15th inst. we have had a great deal of heavy rain, which appears to have been general, and will prove very beneficial to the spring crops and late grass. The Wheat trade has continued without activity, although in some markets slightly firmer. The weather and liberal arrivals have caused Oats to decline 6d. per qr. here, but in the country they and other descriptions of spring corn have brought fully former prices. Flour is difficult of sale, and the turn of prices in favour of buyers. Since Friday last 54 vessels have been reported off the coast. A moderate business has been done in floating cargoes; there was not much disposition to buy Wheat, and the prices for this article are barely maintained. Maize, Barley, and Linseed advanced about 6d per qr., and are in good demand. In Paris (May 21), business in Wheat and Flour continues to be very limited, and although on the finest descriptions holders exact late prices, and occasionally an extra 6d., nevertheless the majority of buyers are not disposed to purchase at former rates. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 73,8[illegible] cwts. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 39s. [illegible]d. per 280 lbs. The arrivals of English grain are very small, of foreign Wheat and Barley good, Oats large, and of Flour moderate. To-day's market was badly attended. English Wheat met with an improved inquiry at slightly advanced prices; foreign was taken slowly at the late extreme rates. There was no alteration in the value of Barley, Beans, and Peas. With a large arrival of Oats, it was necessary to submit to a decline of 6d. per qr. to effect sales.

Liverpool, May 19.—We had a good attendance of the trade at to-day's market. We have had a fair consumptive demand for Wheat at the full prices of last Friday. Flour steady without alteration in value. Indian Corn was taken to a moderate extent at late rates. Oats and Oatmeal are held firmly at outside figures. New Egyptian Beans being offered more freely, declined 6d. per qr.; the same remark applies also to Peas. Barley unchanged. The market showed more tone throughout, and closes with firmness.

Friday, May 22.—Moderate attendance. Wheat fair request at Tuesday's rates. Flour dull. Indian Corn steady. Egyptian Beans no change in value. Oats and Oatmeal no change.

WARNERS' IMPROVED PATENT DOUBLE-ACTION SYRINGE, with 6 feet Flexible Suction Pipe,

21s.,

Will draw water from water-pot, pail, tank, or pond, in conservatory or garden, and throw the water, either in a fine shower or a strong stream, to a distance of 30 feet.

As this Syringe draws and forces the water at both up and down strokes, the unpleasant stooping necessary to charge the ordinary Syringe is avoided.

It is superior to any other form of Syringe, and may be used as an effective Garden Engine with Warners' Water Barrow, or other supply.

THERE ARE NO SUCTION OR DELIVERY VALVES, hence MUCH FRICTION AND LIABILITY TO CHOKE with leaves and dirt IS AVOIDED.

It is an effective Garden Engine for cleansing or syringing Wall-fruit or Rose Trees, Plants, or Vines.

It may be used to draw water from the pail in which it is fixed, or from a tank or pond by the addition of the required length of suction. It is simple in its construction, having no suction or delivery valves to clog with dirt or leaves.

No Establishment, either private, commercial, or manufacturing, should be without one.

Six feet of Flexible Suction, with Union and Suction Rose, &c., extra, 12s. Longer lengths of Suction at 1s. 6d. per foot.

ROBERT BLAKE: Admiral and General at Sea.
"The subject is noble; and Mr. Dixon has treated it with rare vigour, spirit, and conscientiousness. The glorious victories won by Robert Blake are universally known; but to find out how they were won, and what sort of man achieved them, we must apply to the famous Republican Admiral's latest, best, and completest biographer. His narrative is not only historically valuable, but is terse, vivid, and dramatic in no ordinary degree. We especially like the manner in which the extraordinary events of Blake's period are interwoven with Blake's life; and the vigorous and masterly clearness of the descriptions of the sea-fights."—Leader.

The interest of his narrative never flags, whether he is dealing with the old Admiral and his worldly intrigues—with the youthful Quaker and his love affairs—with the mature philanthropist and his rising colony, or with the bewildered and melancholy close of the great Quaker's earthly career,—the history is admirably sustained."—Gentleman's Magazine.

Dr. Lindley's Theory of Horticulture.

THE THEORY and PRACTICE of HORTICULTURE; or, an Attempt to explain the chief Operations of Gardening upon Physiological Grounds: being the Second Edition of the "Theory of Horticulture," much enlarged. By JOHN LINDLEY, Ph.D., F.R.S., Corresponding Member of the Institute, Vice-Secretary of the Horticultural Society, Professor of Botany in University College, London, &c.
"The First Edition of this valuable work was issued in 1840, since which time it has had an extensive circulation, and has been translated into the German, Dutch, and even Russian languages. Being more particularly restricted to principles, however, the author at length resolved to render the work more generally interesting and useful by a more frequent reference to practical operations. He has thus greatly extended the matter, by supporting the physiological doctrines with an appeal to facts familiar to cultivators, or which ought to be; and the result is a still more interesting and popular compendium of the principles and practice, or the science and art, of horticulture."—Builder.
"This is a Second Edition of the 'Theory of Horticulture,' with the addition of a large quantity of practical matter, introduced to show how entirely scientific principles and good cultivation correspond. The volume contains about four times as much matter as the first edition . . . Although very large additions are made to every chapter, while many passages in the first edition have been wholly struck out, it may be proper to say that the greatest changes are those which relate to vitality, climate, domestication, ventilation, propagation, pruning, resting, and soils and manures; such being the subjects in which practical men are most interested. The whole work has, indeed, assumed such a form as to make it evident that the great object of the author has been, not to produce a work suited to men of science, but one which every well informed gardener may understand and apply. As the volume concludes with a very copious index of matter, there is no difficulty in ascertaining where any given subject is treated of."—Gardeners' Chronicle.

MEDICAL and ŒCONOMICAL BOTANY; or An Account of the Principal Plants employed in Medicine or Domestic Œconomy. In One Vol. 8vo, with numerous Woodcuts, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

EXTRACT FROM THE AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

"The Vegetable Kingdom contains, among a large quantity of plants of no known importance to man, various useful species employed in medicine, the arts, or in the many branches of domestic œconomy. The principal part of these which can be brought by teachers in Europe under the notice of students, or which, from their great importance, deserve to be among the earliest subjects of study, are mentioned in the following pages, where they are arranged in the manner proposed in the 'VEGETABLE KINGDOM' of the author, with the sequence of matter departed from in a few instances, when it was believed that the convenience of younger students would be consulted by doing so. The author trusts that this selection will be found to have been made in such a way that all teachers who possess reasonably extensive means of illustrating their lectures, and all Botanic Gardens, may furnish the larger part of the species which are mentioned. A small selection was indispensable; firstly, because a greater work would have been beyond the reach of the majority of purchasers; and secondly, because experience shows us that those who have to study a science of observation, such as Botany, require to concentrate their attention, in the first instance, upon a limited number of objects."

News of the Week.

THE House of Commons re-assembled on Thursday after the Whitsuntide recess. On the report of the resolution of Committee of Supply for the vote on account of the packet service, Mr. WALPOLE called attention to the unusual course adopted by the Government in coupling the vote with the condition that no portion of the amount should be applicable to the contract with Mr. CHURCHWARD for the conveyance of the mails between Dover, Ostend, and Calais. He contended that the form of the vote in supply was strictly limited to the grant proposed to be given to the Crown; and that the consequences of attaching such a condition to it would be to alter the relations of the House to the Crown and to the other House of Parliament in matters of supply. He moved as an amendment that all the words of the resolution relating to Mr. CHURCHWARD's contract should be struck out. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER defended the resolution both in form and substance. Mr. CAVE, Lord J. MANNERS, Mr. LINDSAY, Lord R. CECIL, and Sir F. KELLY, supported the amendment, but the report of the resolution was agreed to on a division by 205 to 191. The House then went into Committee of Ways and Means, when the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved his resolution abolishing the exemption of excursion trains from duty. After a short discussion the resolution was agreed to. The Land Drainage (Provisional Orders) Bill was referred to a select committee, an amendment by Sir S. NORTHCOTE to refer it to a committee of the whole House having been negatived by 56 to 18. The Drainage and Improvement of Land (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. On the motion for resuming the adjourned debate on Mr. DILLWYN's motion on the religious endowments of Ireland, The O'DONOGHUE moved the further adjournment to the 5th June, in order that time might be given to the Irish members to be in their places. After a short discussion, the motion was agreed to. The District Parochial Churches (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. The Execution of Decrees Bill was read a second time. Lord C. PAGET obtained leave to bring in a Bill to establish officers of the royal naval reserve.

From the United States we have the melancholy announcement of the death of General STONEWALL JACKSON. He was so seriously wounded in the arm by an accidental shot from one of his own men during the engagement in which he defeated the right wing of General HOOKER's army, that amputation became necessary, and the effect of the operation, combined with an attack of pneumonia, caused his death. The Richmond papers state that no event has produced so deep and mournful an impression since the death of WASHINGTON, and that the Confederates could better have spared a brigade or a division. Neither army on the Rappahannock has made any fresh movement, but General LEE is reported to have taken up a new line of defence, in order to protect both railroads running out of Richmond; and there is a general impression that if the army of the Potomac is not soon able to resume offensive operations, he will cross the Rappahannock and march upon Washington, the capture of which is considered by the Confederates to be the speediest mode of conquering a peace.

The KING OF PRUSSIA has replied to the address of the Chamber of Deputies by identifying himself thoroughly with his Ministers and condemning the conduct of the Chamber towards them. HIS MAJESTY says that the attitude of the Chamber in foreign affairs has grieved him; but he will maintain the power of the Crown undiminished, and will not allow the foundation upon which it rests to be removed. He concludes by declaring that the Ministers possess his confidence, and their actions have his assent. This reply was followed on the same day by a Royal Message, closing the parliamentary session.

The Italian Parliament was opened on Monday by the KING in person. HIS MAJESTY in his speech congratulated the Chambers on the progress of the kingdom in order and in prosperity, adverted to the fact that the kingdom had been recognised by most of the European Powers, and expressed a hope that the treaties of commerce which had been or were about to be negociated would add to the development of the national resources.

A telegram from Bombay informs us that Sir CHARLES TREVELYAN's Indian Budget shows a surplus for the year 1862-3 of 957,000*l.*, and for 1863-4 of 815,000*l.* It reduces the duty on iron, beer, and wine, and takes 1 per cent. off the income tax. It abandons the tax on salt, and appropriates 5,000,000*l.* to public works and 500,000*l.* to education.

They will be present at the Eton Regatta on the 5th of June, and will lunch with the Provost of Eton on that day. On the arrival of her Majesty the Prince and Princess will occupy their apartments at the Castle. The announcement that the Prince would attend the meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society at Worcester, in July, has been contradicted, the engagements of his Royal Highness making it impossible for him to visit Worcester at that time.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS LOUIS OF HESSE, with the infant Princess, left Marlborough House about half past 12 on Saturday, on their return to Germany. The Prince and Princess of Wales accompanied their Royal Highnesses to the Bricklayers' Arms Station, and travelled with them by a special train to Gravesend, where the Royal party went on board the Victoria and Albert, Royal yacht, commanded by his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen. The Prince and Princess of Wales, after partaking of a dejeuner with the Prince and Princess Louis, landed at half past 3 o'clock, when the Royal yacht departed for Antwerp. The Prince and Princess Louis disembarked at Antwerp on Sunday, about half-past 1, and proceeded by the Northern Railway to Brussels, where they arrived at a quarter past 3. The Prince and Princess were received by the Duchess of Brabant and the Count of Flanders, by the English and Prussian Ministers, and other members of the diplomatic corps. Soon after their arrival they visited the King of the Belgians at Laeken. On their return to the palace at Brussels, a grand banquet took place, at which the members of the Belgian Royal family, the great officers of the crown, the ministers, and the diplomatic corps were present. Their Royal Highnesses left Brussels on Monday morning for Darmstadt.

ORDER OF THE GARTER.—The Queen has signified her intention to bestow upon Earl Grey the Garter vacant by the death of Earl Canning.

PARLIAMENTARY MOVEMENTS.—Mr. George Joachim Göschen, one of the directors of the Bank of England, and a partner in the firm of Goschen and Frühling, of Austin Friars, has been selected by the Liberal Registration Society as their candidate for the vacant seat in the representation of the City of London, and it is expected that he will be returned without opposition. There is a vacancy at Kinsale caused by the resignation of Sir John Arnott.

CONVOCATION.—Both Houses of Convocation met on Friday. In the Upper House the sitting was occupied with a discussion on the proposed bishopric of Cornwall, and of the memorial from past and present churchwardens in favour of the united action of the clergy and laity. In the Lower House a message was received from the Upper House, referring to the debate of the previous day on the union of the provinces of Canterbury and York for synodical purposes, and directing the Lower House to submit the question at once to the committee of privileges, and to acquaint the House with the results. Archdeacon Hale, as chairman of the committee of privileges, protested against this direct attempt on the part of the bishops to invade the privileges of the Lower House. After a warm discussion, in which several members took part, it was resolved to represent to the Upper House that under existing circumstances it would be very inconvenient to press the committee of privileges for an immediate report upon the subject referred to, and to express a hope that an early session might be appointed for receiving the report. Archdeacon Hale then brought forward a resolution of confidence in the archbishop, bishops, and archdeacons, in the matter of the proposed Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Bill. Archdeacon Denison seconded the motion. The Rev. H. A. Woodgate moved as an amendment that a dilapidation committee be appointed to consider the bill of the Bishop of Lincoln, the suggestions of Archdeacon Hale, any other suggestions which may be brought in a distinct shape before them, and the representation to the Upper House founded on the report of the committee of 1860. After some discussion the amendment was carried. A message was received from the Upper House in answer to the message from the Lower House, praying for further deliberation in the matter of the English Services in Wales Bill before it passed into law, stating that that House had no constitutional means of delaying the Bill, as prayed for, or of ascertaining the wishes of the Welsh clergy. The Upper House granted Dr. Briscoe's committee on the best means of promoting the study of Church music. The committee was nominated at once, as were also Mr. Woodgate's Dilapidations Bill Committee, and Mr. Oxenden's Training for Holy Orders Committee. After the minutes had been read and reduced into "Acts," the Convocation was prorogued to July 1.

THE VOLUNTEERS.—A sham fight took place on Monday at Southend, in which the Volunteers were opposed to the blue jackets and Marines of the Royal Navy. The Volunteers engaged were a battery of six guns of the West Essex Yeomanry Artillery, the 3d and 5th Essex Rifles; 3d, 7th, and 10th Tower Hamlets; 3d Essex Battalion, from Romford, Ilford, Brentwood, Rochford, Ongar, and Woodbridge; 38th Middlesex, and 22d Essex. The gun-boats engaged were the Bullfrog, Sepoy, Speedier, Louisa, and Erne, each armed with one 110-pounder Armstrong, and one 32-pounder old pattern. The Marines, 350 in number, were under the command of Captain Butcher; and the gun-boats and flat boats under the command of Captain Luard, of her Majesty's ship Formidable. After a sharp fire of artillery had been kept up for some time with vigour on both sides, the attacking force, having either made a breach in the supposed fortifications or dismounted some of the guns of the imaginary forts, commenced landing. Some boats put off, each carrying their complement of Royal Marines; and as the blue jackets gallantly pulled towards the shore, the fire of the defenders redoubled in its intensity. Still, however, the boats pressed forward, protected by the fire of the gun-boats. As they neared the shore the marines kept up a smart fire of musketry, which was responded to by the advanced corps of volunteers on shore. Amid all this fire and smoke the boats were at length beached, and the marines effected a landing in the face of the opposition to which they were exposed. The sight of the marines swarming from the landing-boats was very striking, and no less effective was the regular order in which they left the decks of the gun-boats to proceed to the attack. As soon as they had landed they formed in companies on the beach, threw out their skirmishing parties, and cautiously advanced up the rising ground to take possession of the cliffs, the defence of which was entrusted to the volunteers, about a thousand strong. The first position occupied by the defending force was in front of the Cliff Terrace Parade. Subsequently, when the enemy had effected a landing on their right, they changed position and formed to meet the advancing foe. The artillery from some commanding heights raked the enemy as they advanced up the hill, and heavy and continued file firing, with occasional well delivered volleys, kept up the fight for some time. All, however, was in vain; the red coats of the marines appeared triumphant on the cliff, and rendered necessary several movements for the purpose of protecting the vanquished defenders, and enabling them to change their front so as to meet the enemy in new positions. All, however, was vain; the regulars still advanced, and after some file and volley firing the order to retire was given, and the Volunteers left the field after the usual marching past. Vice Admiral Sir Hope Johnstone, Colonel M'Murdo, and several Russian officers of distinction, were on the ground; and Colonel M'Murdo, who was in command, addressed the Volunteers and congratulated them on their efficiency and soldier-like conduct. The marines were then formed up in companies and marched along the pier, where they were taken on board the landing boats and rowed to the respective gun-boats, which returned at once to Sheerness.—A volunteer field-day on a small scale was held on Monday afternoon at the Balham end of Streatham Common. Lord Truro had announced that he would take the command of any disengaged Volunteers anxious to go through field evolutions, but only the corps immediately commanded by his lordship were present, consisting of 100 Middlesex Artillery, 5 companies of the 4th Middlesex Rifles, and 25 of the 1st Middlesex Light Horse. At the conclusion of the day's proceedings the men were regaled with refreshments at Lord Truro's expense. The proceedings lasted about three hours, and were witnessed by but a small number of persons, no doubt owing to the unfavourable state of the weather.—Another field-day was held in Camden Park, Chiselhurst. It was originally intended to have had a review of several of the metropolitan corps at that spot, but in consequence of the illness of Lord Ranelagh, who was to have undertaken the command, the proposed review was postponed, and only one regiment, the 29th Middlesex, made their appearance on the ground. This regiment, formerly known as Lord Enfield's, but which is now commanded by Colonel Whitehead, on arriving at Camden Park, were liberally supplied with refreshments, at the charge of the officers. They then marched past, and went through the usual manœuvres of a field-day. In spite of the small numbers of the Volunteers present, and the piercing north-easterly wind, a great number of persons assembled to witness the proceedings, which were not over until dusk.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Moniteur contains a letter from M. de Persigny, Minister of the Interior, to the Préfet of the Seine, authorising him to contradict in the most energetic manner the rumour that the Government, hesitating to oppose the candidature of M. Thiers for the second arrondissement of Paris, would withdraw the Government candidate, M. Devinck. The Minister proceeds to say that, inasmuch as M. Thiers comes forward as the declared champion of the coalition of the avowed enemies of the Emperor and of the Empire, he stands henceforward the representative of the régime that France has condemned, and which the Government is bound openly to combat. Since M. Thiers and his party have been deprived of power, France has been aggrandised, and her prosperity and glory increased, and as she now enjoys universal suffrage she will not oppose a Government which has rescued the country from the abyss into which it had been allowed to fall. The Constitutionnel also contains an article signed by its chief editor, M. Paulin Limayrac, upon the intrigues of men belonging to the old parties. The writer says:—

"An end is about to be put to equivocation. Up to the present time former parties have undermined the power of the Government by underhand intrigues, attacking the Administration on the strength of former relations, and violating the principles of government. The tendency of popular government is vigorous, full of sap and energy, of love for the masses, and sympathy for the popular classes, who, though the first to hail it, have often been perverted by men of a different spirit, who have insinuated themselves into many positions under false pretences of devotion, corrupting the best systems by introducing the poison of ancient influences. It was a source of surprise that a known enemy of the Government should exercise so much influence on the Administration. Thank God that this is about to cease; false friends, false devotion, and false services will be unmasked and exposed as the declared enemies of the Government. The part which the Government has to fulfil will be freed from all the obstacles which have hitherto impeded its progress. The genius of the Empire will be strengthened by a stop being put to the spirit of intrigue."

M. Berryer, who has come forward as the Opposition candidate for Marseilles, and who was on the point of going down to canvass the constituency, has, in order to prevent public manifestations of a compromising character, renounced his intended journey. The elections take place to-morrow and on Monday. The opposition have put forth their strength on this occasion, and the number of opposition candidates throughout France surpasses the expectations of all parties. It is said that there are little more than fifty districts in which the Government Candidates will not be opposed.

SPAIN.—The rumours of a Ministerial crisis are unfounded. Señor Enriquez has been appointed Under-Secretary to the Ministry of Marine. The Duke of Montpensier will shortly leave for London. It is asserted that Señor Facundo Goni will proceed to Mexico as Spanish Plenipotentiary after the French troops shall have entered that city. Twenty-one Prefects have been replaced. At a dinner given at the house of Señor Madoz, to 200 members of the Progresista party, the conduct of General Prim in withdrawing the Spanish troops from Mexico was generally approved.

PORTUGAL.—The feeling in the north of Portugal is very inimical to the Government. In Foscoa tumults have occurred. At Braga, on the occasion of the Pope's anniversary, a large number of people paraded the streets with a band of music. Seditious shouts were raised, and it was found necessary to call out the guard to suppress the tumult. The Cortes are discussing the Budget. The Minister of Finance has announced some important alterations in the duties, which are in many instances exorbitantly high.

DENMARK.—The Fädrelandet of yesterday says that the question of the acceptance of the Greek throne, which in Tuesday's sitting of the Council of Ministers still encountered difficulties upon the part of Prince Christian, was decided on Wednesday. Prince William accepts the crown of Greece for himself and his successors. Prince Czartoryski was received on Thursday by the King, and dined with his Majesty.

PRUSSIA.—At the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies on Friday, the draught of the address was completed and modified, allusion being made to the Royal Message of the previous day. It proposed that the Chamber should decline to give the declaration required by the Ministers, should declare them responsible for the frustration of the objects of the session, and requested the King to put an end to the continuance of a situation which contained serious dangers for the monarchy and the State. The address was approved by 239 to 61 votes. At the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies, on Wednesday, the reply of the King to the Address of the Chamber was read by the President. The reply was not countersigned by the Ministers. The answer of the King states that His Majesty upholds the views of the last Royal Message, and continues:—

"The position of the country is known to the King. The Chamber by its Address has cut away all hope of community of action. The attitude of the House in foreign questions has grieved the King deeply. Prussia is not more isolated owing to her foreign policy than other Powers. Some members of the House have threatened to refuse the supplies in the contingency of a war; but the King will seriously oppose such unjustifiable endeavours to enlarge the constitutional rights of the Chamber. The King will maintain the power of the Crown undiminished, and will not allow the foundation upon which it rests to be removed."

The Message concludes as follows:—

"The Ministers possess my confidence, and their actions have my assent."

After reading this Message the Minister of the Interior, Count Eulenburg, gave notice that the Parliamentary Session would be closed in the afternoon. Accordingly at 2 o'clock the closing of the Chambers took place in the White Saloon of the Royal Castle, when Count von Bismarck read a speech from the Throne, of which the following is a summary:—

"By its address to the King upon the 29th of January the Chamber of Deputies has placed itself in direct opposition to the Government, and, notwithstanding the answer of the King, has remained in a position adverse to an understanding. By its debates upon foreign politics the Chamber has endeavoured to paralyse the influence of the Government, and has thereby increased the excitement prevalent in the provinces bordering upon Poland. It has accepted unfounded statements of the opponents of Prussia, and aroused apprehensions of external dangers and entanglement in war, for which the existing relations to foreign Powers give no well-founded cause. In the recent Address the Chamber, moreover, has altogether refused its co-operation with the Government. This renders the close of its deliberations immediately necessary. The Government reserves to itself the power of determining the manner in which the suspended financial measures shall be brought to a conclusion, and hopes to come to a future understanding with the representatives of the country."

ITALY.—The new Session of the Italian Parliament was opened on Monday by the King in person. The following speech was delivered by his Majesty on the occasion:—

"Gentlemen Senators—Gentlemen Deputies,—In opening the new Session as King of Italy I have to thank you for what you have done during a period of upwards of two years. You have secured the rights of the nation to its complete unity, and I shall know how to maintain them in their integrity. You first commenced your Parliamentary labours at the time when Providence had taken from us the illustrious man who so powerfully assisted me in the difficult enterprise of our regeneration. All Italy shared the sorrow which I felt for his loss. Most of the foreign Powers have recognised the new Kingdom. Our voice will make itself heard among theirs for the triumph of justice, and for the defence of the principles of liberty and nationality. The marriage of my daughter with the King of Portugal, while consecrating a useful alliance between two free States, has proved to me, as ever, that the joys of my family are also those of the nation. Treaties of commerce have been concluded with France, Belgium, Sweden, and Turkey, and others are about to be negotiated with England and Holland. Thus, by community of interests between the peoples, friendly relations grow up between the Governments. Within two years from the campaign of the glorious sub-Alpine army the soldiers of our new provinces have been organised, and we are now proud of an Italian army, brilliant alike by its valour and solid in its discipline. Our navy, rich with so many great elements, and to the development of which you have devoted so much solicitude, will equal in progress the renown the army has attained. My most ardent desire is that the nation may be able to repose with security upon the force of its own arms, and that Europe should recognise that fact. Liberty is producing its natural results of order and prosperity in all directions. If the public safety requires efficacious measures in some provinces, my Government will not fail in this supreme duty. The National Guards, who have already deserved so well of the country, will contribute to this object by their zeal. With the same view France is ready to associate herself with us in the adoption of military arrangements whenever she perceives the opportunity. Public works are carried on with activity in all the provinces of the kingdom. The Tronto has already been passed by the locomotive, and all parts of Italy, already united by feeling, will be still more bound together by facility of communication. Your most urgent task is to consolidate the laws of the kingdom, at the same time favouring the development of all local forces. Above all, I recommend to the solicitude of Parliament some arrangements relative to the reorganisation of the finances. The capitals of Europe have responded to our appeal with confidence in the new order of things. It is for us a debt of honour to reply to this confidence by our promptitude to impose upon ourselves the necessary sacrifices. Gentlemen Senators—Gentlemen Deputies,—To consolidate liberty with the Constitution for its base, and by liberty to win the complete independence and unity of the country—such is the end to which we have consecrated our life. To attain it, concord, wisdom, and energy are equally necessary. Italy has shown that she possesses these qualities in the highest degree. By persevering in the same path, no human force will be able to destroy the edifice we have raised, and it is with entire security and faith that I anticipate the hour of the accomplishment of the destinies of Italy."

The preliminary proceedings of the Chamber have been favourable to the Ministry. M. Cassinis, the Ministerial candidate, was elected President of the Chamber of Deputies on Tuesday by 166 votes out of 261. Baron Poerio was elected Vice-President by an imposing majority. The two other Ministerial candidates, M. Cantelli and M. Farina, were elected Vice-Presidents. The Pope on Friday received Count Aquila in a public audience.

RUSSIA.—The Journal de St. Pétersbourg of Sunday publishes a despatch from the Government of Holland, dated April 28, and a despatch from the Danish Government, dated the 8th inst., both upon the Polish question, addressed to the Emperor of Russia, with the replies of Prince Gortschakoff to these communications. The Dutch despatch takes the same ground as the French Note, and appeals to the benevolence of the Emperor. The reply abstains from discussing the practical utility of the step taken by the Government of Holland, regarding in the Note simply the good intention by which it is inspired. The Danish Note maintains that States of the second class might incur dangers in consequence of the general complication, and expresses an ardent desire that the Poles would lay down their arms. The reply thanks the Government of Denmark for its communication, and assures it that the dangers apprehended will not arise from Russia. A despatch from the Portuguese Government upon the same question, drawn up in the spirit of the English Note, not having been communicated to the Journal de St. Petersbourg, remains unpublished. The reply of Prince Gortschakoff touches upon the encouragement given to the insurrection by foreigners, and observes that the Emperor has no necessity to receive suggestions otherwise than from his own heart and the sentiments of duty.

POLAND.—The official Dziennik of Saturday publishes an order of the Russian Government relative to the organisation of the police of Poland. It also publishes an official decree, addressed to the Civil Governor of Poland, which says:—

"An insurrection, which has been partially suppressed, having broken out in Poland, and certain functionaries having aided the disturbers of public order, such functionaries are to be dismissed and replaced by persons enjoying the confidence of the Government."

Several domiciliary visits have taken place in Warsaw, which are believed to be the forerunners of a state of siege. Count Alexander Branicki has been banished to Saratow. In consequence of orders of the National Government the documents relating to the trial of Dzialynski have been abstracted by the national police. A decree of the National Government, dated the 10th inst., has been published, ordering the organisation of a general rising, to take place on Monday the 1st of June. Levies are directed to be made for the purpose in Poland, Lithuania, and Russia. Langiewicz was designated as the leader of the movement, and he endeavoured to escape in order to accept the post. Four bodies of insurgents are under arms in Eastern Podolia: but in several districts the peasants have declared themselves willing to fight against them. In Little Russia and in Western Russia 84 districts are in a state of insurrection. A detachment of insurgents has made its appearance on the coast of the Baltic, near Polonga. Russian troops have been ordered to proceed thither by forced marches to Kamniecpodolsk, which is in a state of insurrection. Orsza, on the Dnieper, in the Government of Mohilew, has been occupied by the insurgents. In Samogitia the insurgents have gained a victory at Birzé. On the 25th inst. the band of insurgents under Oxinski gained an important victory over the Russians near Koniecpol, on the Pilcia, in the Government of Kalisch. Oxinski was attacked by six companies of Russian troops, 150 of whom were killed and the remainder put to flight. A detachment of insurgent cavalry has occupied Modrzejow and Dombrowa, and seized the treasuries. An engagement also took place on the 23d between Turck and Uniejow, in which the Russians were defeated. The insurgents have gained a victory at Kalisz, in the palatinate of Lask. The Russians suffered considerable loss. In the government of Mohilew the insurgents have occupied Gorki. The insurgent bands in Volhynia have been dispersed by the military and peasantry. Czechowsk's corps has been defeated by the Russians. Beomwski and three priests were taken prisoners by the Russians, who also captured the insurgent camp, with the arms, horses, and forage. In the Government of Plock a band, commanded by Fritsche, and formerly by Masthowski, has been defeated between Wyszkow and Ostrowo, with the loss of several hundreds of men, and all their baggage, arms, and correspondence. The Czas of Friday, in a leading article, dwells upon the moral bearing upon the Polish cause exercised by the meetings held in England, and says:—

"The resolutions of these meetings to recognise the independence of Poland prove the noble sentiments and the political spirit of the English nation."

GREECE.—The Europe states as official that the first protocol declaring the Greek throne vacant was signed at London on the 22d inst. The second protocol, expressing the adhesion of the protecting Powers to the election of the Danish Prince to the Greek throne by the Greek National Assembly, and the annexation of the Ionian Islands, is to be signed this week.

ALBANIA.—The apprehensions entertained at Durazzo of the landing of a detachment of Italian volunteers have been increased by the appearance of an Italian squadron off the Albanian coast.

THE PRINCIPALITIES.—General Türr and two aides-de-camp have arrived at Bucharest to meet Prince Couza on his return from a tour of inspection through Moldavia.

TURKEY.—The reply of the Russian Government to the Note of the Porte on the Polish question is of a most conciliatory character. It is understood that the new Budget will be very satisfactory, and will be published shortly, and that among other beneficial financial reforms, it will maintain the resolution of the Grand Vizier to raise the tax on tobacco and several other taxes. It is expected that Fuad Pasha will shortly be appointed Grand Vizier. The Sultan has feasted the troops stationed in the capital in celebration of his safe return. An envoy from the Viceroy of Egypt is expected at Constantinople to confer with the Government upon the Suez Canal question.

EGYPT.—Prince Napoleon has presented his Highness Ismail Pasha, the Viceroy of Egypt, with the Grand Cordon of the Legion of Honour. The Prince has paid several visits to the Suez Canal works. A fire has broken out at the Benha railway terminus, in which 300 persons perished. The Viceroy has given money and other assistance to the sufferers by the conflagration, and ordered the houses burnt down to be rebuilt at his own expense.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.—The Cape Parliament met on the 16th of April. The state of the finances was the principal topic of the governor's speech. He proposed additional taxation to the amount of 150,000*l.* per annum, to be raised by stamp and succession duties, increased transfer and auction dues and land tax. The policy of the union of the colonies in South Africa is strongly urged by the Government, but they do not propose taking any measures on the subject during the present session. The Government was paying great attention to the development of the railway system, and the introduction of several bills for the construction of lines under its superintendence was announced. The relations with the native tribes remained peaceable. Bishop Tozer and party were to embark for Zambezi on the 20th April in the Orestes, which would convey to Dr. Livingstone the intelligence of the recall of his expedition.

INDIA.—Sir Charles Trevelyan's Indian Budget has been published, and shows a surplus for the year 1862-63 of 937,000*l.*, and for 1863-64 of 815,000*l.* The following are its principal features:—The duty on iron is reduced to 1 per cent., that on beer to three halfpenny ($3\frac{1}{2}$d.?) per gallon, and that on wine to 2*s.* per gallon. One per cent. is taken off the income-tax. The sum of 5,000,000*l.* appears for public works, and 500,000*l.* for education. The salt manufacture is abandoned. The Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief were still in the Lower Himalaya. The holiday in celebration of the Prince of Wales's marriage was kept on the 20th ult. in a very loyal manner.

CHINA.—Everything is quiet at Pekin. From Tientsin we learn that Her Majesty's consul, Mr. Gibson, who was wounded in an affray with the Nyen-fei rebels, is out of danger. The rebels have been driven off from the vicinity of the settlement.

UNITED STATES.—General Lee, in the following general order, dated the 11th inst., announced to the Confederate army the death of General Stonewall Jackson:—

"With deep grief the Commanding-General announces to the army the death of Lieutenant-General Jackson, who expired upon the 9th, at 3.15 P.M. The daring skill and energy of this great and good soldier, by a decree of an All-wise Providence are now lost to us; but, while we mourn his death, we feel that his spirit lives, and will inspire the whole army with his indomitable courage and unshaken confidence in God as our hope and strength. Let his name be a watchword for his corps, who have followed him to victory on so many fields. Let officers and soldiers imitate his invincible determination to do everything in the defence of our beloved country."

It appears that General Jackson was accidentally shot in the arm and hand by his own men in one of the recent battles on the Rappahannock. It was found necessary to amputate his arm, and the effects of the operation, together with pneumonia, caused his death. General Lee, on hearing of his wound, addressed a letter to him dated Chancellorsville, in which he said:—

"I cannot express my regret at the occurrence. If I could have directed events I should have chosen, for the good of the country, to have been disabled in your stead. I congratulate you upon the victory, which is due to your skill and energy."

General Jackson's funeral took place at Richmond on the 12th, with great demonstrations of sorrow and respect. The Richmond Whig says that since the death of Washington no similar event has so profoundly and sorrowfully impressed the people of Virginia. The Richmond Examiner says: "We could have better spared a brigade or a division." The Richmond Inquirer reports that General Jackson's dying words were a request that General Ewell might be assigned the command of his corps. General Lee has issued a congratulatory address to the army on its recent victory at Chancellorsville. He compliments the officers and men upon their heroic conduct, and reminds them that they were more especially bound to return their grateful thanks to the Almighty as the only giver of victory. General Hooker had previously issued a general order to the Federal army, congratulating it on its late achievements, and stating "that in withdrawing from the south bank of the Rappahannock before delivering a general battle to its adversaries the army had given renewed evidence of its confidence in itself and its fidelity to the principles it represents."

"By fighting," he says, "at a disadvantage we would have been recreant to our trust, to ourselves, to our cause, and to our country. By the celerity and secresy of our movements, our advance and passage of the river were undisputed; and on our withdrawal not a rebel dared to follow us. The events of the last week may well cause the heart of every officer and soldier of the army to swell with pride. We have added new laurels to our former renown. We have made long marches, crossed rivers, surprised the enemy in his entrenchments, and whenever we have fought we have inflicted heavier blows than those we have received."

The New York World, in comparing the modest Order of General Lee with that of General Hooker, says that "it is the fate of many a brave and capable nation and army to be defeated; but to be untruthful, boastful, and false when occasion demands honesty, resignation, and a loyal hopefulness in adversity, will turn against us every civilised nation on earth. No honest and fair-minded man can read these two Orders without grief, pain, and shame. The incapables who are ruling and ruining us cannot save our honour." The Federal loss in the defeat at Fredericksburg is said to have been 6000 men out of 10,000, and that in the defeat at Chancellorsville was at least 18,000 in killed, wounded, and missing. 1200 wounded who were left on the southern side of the Rappahannock have been sent across by the Confederates. Some of the Federal wounded were burnt in the woods around Chancellorsville, the woods having been fired by the shells of both armies. General Hooker since his defeat has had long interviews with the President at Washington; nothing is positively known of the nature of their conferences. Many rumours are afloat of his supersedure or resignation. It is generally believed, however, that he will be retained in command, and conduct another advance. It is stated that some members of the Cabinet have urged the recall of General M'Clellan, but have been overruled by the opposition of the leading Republican and Abolitionist members of Congress. General Sickles has been closeted for two hours with the President, but neither the purport nor the result of the consultation is known. General Sigel has returned from Washington, having been refused a command by General Halleck. General Meagher has resigned the command of the Irish Brigade on the ground that the brigade no longer exists. The impression gains ground that General Lee intends to make an early offensive movement against Washington. Rumours are current that General Beauregard has arrived in Richmond with reinforcements. Important changes in the Federal Cabinet and among the army commanders are expected. It is said that differences of opinion between high officials as to the conduct of General Hooker and the affair of the Peterhoff prevail to such an extent as to interrupt the previous harmony of the Cabinet. The Federal debt is estimated at present at 984,000,000 dols., of which 400,000,000 dols. is in legal tender currency. The Northern papers have published detailed accounts of a cavalry raid made by General Stoneman in Virginia in the rear of General Lee, for the purpose of destroying the Fredericksburg and Richmond Railway, but it is now known that his performances were greatly exaggerated; the damage to the Virginia Railway was trifling, and the trains on the Railway were not interrupted longer than 24 hours. General Grant is endeavouring to cut the railroad between Jackson and Vicksburg. The report that he had fought any battles is untrue. Rumours of other battles at Vicksburg, Suffolk, and other places are equally doubtful. Mr. Vallandigham has been convicted of the charges preferred against him by a court-martial, and sentenced to transportation for two years to Dry Tortugas, a penal settlement on the coast of Florida. General Burnside approved the sentence. Mr. Vallandigham appealed to the Circuit Court at Cincinnati for a writ of habeas corpus. General Burnside sent a protest to the Court, saying it was his duty to stop licence and intemperate discussions, which tended to weaken the authority of the Government and the army. Mr. Vallandigham's counsel declared this protest to be a political speech from a gentleman carrying a sword and wearing epaulettes. He denied the authority of a military commission, and declared it to be the duty of the Court to grant the writ. The Court, however, refused to issue the writ. It is believed that the President will commute the sentence to banishment to the Confederate States. The leading Republican journals unite with the Democratic organs in condemning General Burnside's action in this case. The Mozart Hall Democracy at New York has passed resolutions demanding the discontinuance of the war and denouncing Mr. Vallandigham's arrest. The resolutions also state that the conduct of foreign affairs by the Administration had placed the country in a position where even "England dares to bully her." A call has also been issued by the Fernando Wood adherents of the Mozart Democracy for a peace meeting to be held at New York in June, on the ground that the efforts of the Administration to restore union by force of arms have failed. All the Loyal leagues in New York State were to meet at Utica on the 27th inst., to urge the vigorous prosecution of the war. The editor of a Democratic paper published at Plymouth, Indiana, was arrested on the night of the 5th by a detachment of 12 soldiers, under the command of a lieutenant, by order of General Haskall. The paper was ordered to be suppressed. The offences of which the editor is accused are his Copperhead politics and disrespect of General Haskall, whom he had publicly stigmatised as a "donkey." A captain of a New York regiment has been dismissed the Federal service for violating the sovereignty of a friendly State in arresting a deserter and bringing him away from within the boundaries of Canada. The deserter has also been discharged from the Federal service. It is reported that the sailing line-of-battle ships of the Federal navy are to be examined, and those which are found sound converted into steamers. The trial of the Peterhoff has been postponed. The Prize Court has decided to receive Mr. Redgate's testimony. The British vessels Cherokee, Wanderer, and Clara, have been captured by the Federal cruisers. The prize steamer Nicholas has been condemned.

CANADA.—The Canadian Parliament has been dissolved, and a general election is to take place immediately.

WEST INDIES.—Accounts from St. Thomas state that great excitement has been caused among the Danish inhabitants by the conduct of the Federal Admiral Wilkes, who has made that harbour the head-quarters of his squadron, consisting of seven vessels of war, which keep their steam always up, in readiness to overhaul any vessel leaving the port. It was expected that the Danish Government would energetically remonstrate with the Government of Washington against this aggression.

MEXICO.—Advices by the Tasmanian state that the French have sustained two serious repulses before Puebla, that they have only taken two insignificant forts, and have lost 3000 men in killed and wounded. They also state that General Comonfort is in the rear of the French with, it is said, 8000 cavalry, and nothing can be sent to the French army from Vera Cruz except under a strong escort. Another account says that no fight had taken place before Puebla to the 20th April, and that the French had not only sustained no repulse, but on the contrary, on the 19th, had obtained success at the Carmen Convent, routing the Mexicans with great loss at the point of the bayonet. The works of the siege had greatly advanced, and the fall of the city was expected.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY.—The House reassembled to-day after the Whitsun recess. The Churchward Contract.—On the report of the Committee of Supply, Mr. WALPOLE called attention to what he considered to be an unusual and novel form of proceeding adopted by the Committee of Supply on the 18th, in the vote for the packet service, which, he contended, was not consonant with the proper functions of a Committee of Supply; these functions being limited to the consideration of the amount of a grant proposed by a Minister of the Crown, or to a proposal to reduce the amount. Although a matter of form, he insisted that this alteration of the functions of a Committee of Supply was most inconvenient; that it would change the relations of the two Houses of Parliament to each other and to the Crown, and lead to other consequences, which he pointed out. He referred to circumstances stated in a petition from Mr. Churchward in relation to his contract, which had a material bearing upon the vote, and upon the form in which it had been adopted by the Committee, and which vote, he said, the Government ought to withdraw at once. In conclusion he moved the omission of certain words in the resolution, the effect of which omission would be substantially to reject it.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he was prepared to meet Mr. Walpole upon the points both of form and of justice. The form of a vote, he contended, could not be separated from the question of its policy. He disputed the doctrine laid down by Mr. Walpole as to the functions of a Committee of Supply, and said that instead of being a doctrine of political wisdom it was one of political superstition. Although the form of the vote might not be common, the question was not whether the form was new, but whether the vote was good; whether it was justified and required by the circumstances. After citing an old precedent of 1767, which, he thought, lent an authority to the form of the vote, he entered into the merits of the question as to the contract and its incidents, and showed the difficulties which would have beset any other course of proceeding on the part of the Government, insisting that it was impossible to have proceeded in any other manner so as to ascertain the mind of the House of Commons, and to give effect to its declared opinion.—Lord J. MANNERS, after remarking that the resolution of the Committee of Supply was wholly unprecedented, referred to parts of the evidence taken by the Select Committee on the subject of the charge against Mr. Churchward, which he denounced as monstrous and absurd, and he insisted upon the want of connexion between the premiss and the conclusion in the report of the Committee as to this charge. In the event of Captain Carnegie's evidence being infallible, was a contract to be repudiated, and Mr. Churchward to be punished for an erroneous conclusion? If it was fallible the case broke down.—Mr. LINDSAY thought that, while the Government had rightly exonerated Lord Derby's Ministry from corrupt motives in this matter, there was an inconsistency in holding Mr. Churchward to be corrupt. He was disposed to give his vote for the weaker party in favour of Mr. Walpole's motion. Lord R. CECIL warned the House against encouraging the Government in repudiating contracts which had been solemnly entered into, because it disapproved the conduct of an individual.—Sir F. KELLY argued that, both upon moral and legal grounds, the House would not be justified in putting an end to the contract of Mr. Churchward, of whose character he spoke in the highest terms. On a division Mr. WALPOLE's motion was negatived by 205 to 191. The report was then agreed to. Tax on Excursion Trains.—The House having resolved itself into a Committee of Ways and Means, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved a resolution that the present exemption from duty, in respect of the conveyance of passengers by cheap trains, shall not extend to any railway train which shall not be a train running on at least six days of the week, or else a train running to or from a market town on a market day, and approved of by the Board of Trade as a cheap train, for the conveyance of passengers to or from market.—Mr. THOMPSON opposed any additional tax upon railway companies at the present time, urging the grievances to which they were liable, and the great advantages which excursion trains conferred upon the community.—Sir F. CROSSLEY also opposed it, on the ground of the benefit which the working classes derived from excursion trains. After some further discussion, the resolution was agreed to. On the order for the third reading of the Land Drainage (Provisional Orders) Bill, Mr. PEASE moved that the Bill be recommitted to a Select Committee, to be appointed by the Committee of Selection in the same manner as in the case of a private Bill.—Mr. BRUCE, on the part of the Government, offered no opposition to the motion, with an alteration limiting the terms of reference; to which Mr. PEASE assented.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE moved that the Bill be recommitted to a Committee of the whole House. On a division, this amendment was negatived by 56 to 18. The original motion was agreed to. The House then went into Committee upon the Drainage and Improvement of Land (Ireland) Bill, the clauses of which were agreed to, with a few amendments. On the motion for resuming the adjourned debate on Mr. DILLWYN's motion on the subject of Religious Endowments in Ireland, THE O'DONOGHUE moved the further adjournment to the 5th of June, to give time to the Irish Members to be in their places.—After some discussion the motion was agreed to. The District Parochial Churches (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee. The Execution of Decrees Bill was read a second time. The Admiralty Court (Ireland) Bill was committed pro formâ.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL promised, if the Bill were withdrawn, that the matter should be taken up by the Government, and that a measure should be introduced by them next Session.—Lord C. PAGET obtained leave to bring in a Bill to establish officers of the Royal Naval Reserve.

FRIDAY.—Recognition of the Confederate States.—Mr. ROEBUCK gave notice that on an early day he intended to move an address to the Crown, praying that negociations might be entered into with the European Powers, for the recognition of the independence of the Confederate States.—Lord R. MONTAGU said he intended to move an amendment to the motion. The Ballot.—Mr. H. BERKELEY gave notice that he intended on the 16th June to move for leave to bring in a Bill providing that votes at parliamentary elections should be taken by ballot. Condition of Turkey.—Mr. GREGORY called attention to the condition of the Turkish empire and its dependencies, and moved for papers on the subject. [Left sitting.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

INTERNATIONAL DOG SHOW.—The first great international show of sporting and other dogs was opened on Monday at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, and has remained open during the week. The number exhibited is about 2400, who are accommodated upon platforms, the entire length of which exceeds two and a half miles. The show is separated into two divisions, the first comprising "Dogs used in field sports," in 40 classes, to which the entire area of the basement is devoted; and the second, "Dogs not used in field sports," 26 classes, to which the galleries are appropriated. The prizes exceed 1000*l.* in money. Among the sporting dogs are the Duke of Beaufort's foxhounds, recently returned from wolf hunting in France; Mr. Barnett's Cambridgeshire pack, and several other kennels of foxhounds and harriers, including three couples of the Prince of Wales's harriers, bred by the Prince Consort. The show of beagles was very limited, as was also that of the otter hounds. There was a magnificent muster of bloodhounds, the prices of which ranged as high as 262*l.* The Earl of Stamford and Warrington, Mr. Bass, M.P., Mrs. Brassey, and Mr. Beresford Hope, exhibited several fine deerhounds, valued at 1000*l.* each. The Duchess of Manchester exhibited two foreign hounds valued at 1000*l.* each. There was an endless display of greyhounds, pointers, and setters, the different classes in which were admitted to be excellent. The Irish setters were well represented, and bid fair to compete successfully with some of the English breed. The remaining classes in the sporting department consisted of retrievers and spaniels, some of which were valued by the owners at almost fabulous sums. The Clumber spaniels exhibited by the Duke of Newcastle were greatly admired, and are stout, strong-legged animals, with silky white and tan coats, and with good-natured faces. Earl Spencer and Earl Berners also contributed to this class, some of their dogs being valued at 1000*l.* each. Among the other noticeable animals on the ground floor were the Duchess of Manchester's Russian wolf dog; several American slave-hunting hounds, powerful creatures with large and finely-shaped heads; a North American boarhound; and a Trebizond wolf dog. Great, however, as are the attractions of the sporting department, the great mass of visitors are most amused by the collection in the galleries of dogs not used in field sports. There are first the sheep dogs, both Scotch and English, which make a very good though limited show. Sir James Fergusson contributes one called "Sheepy," valued at 500*l.* Then come the mastiffs, a numerous and excellent show; and those popular breeds, the St. Bernards and Newfoundlands, which were much admired. The bull dogs over and under 20 lbs. in weight form the next classes. Next are bull terriers over and under 10 lbs., white smooth-haired terriers, black and tan terriers over 7 lbs. and other kinds of the same species, whose size and weight are considered to be material ingredients in the estimate of their value. There are Skye and other Scotch terriers in abundance, and of every shape and size, and a few specimens of the quaint dogs dubbed Dandy Dinmonts. The Italian greyhounds, the King Charles spaniels, the Blenheim spaniels, and the English toy terriers appear in great force, and exhibit all that perfection and delicacy of breeding of which those races are susceptible. The care with which the comfort of some of these dogs is secured seems almost ridiculous. Many recline on soft velvet and satin cushions, or are protected by rich and dainty coverlets, while others are enclosed in richly-gilt glass cases, and from their manner impress the spectator with a belief that they are fully conscious of their importance. The prices of these dogs run up to 500*l.* and 1000*l.*, and in one instance to 1500*l.*, and it may actually be said that some of them are worth their weight in gold. Mrs. William De la Rue exhibits two beautiful black and tan terriers, said to be the smallest in the show, each being able to occupy a pint pot as a dog-house with room to spare. There is an extraordinary-looking King Charles spaniel, named Jumbo, the value of which the owner fixes at 100*l.* The Italian greyhound classes are exceedingly beautiful, and there is one little fellow, answering to the name of Silvey, for which 100 guineas is also demanded. The shows of mastiffs and watch-dogs are truly splendid; but the most noble creature in the whole exhibition is a Pyrenean wolf dog, exhibited by Mr. S. R. Block, of Barnet. A class for well-shaped dogs under 3 lb. furnishes abundant amusement for the curious; and the pugs, which scarcely exceed a dozen, give a fair idea of a breed of animals rarely now seen in the households of the wealthy, where once they were the chief favourites. Besides these, the galleries contain Pomeranian dogs; poodle and Japanese dogs, Esquimaux dogs; Dalmatian, Maltese, Manilla and Sic lian dogs; Greek terriers, Indian, Australian, Chinese, and Brazilian, &c., in fact most of the varieties known to exist. The Prince and Princess of Wales visited the show on Monday, and examined the collection with great interest, as well as the fish-hatching apparatus of Mr. Frank Buckland, who explained the whole process to their royal highnesses. After the departure of the Prince and Princess the number of visitors at 5s. per head amounted to 5000. On Tuesday, which may be said to have been the first public show day, the price of admission being 2s. 6d., the carriages of the visitors in the early part of the day formed a continuous line of nearly two miles, and the number of persons who passed through the Hall amounted to nearly 8000. On Wednesday, which was the first shilling day, the line of carriages at one time blocked the Pentonville Road from King's Cross upwards; and the number of visitors is said to have exceeded 20,000. On Thursday the numbers exceeded 30,000. To-day after 1 o'clock the price of admission will be reduced to 6d., which will enable many thousands of persons to avail themselves of the Saturday half holiday to visit the show.

The New City Street and the Ludgate Hill Viaduct.—The Court of Common Council held a meeting on Thursday, at which the committee appointed to watch over measures in Parliament affecting the privileges of the City presented a report, stating that the Government persisted in entrusting the formation of the new street in the City to the Metropolitan Board of Works, and recommending that the corporation should persist in their opposition to the formation of the street being taken out of their hands. Several members recommended that all further opposition be abandoned, and an amendment was moved to that effect, but on a division the original motion was carried by a narrow majority. The Improvement Committee also presented a report on the proposed railway viaduct across Ludgate-hill, stating that they had sought the advice of eminent engineers and surveyors, as to the practicability of the connexion between the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway and the Metropolitan Railway, being made by means of a tunnel. At a consultation held on the subject, at which were present Mr. Harrison, C.E., Mr. Bidder, C.E., Mr. Penrose, surveyor to St. Paul's Cathedral, and Mr. Heywood, the engineer of the City Commissioners of Sewers, those eminent authorities were unanimously of opinion that a perfectly practicable railway could be made from the bridge now constructing across the river to the Metropolitan station in Victoria Street, by a tunnel under Ludgate Hill. That such line would be cheaper in its construction than that which the company had authority to make, and that it would enable the main station to be on a level with Ferringdon Street, instead of being raised 18 or 20 feet above the ground. as the one at present proposed would be. The Chairman added that since the report had been prepared, Mr. Greenhill, the engineer, had submitted to him a plan which would combine in one bridge the two bridges about to be erected at Blackfriars, the railway bridge passing below the other, and forming a connexion with the Metropolitan Railway in a manner to obviate the necessity of the viaduct. It was then resolved to refer Mr. Greenhill's plan to the Improvement and Bridge House Estates Committee for consideration, with authority to confer with the several public bodies interested. The court also resolved to petition against the new bills of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, with a view to stop the viaduct across Ludgate Hill.

Threatened Enclosure of Tooting Common.—On Tuesday morning, Mr. Wetherall, one of the Assistant Enclosure Commissioners, opened an inquiry at Lower Tooting, on the subject of the proposed enclosure of Tooting Common. The investigation created great interest in the locality, as it was considered that the steps proposed to be taken by the lord of the manor, might be analogous to the threatened encroachment on Hampstead Heath, or in the still more recent instance of Wandsworth Common. The following professional gentlemen were present on behalf of their respective clients:—Mr. Kennedy, of Balham, for the Hon. S. Curzon, customary freeholder; Mr. Jessels, of the equity bar, for Mr. William James Thompson, lord of the manor; Mr. Bonner, for Mrs. Chapman, freeholder, claiming right of common; and Mr. Scott, of Lincoln's-Inn Fields, for Mr. Brand, a claimant to common rights. There were upwards of 200 gentlemen present. The Commissioner, in opening the proceedings, said that he would read through the questions, and take the answers before going into the evidence. On the 16th question, as to the right of the lord of the manor, Mr. Jessels produced the deed of conveyance and the court roll, and a long discussion ensued, which resulted in his refusing to allow an inspection of the deed, and it was not put in evidence, as the title of the lord as lord was not in dispute. On the question of the right to the soil, Mr. Williamson, surveyor of the roads, said that for years past he had taken gravel for the use of the parish without consulting the lord of the manor or paying him for it. After a lengthened discussion on the subject, the question of the rights of pasturage was proceeded with. Mr. Betts, butcher, carrying on business with his father at Tooting, Balham, and Streatham, gave evidence as to his possession of common rights since 1851 by turning out his cows and sheep, he being a landowner, and paying quit-rent to the lord of the manor. Mr. Samuel Martin, a farmer (who was admitted by the lord of the manor as possessing a right as tenant), also gave evidence to the same effect, as did several other witnesses who had been tenants, and exercised common rights for various periods. On this evidence Mr. Scott relied to show that the particulars furnished by the applicant for the enclosure were untrue, and, therefore, by the Act of Parliament, the jurisdiction of the Enclosure Commissioners was ousted. He also put in the resolutions of the parish vestry, in 1812 and 1815, to show that the lord of the manor in those days sought to encroach upon the common rights of the parishioners, but was obliged to pay them a considerable sum as satisfaction for a piece of the common he wanted. Mr. Jessels, for the lord of the manor, objected to such evidence, but left it to the assistant commissioner to deal with it as he thought fit. A lengthened discussion also ensued upon the other questions, but the 25th question disclosed the gravamen of the opposition. The question was—"What are the supposed advantages of the proposed enclosure in the increased productiveness of the land, the useful employment of labour, or otherwise?" Answer by the lord of the manor—"To render the land productive, by levelling the hillocks and filling in the swamps, and possibly for building purposes." The reading of this last clause created a very strong expression of opinion from the persons in the room. On the part of the lord of the manor, Mr. Jessels fully consented to any allotment that might be made for exercise and recreation, and also for the labouring poor, for the purposes of cultivation as gardens. He further said that Mr. Thompson did not desire to insist upon his extreme rights, but was willing to meet the parishioners in a friendly spirit, if a proposal was made of such a character as he could reasonably be asked to accept as lord of the manor. The several legal gentlemen then agreed to request an adjournment for a month that a proposal might be submitted, and after some deliberation the assistant commissioner assented, and the meeting was adjourned accordingly. On the previous evening a public meeting of the inhabitants of the district was held, Mr. Carpmael, Member of the Board of Works, in the chair, at which a general desire was expressed to co-operate with the Metropolitan Board of Works, and to subscribe for the purpose of securing to the public a right to the enjoyment of the common for ever, to any extent which might be considered necessary to effect the object. It was finally resolved that the proposed enclosure is inexpedient and objectionable, and should be opposed and resisted, and that a committee be appointed to protect and watch over the interests of the commoners and the public.

National Rifle Association.—The annual meeting of this Association was held a few days since at Willis's Rooms; his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge in the chair. Among those present were Lord Longford, Lord Wharncliffe, Lord West, Lord Hardinge, Earl Tankerville, Lord Talbot de Malahide, Lord Spencer, Earl Ducie, Lord Truro, the Hon. Mr. Lindsay, Sir T. F. Buxton, M.P., Hon. A, Kinnaird, M.P., Sir R. R. Hamilton, General Boileau, Sir John Burgoyne, Mr. Scourfield, M.P., Colonel North, M.P., &c. His Royal Highness, in opening the business of the meeting, stated that arrangements had been made for a meeting at Wimbledon on the 7th July, and for a review on the 18th July. Sixty new prizes will be offered for all comers, rank and file, using the government rifle. The winners of these sixty prizes will also be entitled to compete for a prize of 50*l.* value, to be given in honour of the Princess Alexandra. The House of Lords' prize amounts to 170*l.* and will be competed for by enrolled volunteers with any rifle of bonâ fide Government pattern carrying ·577 bore diameter. The entries for the Queen's prize already amount to 970. Tents will be erected as usual, and there will be two officers or four men in a tent. Already 40 officers and 100 men have sent in applications for tent accommodation; and members of the Association desiring to have tents of their own can do so on application. The general rules have been amended, and arrangements have been made to enable volunteers to compete with their own arms. Colonel Bigge moved that the rules, as amended, be adopted. Sir R. Hamilton seconded the motion. Captain Templar called attention to the desirability of handicapping the different rifles, and offering prizes to be contested for with the long Enfield, at 800 or 1000 yards. The Earl of Ducie said the Council had considered the question, and, acting on General Hay's opinion, did not propose to go beyond the 600 yards' range. General Boileau suggested that prizes should be offered to be competed for with the various kinds of rifles. Mr. M'Gregor thought it desirable that all should compete with rifles of the same make, and not that one man should use his rack rifle and another should compete with him with one of a different and superior make. At present many were excluded because they did not use the weapons to which they were accustomed. This was the case with the Inns of Court, who had the 5-groove rifle, and the artillery, who had the carbine. He moved a resolution to carry out his views, but it did not find a seconder. Colonel Lindsay said that the 5-groove rifles were excluded on account of the advantage they gave, and the competition was restricted to the rifles of the Government pattern as served out to the volunteers. In reply to Lord Truro, the Duke of Cambridge and the Hon. A. Kinnaird, M.P., stated that the Association was not entirely self-supporting. Colonel Coles moved that the 60 prizes for all comers should be restricted to long and short Enfields. Major Pipon seconded the resolution. Captain Templar suggested that the 1*l.* entrance money for the competition for the 60 prizes was too high, and again urged his views in favour of long ranges. Lord Truro expressed his entire disapproval of the long ranges being introduced. The amendment was negatived. Some other suggestions were then made as to offering a prize for shooting at unmeasured distances, when Lord Wharncliffe said the great difficulty they all felt, and which gave rise to differences of opinion, was occasioned through the Government serving out different kinds of rifles. He thought the council would do well if it endeavoured to induce the Secretary of State for War to issue only one kind of rifle to the volunteers. The amended rules were then adopted.

Manslaughter by a Wife.—An inquest was held a few days since on Mr. William Henry Doggett, an ironmonger carrying on business at 18, Shoreditch, aged 38. From the evidence it appeared that the wife of deceased was a Welshwoman, who entered the service of his father as a servant in 1852. After the death of the father she married deceased, who possessed property amounting to 8000*l.* or 10,000*l.*, and made a will leaving all of it to his wife. He became ill three months ago, and was badly treated by his wife. She used to swear at him, and say that if he was going to die he had better do so at once out of the way. She threw his medicines under the grate, and seldom gave him any nutriment, but liberally supplied him with brandy, wine, and beer. She used to strike him violently between the shoulders, and to kick his legs, which were dropsical, as she passed, making him cry out in agony. She used to say that she had got the will, and none of the family could get any of the property. When he died she should sell everything off and go to her own country, and they might find her there if they could. Mr. Roper, surgeon, said that the wife's treatment of deceased was most unfeeling. If he had got his medicines and proper nourishment he might have been alive now. He was kept in a state approaching imbecility from drink. In consequence of Mrs. Doggett threatening him with an action for assault, he discontinued his attendance. Mr. Mercer, another surgeon, discontinued his visits because Mrs. Doggett falsely charged him with stealing two of her rings. Deceased was completely under her control, and was so terrified that he used to tell the doctors that he regularly took his medicines, although the bottles were seen to be unopened. A man who had been in the employment of deceased, saw Mrs. Doggett throw a carving knife and other articles at deceased, and said she was always drunk. The jury, after a long deliberation, unanimously returned a verdict of "Manslaughter against Anne Doggett, for feloniously killing and slaying William Henry Doggett." Mrs. Doggett was then apprehended and conveyed to Newgate. The coroner said that he would take bail, herself in 500*l.* and two sureties for 250*l.* each.

Double Murder in Southwark.—On Monday morning a shocking tragedy was perpetrated in the parish of St. George the Martyr, Southwark. Mr. Thomas Lidbitter, aged 60, who has for many years carried on the business of a cabinet maker and licensed victuallers' fitter, at 28, Borough Road, murdered his wife as she lay in bed, and then attempted to murder his son. He had been ill from delirium tremens for some time, and was taking medicine from a chemist in the neighbourhood; and it appears that early on Monday morning he went over to the chemist and made such a statement as led to the police being sent for. On searching the house the wife was found quite dead, with her throat cut from ear to ear, in one room, and the son, who was bed-ridden, lying senseless in another, with his throat cut in so shocking a manner that he died on Tuesday in the hospital. He was unable to articulate, and consequently there will be no evidence of the circumstances under which the murderous attack was made on him and his mother. The murderer was taken into custody and at once admitted his guilt, stating that he did it with a razor, which was found smeared with blood in one of the rooms. He was taken before the magistrate and remanded to Horsemonger Lane Gaol to await the result of the inquest. On Wednesday at the inquest several witnesses spoke to the apparent unsoundness of the prisoner's mind. The coroner, in summing up, said that that was a question with which they had nothing to do, but must leave for another tribunal to determine, and the jury immediately returned a verdict of Wilful Murder against the prisoner.

The Public Health.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths in London in the week that ended on Saturday, May 23, were 1259, being less than in any previous week for more than six months. The average number in the corresponding weeks of the 10 years, 1853-62, corrected for increase of population, was 1216. The present return was therefore 43 above the average. There were 68 deaths in the week from small-pox, 94 from scarlatina, and 37 from measles. During the week the births of 961 boys and 927 girls, in all 1888 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1853-62 the average number was 1902.

Provincial.

Bedford.—The two men Craddock and Jordan, charged with causing the death of Mr. Frederick Budd, solicitor, by beating him with their fists, underwent their final examination at the prison before a full bench of magistrates on Friday. It was proved in evidence that when the prisoners knocked Mr. Budd down the first time, his wife assisted him up; but after he had gone a few yards further on his way home both men went up to him and renewed the attack, knocked him down a second time, and beat him with their fists when on the ground until he became insensible. The post mortem examination disclosed a fracture of the skull, and other injuries sufficient to cause death. Both men were committed for trial on the charge of Wilful Murder. At the coroner's inquest on the same afternoon, the jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against them.

Bridgewater.—Considerable sensation has been caused in Glastonbury by an attempt made by a party of the Princites to induce a lady to leave her husband's house and retire to the Agapemone at Charlinch, near this town. It appears that the lady, who was once an inmate of that establishment, would not have been an unwilling captive; but just as the scheme appeared ripe for execution, and a carriage was at hand to receive her, the discovery was made, and the Princites were compelled to beat a retreat, amidst the hootings of a crowd who speedily assembled. It is, however, stated that they are not daunted by defeat, and are entrenched in sight of the lady's residence, ready to resume the attempt on the first favourable opportunity.

Claydon.—The parishes of Akenham and Claydon in Suffolk have been for some time in a state of excitement, caused by the manner in which the Church services have been performed by the rector, the Rev. George Drury. On Whitsunday, the service at Claydon commenced at half-past 8 in the morning. Candles were lighted at the altar, which was decorated with flowers and evergreens, with a large cross in the centre. The congregation numbered about 40 persons, the majority being old men and women of the village, and a few strangers. After the entry of the procession the Communion service began. The rector wore a large alb extending to his feet, and bordered with a yellow stripe. Over this he had a chasuble reaching down his back to within a few inches of the ground; this was of the pentecostal colour—bright red; on it was embroidered a golden cross more than a yard in length. Besides these he wore a girdle-maniple, amice, and stole. The Benedictine brothers or monks were habited in black serge, but without caps; their hair was cut quite close round the crown and left long outside. The choristers had scarlet skirts under their white surplices. The service was carried through with the evident intent to go as near the Roman form as possible without the Prayer-book being thrown entirely aside. Incense was used, the monks and choristers were continually moving about, the large candles were carried in and out of the vestry, and during the entire service 24 candles were burning at the altar, arranged on either side of the cross. Numerous breaks took place in the service to allow of the introduction of musical embellishments. After the consecration, Father Ignatius, and another of the brothers, presented themselves at the altar, prostrated themselves flat on the ground, and on rising received the sacrament. After this it was administered to three lots of nine of the congregation, who followed each other in turn. Then, after the "Gloria in Excelsis" had been sung, there was a departure from the form as laid down in the Prayer Book. The crumbs from the paten were first put into the chalice; then the rector, standing in front of the altar, drained the contents; then going to the side, wine was brought to him to perform the first oblation, after which he drank the contents. The second oblation was performed with wine and water; the third with water only. Then, after carefully folding up the veils, maniples, and clearing the altar, he placed them on a square cushion and carried them out of the church in procession. This terminated the service a little after 10 o'clock. At Akenham the service began at 11, Mr. Drury officiating. The dress worn by that gentleman on entering the church was a long black robe, so long, that to prevent it getting under his feet he had to raise it up from behind. The service comprised prayers and Communion, and in consequence of the interference of Mr. Woodward, the churchwarden, was more like that of other churches; but Mr. Drury expressed himself, on his return from doing duty, that this parish of only about 100 inhabitants was a source of great annoyance to him. At seven in the evening the services at Claydon were resumed. The procession, consisting of the two brothers, the rector, and choristers, came in at the vestry door; in front was a chorister bearing a large cross, then the banners, Brother Ignatius and the rector bringing up the rear. Having ranged themselves with their faces towards the altar, they chanted the opening sentences, and the rector commenced the exhortation. Just before the first lesson, two boys, who wore white surplices over their scarlet skirts, and who had borne the two large candles before the altar, went into the vestry, whence they returned at the end of the lesson. At the "Magnificat" the rector stood before the altar and swung the censer with incense; the candle boys again retired into the vestry, and the second lesson began, after which all the candles were extinguished except four. At the end of the prayers, Father Ignatius ascended the pulpit, and said he got up, not to preach a sermon, but to make a few remarks upon the event of that day—namely, the Descent of the Holy Ghost. He spoke as follows:—

"He had been forbidden by the bishop of the diocese to preach, why he knew not, as his lordship had assigned no reason; but he was called upon to submit, and he must do so: the lessons he had taught them about obeying the bishops, he was now called upon to put in practice for himself. He was an ordained minister of the Church of England, and by God's help he meant to continue in it; he did not mean to do as many of his brethren had done, go over to Rome on account of the persecutions they had endured in the church of England, and were likely to endure if they remained in it. No, he meant to stick to the Church of England, even if he had to lay down his life for its sake. He challenged any one to say that he had lived an inconsistent life, or that he had taught anything different to the Bible and the Book of Common Prayer. He had preached what he considered the Gospel, and what he considered were the doctrines of the Articles in the Prayer-book. More than 400 people residing in the parish, besides the rector and churchwardens, had signed a petition to the bishop, asking permission for him to preach; but some evil-disposed persons, who did not come to church, and who cared not for it, had given the bishop a wrong view on the subject, whereupon he had forbidden him to preach, and until that prohibition was removed he must obey; he asked the people to pray for him. But not only was he forbidden to officiate, but no other priest but the rector was to be allowed to officiate there. This was too much for any man to do."

The walls and buildings of the village bear ample proof of the strong opposition that is going on against these services. Crosses, with "No Popery" written in chalk, are to be seen almost everywhere, and on a building opposite the road leading up to the church are a number of caricatures on paper, with hundreds of inscriptions, such as "Go to Rome, Blazer!" "Who burnt Rogers?" "Who burnt Ridley, Latimer, and Cranmer?" The reverend brother, in writing to the Ipswich Journal on Saturday week in reference to these demonstrations, styles the Reformation "the Devil's Deformation under Luther, Calvin, Knox, Zuingle, Melancthon, and other arch heretics;" and the opponents of the Claydon practices "pig-headed."

Durham.—Her Majesty in Council has disallowed the ordinances of the Durham University commissioners appointed in 1861, which ordinances have recently been under the consideration of the Judicial Committee. The commissioners have declined to amend their ordinances, so that, practically, their commission will soon be at an end, and a new commission will probably be the result. The commissioners recommended that there should be a school of theology, which was to confer, after a two years' course, the new degrees of "Master of Theology" and "Bachelor of Theology," and provided that "no oath or subscription should be required from any student, member, or officer of the university, but every person proceeding to a degree in the school of theology should first declare that he was bonâ fide a member of the United Church of England and Ireland as by law established." In addition to the schools of theology they recommended that there should be schools of arts and physical science, conferring the degrees of B.A. and M.A., and of B.S. and M.S., for which no religious qualification should be required. The management of the university was to be entrusted to a senate and convocation, the duty of the senate being to "provide for the attendance of the students at Divine service, and make such regulations for this purpose as they might think fit, provided that no Dissenter should be required to attend the Church services." The commissioners proposed to have a professor of divinity, a professor of Hebrew, and other professors in various branches of secular learning. The fellowships were to be done away with, and the endowments of them, together with those of the university scholarships, bursarships, proctorships, &c., amounting to about 10,000*l.* a year, were to be converted into exhibitions. The present Bishop of Durham was one of the commissioners by whom the proposed ordinances were drawn up.

Manchester.—At the weekly meeting of the Executive Committee on Monday, the hon. secretary stated that the receipts of the week amounted to 2,292*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*, and that the balance at the bank was 377,147*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.* Mr. Commissioner Farnall's weekly report showed a further decrease of 5,287 in the number of persons receiving parochial relief in the 27 unions, making a net decrease of 94,706, since the 6th of December. The committee made grants amounting to 15,520*l.* from the general fund to 26 different local committees. They also granted 624*l.* from the Employment and School Fund to seven places, and made a number of small grants to 22 places for the superintendents of labour in those places, ranging from 2*l.* to 26*l.*

Preston.—Eight men who were concerned in the riots which took place in this town on the 22d April were tried and convicted last week at the quarter sessions. The ringleader, Jeremiah Cowen, was sentenced to three years' penal servitude. Five of the others were sentenced to six months and two to 12 months' imprisonment.

Salisbury.—Preparations are making for the erection of the statue of the late Lord Herbert of Lea, the public inauguration of which will take place on Monday, the 29th June. The statue, which is by Baron Marochetti, is to be placed in the Market Place in this city, immediately in front of the Council Chamber, on the site heretofore occupied by the Russian gun captured during the Crimean war, and presented to the city by Lord Panmure. The only inscription on the pedestal will be "Sidney Herbert," the name by which he was best known. On the day of the inauguration the statue will be formally handed over to the mayor and corporation.

Sheffield.—A great open-air meeting was held in this town on Tuesday, to consider the advisableness of memorializing Government to "use its good offices to procure a suspension of hostilities between the North and South, with a view to an arrangement of the difference between them." The meeting was called by the Mayor, in pursuance of a requisition, and was attended by about 10,000 persons, including all classes of the inhabitants. Mr. Roebuck addressed the meeting at great length. He said:—

"Gentlemen, the question we are about to discuss is one of the highest possible importance. The mayor has asked me to attend this meeting, for he told me that you would be glad to hear my opinions. Those opinions shall be frankly stated to you. It is my habit always to speak out. If you do not like them, I cannot help it. Now, what is the question which we have come here to discuss? So far as I am concerned I can tell you that it is to me an entirely English question. What I have to consider is what is for the interest of England. What is for her interest I believe to be for the interest of the world. We hold such a position that every step taken by England as a country reverberates throughout the whole world, and influences the happiness of every man. Many years ago England planted great colonies in America. They raised themselves up to a great height. They became 3,000,000 of people; and they then determined to separate from England. They declared that they had a right to separate when they thought fit to do so. They supported that judgment of theirs by arms. They fought England; they beat England; they declared themselves independent. The consequence of it is that they established this great principle among mankind, that when a people are determined to throw off a yoke, whatever that yoke may be, they have the right to do so. England resisted these people. Then came France to aid them. France entered into an alliance with our revolted colonies. Thereupon we declared war against France. We carried on that war. We were again beaten. We yielded the independence of America, and we made a peace with France. Then again we established another great principle, that when a people are fighting for their liberty, it is in the power of any other state—any neutral power—to ally themselves with the so fighting body. They have a right to do so, and if they have the power to maintain themselves, they are justified in doing so. I am applying to history. I am not talking wildly. The facts are as I state them. The conclusions have been drawn by mankind. Now, after above 80 years of alliance, the United States of America have separated in two. They separated; and what was the feeling in England? I'll tell you what my feeling was. I mourned at that separation. But the North themselves, from the very commencement, were so cruel, so determined on maintaining empire, that they forgot charity; they forgot Christianity; they made themselves a spectacle to the world of cruelty, corruption, and horror. That being the case, my feelings changed; but I did expect that the great power of the North, their wonderful resources, would enable them to subdue the South. But the South stood up, like the real descendants, as they are, of Englishmen. They said, 'We will vindicate to ourselves the right to govern ourselves; we will fight to the death for our independence.' And they have fought to the death. They have conquered the North. And now I ask myself if the time has come when surrounding nations shall acknowledge the South as an independent nation (cries of 'Never,' and 'Slavery'). I am about to come to the question of slavery, and I hope the gentlemen who are so anxious about slavery will now be silent. The Northern States of America hate slavery; but there is one thing they hate still more, and that is the slave. Now, I know New York well, and people are here who do not know America; and I know this, that the black man in New York is treated as I would not treat a dog. My countrymen here have kind hearts, and their hearts bleed when they think that men are slaves. I say 'Can England, by allowing this horrible war to go on, can she, as she has done—being thoroughly neutral between the two—can she, if she can prevent it, in her own conscience, allow these horrible atrocities to continue?' Oh, I am met with the cry—I have heard it here—'Slavery.' But what is slavery in the South as compared with the black man's condition in the North? No man looks upon slavery with greater horror than I do, and if I could benefit the slaves—if I could do anything for their condition by at once making them a free people, I should be prepared, as far as my humble power goes, to confer liberty upon them. But we did that among a smaller body of black people in the West Indies. We paid for them, and, as England always has behaved in such cases, we dealt liberally, not only by the slave, but by the slaveholder. Can you do that in America? You cannot. (A voice: 'Yes, you can.') You say we can; but you know nothing about it. The millions of slaves in America would swallow up all the money in the North and in the South to buy their freedom. You cannot do it. But the connection between the shareholder and the slave is one not so painful as many imagine. They are kindly treated. I know they are not treated as I should like to be treated, because I am a freeman. I have been brought up in freedom, I have fought for my own livelihood; they have not. They like their condition, then, to this extent: that when they become old they are not called upon to maintain themselves, and the slaveholders treat them—unfortunately I must use the phrase—as I should treat my horse. I never overwork him if I am a wise man. I lament that any human being should be in that condition, but they are in that condition, and, as statesmen, what are we to do? I fear that for many years to come slavery must exist. You cannot get rid of it on a sudden. Time, patience, and the education of the black man, all must go hand in hand, and it will be the result of time, of education, of patience, which will drag them out of the condition in which they now are. Now, I hate slavery as much as any man. Were any man to attempt to make me a slave I would fight him. I say to England, 'If you now step in and declare boldly what you think to be requisite, namely, that the Southern States should be at once acknowledged as an independent nation' (cries of 'No, no,' and a voice with great emphasis 'Never!') I am told that if we acknowledge the South we shall go to war with the North. I say I do not believe it. I say there is no person, no body of men, who so much desire England's interference in that war as the Northern States themselves. Well, then, what is the reason why we should not do it? First, they say, England ought not to help slavery. I say so, too; but we should not help slavery by acknowledging the South. I have very little more to say, but I want to notice one or two arguments that have been brought against me. One is that we should be benefiting slavery by acknowledging the South. I say, no; we should not benefit slavery, but we should really benefit the slave. By doing everything to assist the North we may do away with slavery, but at the same time we should do away with the slave. And I must say that throughout the wo contest there has been a curious feeling on the part of gentlemen who support the Federal power. They have said, 'We are not neutral, because we have shown no sympathy for the North.' Now, sympathy is not a part of neutrality; and I at once acknowledge that I have no sympathy with the North. I think my sympathies ought to go, as they do go, with the South. They are a gallant people, fighting for their independence, and they have obtained it. The chance of success on the part of the North is as a million to one. They never hope to conquer the South; but I will tell you what they hope for. There are a body of men in New York who thrive wonderfully upon the war. They have contracts, they have 'greenbacks,' they have every means of putting their hands into the public purse; they are gorged with wealth; and as long as this goes on they will wish the war to continue. But if you go into the agricultural districts of North America you would find things very different there. There you would see sorrow for the war; there you would find husbands dragged to the war—you would find brothers gone there, killed, wounded, maimed, made miserable for life. They know what the horror of the war is; they have none of the advantages of the contractor in New York; they therefore wish to put an end to the war. And there is another class of men in North America which so hates England that anything that should continue to give her pain they would delight in; and this arises from England's bad conduct—I am speaking of the banished Irish in America. But still all that notwithstanding—I say, 'If England can move in such a way as to put an end to this war, let her do so at once.' Now then, gentlemen, I have told you very frankly my opinions. I cannot reason out this question as I should desire in the immense area I have to address, but still distinctly I tell you I believe the time is come for an acknowledgment of the independence of the South; that England by so doing will be carrying out the great mission she has to advance and protect mankind; that if she do so she will benefit not only herself but the world at large. Therefore I should advise you —if my advice be worth anything, you will take it; if not, reject it—I should advise you to say that in our opinion the Confederate States of America should at once be acknowledged to be an independent nation."

The Rev. J. P. Hopps moved, and Mr. M. Beal seconded, the following resolution:—

"That in the opinion of this meeting the Government of this country would act wisely, both for the interests of England and those of the world, were they immediately to enter into negociations with the Great Powers of Europe, for the purpose of obtaining the acknowledgment by them of the independence of the Confederate States of North America."

The Rev. J. Guttridge (Wesleyan Free Church) moved, and Mr. J. Clegg seconded, the following amendment:—

"That this meeting records its high admiration of the honourable neutrality hitherto maintained by the Government in relation to the dreadful civil war now raging on the American continent, and earnestly hopes that the policy of non-intervention will be pursued in future."

Mr. Hopps's resolution was carried by an overwhelming majority.

MURDER IN WEXFORD.—On Sunday week a National schoolmaster, named Fitzhenry, 28 years of age, was murdered near his own house within a few miles of New Ross. He was found in a lane quite dead, with his skull battered in and his brains scattered about, surrounded with blood. It appears that the murdered man had agreed to pay a sum of money for some land to a neighbour called Joseph Kelly, who was going to America, and who wanted him to advance a further sum to enable Kelly's father to emigrate with them. This request deceased refused. On the Saturday night he and Kelly were drinking together at New Ross, and on the following morning he was found murdered within 100 yards of his own house. The jury at the inquest returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against J. Kelly, who was committed for trial.

ALLEGED FEDERAL RECRUITING.—A few days since an American of military appearance visited Cork and its neighbourhood, representing himself to be an agent empowered to engage a large number of Irish labourers to complete some unfinished lines of railways in the United States, and offered the intending emigrants a passage to America on the payment of a deposit of 3*d.* each, with the certainty of continuous and remunerative employment from the moment of their landing. It is said that several hundred young men accepted these terms, but the police having thought it necessary to make some inquiries of the stranger, he suddenly decamped with the deposits he had received, leaving a young man whom he had engaged as his secretary behind him, without any chance of obtaining payment for his services.

Scotland.

THE PRINCE CONSORT CAIRN.—A large cairn of pyramidal shape, erected by command of the Queen, in memory of the Prince Consort, has just been completed. It occupies a commanding position on a hill some distance south of the castle. It is built of roughly-dressed stones, and measures 35 feet square at the base, and 40 feet in height. On the north slope a tablet is built, having on it a suitable inscription, with a quotation from the Wisdom of Solomon, chap. iv., v. 13 and 14—"He, being made perfect in a short time, fulfilled a long time. For his soul pleased the Lord: therefore hasted He to take him away from among the wicked." On the east slope are cut the initials of all the members of the Royal Family, with the date 21st August, 1862.

GENERAL ASSEMBLIES OF THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.—The General Assemblies of the Church of Scotland commenced their annual sittings in Edinburgh on the 14th inst. Lord Belhaven, her Majesty's Lord High Commissioner to the Assembly of the Established Church, held a Levée in the forenoon in Holyrood Palace, which was numerously attended, and afterwards attended Divine service in the High Church, conducted by the retiring moderator, Dr. Bisset, of Bourtie. Dr. Craik, of Glasgow, was elected moderator for the ensuing year. In the General Assembly of the Free Church the Rev. Dr. Guthrie, the retiring moderator, preached the opening sermon on "Home and Foreign Missions;" and the Rev. Roderick Macleod, of Snizort, was elected moderator for the ensuing year.

THE YELVERTON CASE.—The Hon. Major Yelverton having recently presented a petition to the House of Lords, asking for further time to lodge his case, the appeal committee have granted one month's further delay. The appeal will, therefore, probably be heard before their lordships about the month of July next. An action was brought some time ago by Mrs. Longworth Yelverton against Mrs. Forbes, claiming damages on the ground of a slanderous libel contained in the latter's letter to the London Examiner. Defences have now been lodged in the Court of Session by Mrs. Forbes to the effect—first, that she is the lawful wife of Major Yelverton, and that as such her husband, if any person, is the party to be proceeded against; and, secondly, that as she has no domicile or effects in Scotland, the Court of Session has no jurisdiction in the case. The defences admit that the libellous letter was written by Mrs. Forbes.

Law.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Sir J. B. Walsh, Bart., v. The Secretary of State for India and the Attorney General.—This was an appeal from the Court of Chancery on the question whether the Secretary for India is bound, as succeeding to the liabilities of the East India Company, to pay to the executor of the first Lord Clive the sum of five lacs of Sicca rupees, of which the company were trustees, to provide a fund out of which pensions were to be paid to the officers and soldiers of the Company's army who might be disabled in their service; and which they undertook to repay to his representatives whenever they should cease to employ ships and to have a military force in their actual pay and service. The Lord Chancellor, in delivering judgment, said that the question was whether the appellant was entitled to the fund by reason of the events contemplated by the deed having happened. In his opinion the appellant was entitled to it. The event contemplated had clearly taken place, and therefore, looking at the deed alone, the appellant would be entitled to recover. The questions which then arose were whether there was anything in the act of 1858 which interfered with the appellant's rights, and then, who were the parties liable. In the first place, the respondents, regarding the fund as a distinct and separate trust, contended that the act of 1858 had transferred that trust to the Crown for the benefit of the Indian army. But that was an utterly erroneous argument, because the trust was not a distinct and separate trust, but was blended with the funds of the general revenue of the East India Company. The appellant's claim was founded upon a distinct covenant by the Company to pay a certain sum upon a stipulated event, which had happened, taking place, and the act of parliament had not in any way interfered with the appellant's right under that covenant. The act of 1833 had directed that all debts and liabilities of the East India Company were to be chargeable upon the general revenues of India, and out of those revenues the appellant's claim must be satisfied. Under these circumstances the appeal must be allowed, and the decision of the Court below reversed, with costs. The other noble and learned lords concurred. Judgment reversed.

Miscellaneous.

THE DISCOVERY OF THE SOURCE OF THE NILE.—At the anniversary meeting of the Royal Geographical Society on Monday, Sir Roderick Murchison, the President, referred to the labours of Captains Speke and Grant, who have discovered the sources of the Nile, and have determined that the great fresh-water lake, Victoria Nyanza, whose southern watershed extends to nearly 4° south of the equator, is the reservoir from which the sacred Bahr-al-Abiad, or White Nile, mainly descends to Gondokorò, and thence by Khartum into Egypt. In tracing the outline of Captain Speke's recent discoveries, he recapitulated the nature of the problem presented to the explorer when he started on the expedition. His previous journey (at right angles to the route jointly travelled by Burton and himself to the Tanganika Lake, and undertaken while Captain Burton lay sick at Kazeh) led him into a land where the waters flowed northward, and finally to the shores of a fresh-water sea, called the Nyanza, of great reputed extent. The lake was bounded to the right by the country of the warlike Masia race, through which no traveller can make way, and to the left, but at some distance north of where Speke then was, by an important kingdom called Uganda. Speke's furthest point lay, by astronomical observations, about 489 geographical miles south of Gondokorò, the uppermost well-known point on the White Nile, though the exploration of occasional travellers and ivory-dealers, as Peney, De Bono, and Miani, had reduced the distance between the nearest points then known to white men to 400 miles. The assertions of travelled Arabs convinced Speke that the outlet of the lake lay far away in the north, and that it gave birth to the parent stream of the White Nile. His present journey was made to ascertain the truth of this previous information, his chief difficulty being to obtain the good-will of the powerful chief of the Uganda and other native potentates that had power to block his way. The travellers started from the East African coast on the 1st of October, 1860, but the commencement of their journey was most inauspicious. Eastern Africa was parched with drought, and its tribes were mostly at war, partly owing to disputed successions to chieftainships, and partly in consequence of famine. The result was that they only reached Kazeh after great delays and anxiety, and consequent illness. The next intelligence was dated Sept. 30, 1861, near Kazeh, and told a more cheering tale. The travellers were again on the advance, with a sufficient attendance of porters and interpreters, and were hopeful of success. More than a year then ensued without a particle of news, when the joyful information reached England by telegram that they had reached Khartum, and then that they had joined at Gondokorò, on the 20th of February last, Mr. Petherick, Vice-Consul at Batoum, who was recently reported to have been drowned in crossing one of the rivers in Abyssinia. There is a short break in our knowledge of their proceedings in the meantime, for Speke sent a quire of papers by way of Zanzibar which have never reached the Society. His present reports contain a consecutive narrative of the latter and principal part of his journey between Kazeh and Gondokorò. They commence on January 1, 1862, and date from his departure from the capital of a kingdom called Karagwè, that abuts by one of its corners against the west shore of Nyanza at its southern end. Here he seems to have made a most favourable impression on the intelligent King, who gave him a much-needed introduction for his onward journey, franked his expenses, and forwarded him with urgent and friendly recommendations to the powerful King of Uganda. Karagwè is a portion of a peculiarly interesting district. It occupies a shoulder of the eastern watershed of a territory 200 miles broad, and some 6000 feet above the sea level, that is studded with detached conical hills, one at least of which attains the height of 10,000 feet—the Montes Lunæ of Burton and Speke. The sources of the Nile rise in this territory—namely, the chief feeder of the Nyanza lake, and that of another lake, the Luta Nzige; so also does the source of the Shire of Livingstone, if we may believe the reports now brought to us by Speke. It seems at length that the Tanganika lake is emptied, and not supplied, by a river at its southern end, and that this effluent feeds the Niassa lake, and through it, of course, the Shire. The northern feeder of the Tanganika takes its rise in the land of which we have been speaking. It is evident from a part of the present reports that the missing papers would have enlarged on the fact that in Karagwè Speke found himself in contact with a superior negro race, strongly and favourably contrasting with the tribes he had previously seen, and, with the exception of Uganda, whither Speke now went, is inhabited by a similar race. Their country lies along the Nyanza, and occupies a full half of both its western and northern shores. The parent stream of the Nile bounds Uganda on the east, as it issues from the middle of the northern boundary of the lake with a current 150 yards in width, leaping over a fall 12 feet in height. The Nyanza has numerous other outlets from the same shore, which all converge upon the Nile and feed it at various points of its course, extending to a distance of 150 miles from the lake. Speke describes the people of Uganda as "the French" of these parts, from their sprightliness and good taste in behaviour, dress, and houses. Captain Speke met with great favour from the ruler of these people—an absolute sovereign. He conceives the lake to have formerly extended further than at present. Its banks are intersected at frequent intervals by what he calls "rush-drains," apparently small half-stagnant water-courses, which drain that portion of the adjacent land he believes to have been formerly flooded by the lake. The present size of the Nyanza is considerable; it is about 150 miles in length and breadth, but it appears to have no great depth. Speke further learnt that other lakes have a share in feeding the Nile. One of them lies immediately to the east, and is probably connected with Nyanza. It supplies the Asaa river, which runs into the Nile just above Gondokorò. The other is the Luta Nzige, to which we have already alluded, and which Mr. Baker is now engaged in examining. Captain Speke never saw it, but pictures it on his map as being annexed to the Nile, which enters it, after making a great head at the easternmost part of its northern shoulder, and reissues at the westernmost part of the same. This lake is 120 miles north-west of the Nyanza. After about five months' hospitable detention as a kind of State prisoner, Captain Speke was passed on to the next kingdom, still inhabited by the same peculiar Whahuma race, but north of them the South African dialect suddenly ceased, and Captain Speke felt the want of Ungoro interpreters. The people, too, were far more barbarous. He then first saw people who lived in absolute nudity at Ungoro. There they adopted a scanty dress, out of deference to the customs of the place where they were strangers. Speke's troubles and the procrastination of the King Kaunasi, when he was getting to the end of his journey, were most annoying, the barbarian endeavouring to take from him his only remaining chronometer. He succeeded, however, in seeing the Nile for 2° of lat. north of the great lake, or to lat. 2° north. There the river makes its great bend to the west to pass through the Luta Nzige Lake, and Speke was obliged to travel along the chord of the bend, a distance of 70 miles. He again struck the river at De Bono's ivory station, in lat. 3° 45 min., a few marches south of Gondokorò. There is an unexplained difference of level of 1000 feet in the river before and after the bend, and in this interval highly inclined rapids or falls must occur. A large body of Turks (ivory traders) were the only occupants of the station when Speke arrived, and they welcomed him cordially. After some days the camp broke up, and marched to Gondokorò, Speke accompanying them. They compelled the Bari natives to contribute porters, and he was sorry to add that the narrative fully confirms the universal accounts of the inhuman treatment of the natives by these Turkish traders. Captain Speke reached Gondokorò on the 15th February, and there met Mr. Baker. In his retrospect of the more civilised countries he had visited, or the three kingdoms of Karagwè, Uganda, and Ungoro, Speke unhesitatingly gives the preference to the first-named, inasmuch as the King Rumanika is described as a person of character and intelligence; Mtesa, the Sovereign of Uganda, being an amiable youth, surrounded by his wives, and delighting in field sports, while one of the rules of his Court seems to require the execution of one man per diem for the good of the State. The northernmost of these three kings, to the north of whose dominions the language changes entirely, is described as a morose, suspicious, churlish creature, yclept Kamrasi, whose chief occupation was the fattening of his wives and children till they could not stand, and in the practising of witchcraft. The travellers spent a whole year in getting through these three kingdoms, in no one of which had a white man ever been seen before, nor would they in all probability ever have escaped from their clutches had they not supplied their Majesties with numerous presents, and that the kings had not eagerly desired to open a traffic wth the whites. By the last intelligence the travellers were coming down the Nile in the steamers of the Viceroy of Egypt, and might be expected to reach our shores on the 8th of June. The President then quoted extracts from Captain Speke's journal, illustrative of his progress, and from his first letter, intimating the joy with which he had received from Petherick the founder's medal of the society, at their first meeting—a meeting of two old friends suddenly approaching one another from opposite hemispheres, which can be better understood than described. After discoursing of the value and magnitude of the discovery, the President alluded with pride to the fact that from first to last the Council of this Society has vigorously sustained East African expeditions, whether in southern or northern latitudes. He was well entitled to say that in the absence of their persistent representations to her Majesty's Government, for whose support and countenance they were indeed deeply grateful, the discoveries of Livingstone, and of Burton and of Speke, and the great recent discovery of Speke and Grant, which now occupied their thoughts, would not have been brought about in their days.

WRECK OF AN INDIAMAN.—The ship Moorsfoot, Captain Coulthurst, with a crew of 42 men and 4 passengers, was totally lost on the 1st February, on her homeward voyage from Calcutta. She had called at St. Louis, Mauritius, and was lying at anchor in the bay when a storm arose and drove her on a reef, and in a short time she was a total wreck. Thirty-one of the crew, including the captain and first and second officers, were drowned in the ship.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, May 25.

The supply of Beasts is about the same as on Monday last; the weather and demand being good, trade is brisk, at rather higher rates. The number of Sheep is rather less, yet quite equal to the demand. The choicest Downs and Half-breds are in request, at a small advance. But, owing to the depressed condition of the tallow-market, fat sheep are difficult of sale, and scarcely reach our quotations. Good Calves are scarce and dear. Lamb is lower. From Germany and Holland there are 390 Beasts, 4550 Sheep, and 34 Calves; from Spain, 36 Beasts; from Scotland, 350; from Ireland, 30; from France, 10 Calves; from Norfolk and Suffolk, 3100 Beasts; and 100 from the Northern and Midland counties.

THURSDAY, May 28.

We have a much larger supply of Beasts, and the weather being warmer trade is heavy. Last Monday's prices are not realised throughout, and indeed a clearance cannot be effected. The number of Sheep is also rather large, and trade very dull; prices are about the same as on Thursday last. Calves are more plentiful, and prices are rather lower. Lamb is more in request, but we cannot quote higher. Our foreign supply consists of 158 Beasts, 1540 Sheep, and 320 Calves. Milch Cows, 130.

HOPS.—BOROUGH MARKET, FRIDAY, May 29.

Messrs. Pattenden & Smith report a limited demand for consumption at last week's prices. The accounts from the Hop plantations generally state that in consequence of th late cold winds and frosts the bine has assumed a yellow and sickly appearance, the vermin also being decidedly on the increase, as many as from 10 to 15 flies being easily found on a single leaf in the middle of the gardens.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, May 25.

The supply of English Wheat to this morning's market was small, and met a quick sale at the extreme rates of this day se'nnight. The market was tolerably attended, and in some instances a slight advance was realised upon American and Russian descriptions, but no improvement could be obtained on the Baltic qualities. For Barley there was a good inquiry at full prices. Beans and Peas were unaltered in value. Oats were 1s. per qr. cheaper. For Flour the demand was limited at last week's rates.

FRIDAY, May 29.

The weather since the 22d inst. has been fine, with a low temperature. Although business in Wheat during the past week has been of a limited character, previous prices are well supported upon the sales effected, and in some markets it has been quoted 1s. per qr. dearer. The value of spring corn was well supported with rather an upward tendency, Oats excepted; these, owing to large arrivals here, and in several of the principal ports, have suffered a depreciation of 6d. per qr. in several markets. Flour has been in rather limited inquiry at last week's rates. In Paris (May 28), the trade has remained very slow for Wheat and Flour, but former prices are maintained. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 13,430 cwts. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 39s. 6d. per 280 lbs. The arrivals of foreign Barley and Oats this week have been large, of all other grain small. To-day's market was very thinly attended. Prices of both English and foreign must be considered nominally the same as on Monday. The amount of business transacted was very limited. In the value of Barley, Beans, and Peas there is no alteration. For Oats there was a fair demand at about Monday's quotations.

LIVERPOOL, May 26.—We have had only a small attendance of town and country millers and dealers at this morning's market, and the demand for Wheat has been quite in retail at Friday's prices. Flour a slow sale, but fully as dear. Indian Corn met only a moderate inquiry, with few sellers under the extreme quotations. Oats the turn cheaper, owing to the better supply of foreign. Oatmeal steady, but not brisk. New Egyptian Beans are down from 3d. to 6d. per quarter. Peas and Barley unchanged. The market closes firm.

FRIDAY, May 29.—Wheat in consumptive demand, at about Tuesday's rates. Flour continues in good demand for fresh parcels, and late rates fully supported. Indian Corn, small business at 29s. 9d. for mixed. Egyptian Beans moderate sale; new Saidi 31s. 3d. to 31s. 6d. Egyptian Wheat unchanged. Oats and Oatmeal unchanged.

PATENT ELECTRICAL PLANT PROTECTOR for the preservation of Plants, Flowers, and Shrubs from Snails, Worms, Slugs, &c.

This Protector being composed of zinc and copper, or of any two metals combined in such a manner as to form an electrical couple, constantly gives off a certain amount of electricity, rendering plants entirely secure from the attacks of Slugs, &c., as it has been discovered to be perfectly impossible for any insect or worm to crawl over a combination of these two metals.

Being formed in plain and ornamental designs for borders, beds, &c., it is applicable to all gardens, terraces, &c.; it is also made in the form of Plant Guards to encircle the stems.

Illustrated Lists of Prices post free on application to ROBERT B. LEE & Co., Sole Manufacturers of the Patent Plant Protector, 22, Market Place, Manchester.

To Noblemen, Gardeners, Farmers, and Others.

AMIES AND BARFORD beg to call particular attention to their NEW PATENT WATER BALLASTING FIELD and GARDEN ROLLERS, which have the following advantages over all others. They are made entirely of Wrought Iron, are made water-tight, and are loaded with water to obtain increased weight at pleasure, which is moreover employed with the greatest possible per centage of crushing power directly upon the surface of the soil. The weight of a Garden Roller can thus be doubled in a few minutes, and a one, two, or three Horse Land Roller is secured, as desired, in one implement.

Great numbers have already been sold, and are giving the greatest satisfaction, and whether for Gardens, Lawns, Cricket Grounds, Road-making, or for farmers' use, they will be found superior to all others.

For Illustrated Price Lists apply to Messrs. AMIES & BARFORD, Queen Street Iron Works, Peterborough, Patentees and Sole Manufacturers.

News of the Week.

THE House of Lords reassembled on Monday after the Whitsuntide recess. Lord EBURY moved an address to the Crown, praying for the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire what steps could be taken to obviate the evils arising out of the indiscriminate use of the Burial Service.

The Earl of Desart moved as an amendment that the motion be considered that day six months. The Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Bishops of London, St. David's, Llandaff, and Cashel, and other Peers advised Lord Ebury to withdraw his motion, on the understanding that the subject should receive the early attention of Convocation. The motion was ultimately withdrawn. The Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill and the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill were read a third time and passed. On Tuesday the Savings Banks Moneys Bill was read a third time and passed. On Thursday the Telegraphs Bill was referred to a Select Committee.

In the House of Commons on Friday Mr. Gregory called attention to the present condition of Turkey and her dependencies, and in moving for papers on the subject, urged upon the Government the expediency of adopting a different line of policy, so that when the break-up of the empire came, England might not be found fighting on behalf of Mahomedan barbarism against Christian civilisation. Mr. Layard defended the policy of the Government, and asserted that the Porte had fulfilled all its obligations to Servia and her other dependencies. After a long discussion the motion was withdrawn. On Monday, on the order for considering the Inland Revenue Bill as amended, Mr. Hunt moved the addition of a clause exempting from Stamp duty all securities and agreements made under the Highways Act of last session. The clause was opposed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and was negatived, on a division, by 146 to 116. The Bill as amended was then agreed to. The House went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, when the votes for public buildings, the parks, and the Houses of Parliament, were agreed to. The Vice-Admiralty Courts Bill passed through Committee. The Cayman Island Bill, the Alkali Works Regulation Bill, and the African Slave Trade Treaty Bill, were read a second time. On Tuesday Mr. Whalley moved that the House should resolve itself into committee to consider the Maynooth College Endowment Act, with a view to its repeal. After a short discussion the motion was negatived on a division by 198 to 100. Mr. Fenwick moved an address for a Royal commission to inquire into our sea fisheries, with the view of increasing the supply of a favourite and nutritious article of food. The motion was opposed by Mr. M. Gibson, but was carried on a division by 50 to 27. Mr. Hassard called attention to the state of the laws relating to charitable donations and bequests in Ireland, and was proceeding with his speech when the House was counted out. On Wednesday Mr. Somes moved the second reading of the Public-houses Bill, the object of which was to compel the closing of all public-houses on Sundays. Captain Jervis moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. After a long discussion the amendment was carried on a division by 278 to 103. The Bill was therefore lost. The Sheep and Cattle (Scotland) Bill, and the Fisheries (Ireland) Bill, were read a second time. The report of the Committee of Supply was brought up and agreed to. The Vice-Admiralty Courts Bill was read a third time and passed. On Thursday, on the order for going into Committee on the Volunteers Bill, Mr. Bagwell moved that it was impolitic and unjust any longer to exclude Ireland from the operation of the Volunteer system. The motion was opposed by the Government, and negatived on a division by 156 to 45. The House then went into Committee, when Mr. Hibbert moved to omit Clause 19, which authorised the employment of the Volunteers in the suppression of riots and internal disorders. After some discussion the motion was agreed to, and the clause was struck out of the Bill. On the 21st clause, authorising a commanding officer to discharge a Volunteer for any cause which he might deem to be sufficient, Sir R. Clifton moved as an amendment that the sufficiency of the clause should be determined by a court of inquiry composed of members of the corps. On a division the amendment was negatived by 108 to 21. The remaining clauses were agreed to with amendments, after a very long discussion. The House then went into a Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, when Lord R. Cecil moved to reduce the vote of 3234*l.* for the repairs and furniture of the Embassy House at Pera, by 400*l.*, the salary of the Clerk of the Works. This amendment was opposed by the Government, but was carried on a division by 74 to 68. Several other votes having been agreed to, the Chairman was ordered to report progress. The African Slave Trade Treaty Bill passed through committee. The Removal of Irish Poor Bill was read a second time.

The French elections have terminated in the unanimous rejection of the Imperial candidates in all the arrondissements of Paris. This is the most serious defeat which has been sustained by the Government since the establishment of the Empire, and is universally attributed to the attempt made by M. de Persigny, the Minister of the Interior, to prevent the election of the Opposition candidates by denouncing them as enemies of the Government.

From the United States we learn that General Grant has occupied Jackson, the Black River Bridge, and Haines Bluff; and, at the date of the last advices, was fighting a battle with General Pemberton with the prospect of capturing the entire Confederate force in Vicksburg. It was reported at Washington that President Lincoln had commuted the sentence passed on Mr. Vallandigham to banishment beyond the Federal lines.

Parliamentary Movements.—The election for the City of London took place on Tuesday, when Mr. Göschen was elected without opposition. Colonel Tottenham and Mr. M'Kenna have offered themselves for New Ross, the former on Conservative, the latter on Liberal principles. Sir George Colthurst and Mr. Victor Beare Fitzgibbon are candidates for Kinsale, vacant by the resignation of Sir John Arnott.

Rupture of Diplomatic Relations with Brazil.—The Commandeur de Carvalho Moreira, the Brazilian Minister at this Court, in consequence of recent occurrences, demanded his passports on Monday. His excellency received the necessary papers on Friday, and has since taken his departure from this country.

The Case of Bishop Colenso.—The Cape papers state that the rural deans of the diocese of Natal have complained to the Bishop of Cape Town, as metropolitan, of Dr. Colenso's works, and that the Bishop has informed them in reply, that if they frame articles against Dr. Colenso it will be his duty and that of the other Bishops of South Africa to summon the bishop of Natal to answer them.

Knighthood. — The Queen has directed letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Knight of the United Kingdom to Francis Richard Sandford, Esq., Secretary of the late International Exhibition.

Foreign.

France. — The French elections have terminated in the defeat of the Government in all the arrondissements of Paris, and in the defeat of the Opposition with a few exceptions in the provinces. In Paris, in the first arrondissement, M. Havin, political editor of the Siècle, the Opposition candidate, was elected by 14,405 votes, against M. Delessert, the Government candidate, who obtained only 6975. In the second arrondissement M. Thiers, the Opposition candidate, was elected by 11,112 votes, against M. Devinck, the Government candidate, who obtained only 9857 votes. In the third arrondissement M. Emile Ollivier, ex-deputy, Opposition candidate, was elected by 18,651 votes, against the Government candidate, M. Varin, who received 9957 votes. In the fourth arrondissement M. Ernest Picard, ex-deputy, Opposition candidate, was elected by 17,046 votes, against General Perrot, ex-deputy, the Government candidate, who received 6487 votes. In the fifth arrondissement M. Jules Favre, ex-deputy, Opposition candidate, was elected by 18,655 votes, against M. Frederick Lévy, Mayor of 11th district, the Government candidate, who obtained 8507 votes. In the sixth arrondissement M. Guéroult, chief editor of the Opinion Nationale, Opposition candidate, obtained 10,717 votes; M. Fouché Lepelletier, ex-deputy, Government candidate, 9323 votes; M. Cochin, Opposition candidate, 6000 votes; and M. Prevost Paradol, editor of the Journal des Débats, Opposition, 2200 votes. None of the candidates having obtained the two-thirds majority requisite by the electoral law, another election will be necessary in this district. In the seventh arrondissement M. Darimon, ex-deputy, Opposition candidate, was elected by 10,593 votes. In the eighth arrondissement M. Jules Simon, the Opposition candidate, who was dismissed from his Professorship at the Sorbonne for declining to take the oaths to the Empire, obtained 1774 votes, and M. Konigswerter, Government candidate, 1057. In the ninth arrondissement M. Pelletan, a Republican, the Opposition candidate, is known to have the majority, but the numbers have not been published. In the provinces the following Opposition candidates have been elected:—M. Berryer, Legitimist, and M. Marie, Republican, for Marseilles; M. Henon for Lyons; M. Dorian for the department of the Loire; M. Glais-Bizouin for that of the Côtes du Nord; M. Pierrou for Arras; M. Garnier for Hautes-Alpes But in the majority of cases in the provinces, the Government candidates have obtained the required majority. The following Opposition candidates have been defeated by the Government candidates:—Count Montalembert, MM. Dufaure, Odillon Barrot, Passy, Mérode, Dupont de l'Eure, L'Herbette, Glais, Bizouin, Kirdrel, Jouvenel, Renneville, Freslon, Charamond, Flavigny, St. Marc Girardin, de Civrac, Bac, Jules Lasteyrie, Mortemart, Prevost Paradol, Victor Lefranc, Barthélemy, St. Hilaire, De Mornay, the Duke Decazes, and Gustave Beaumont. The Minister of Public Worship has addressed a letter to the Archbishop and Bishops who signed a memorandum recommending the electors not to abstain from voting. The Minister censures this act as being in opposition to the obligations of the Episcopate, and as an excess of clerical power against the State. He says that the Government is firmly determined henceforth to prohibit the publication in the newspapers of any discussions which may take place among Bishops who hold meetings without legal authority. The Presse states that England and France have concluded a maritime treaty. The Emperor on Monday received a deputation from the English Society for the Protection of Aborigines, who presented an address of congratulation on the late measures in favour of the natives of Algeria. The address declared that the great English charter was not more truly the foundation of the national liberties of England than is the letter of the Emperor to the Duke of Malakoff the charter of the rights of the Arabs. The Imperial races took place on Sunday, when the Emperor's Grand Prize of Paris, value 100,000f., was won by Mr. Savile's Ranger by a length, beating La Toucques, Saccharometer, Donnybrook, Lord Clifden, and 7 others. Half the horses which ran and all the jockeys were English. Admiral Jurien de la Gravière has arrived in Paris from Mexico. The Pays contains the following on the Polish question:

"The three Powers have come to an understanding respecting their communications to St. Petersburg, in reply to the Notes of Prince Gortschakoff. These communications will soon take a definitive form, and matters are in as good a state of progress as could be desired."

A large body of English working men made an excursion to Paris last week, in three instalments. The trip was most successful and instructive. The French workmen vied with each other in the welcome they gave to their English brethren, and obtained for them the entrée to the principal manufactories and workshops.

SPAIN.—The sentence of imprisonment passed upon the Spanish Protestants Matamoros, Trigo, and Alhama at Granada, and on Marin, Carrasco, and Gonzales at Malaga, has been commuted to banishment. All the prisoners will be conveyed to France.

DENMARK.—The King will receive the Greek Deputation at Christiansburg to-day, in solemn audience, in order to announce to them the acceptance of the Crown by Prince William. A grand State Banquet will afterwards take place. An identical note has been sent by the Cabinet of Copenhagen in reply to the notes addressed by the Austrian and Prussian Governments to that of Denmark. In this reply to the two Governments, the Danish Cabinet, in a courteous but decided manner, refuses to make any alteration in the ordinance of March 30. It says:—

"The tenor of the patent of the 30th March does not furnish a pretext for any demand whatsoever on the part of the Germanic Confederation, inasmuch as the recent Royal measures exclusively concern the position of Holstein towards Denmark. The Federal resolutions and menaces have left no choice to Denmark. The patent of the 30th March must be maintained, or the Danish monarchy must become paralysed.

FRANKFORT.—The Europe of Tuesday announces that a Commission of the Germanic Diet will present its report upon the Schleswig-Holstein question within a fortnight. The majority of the Commission will set aside the motion of Oldenburg, and will propose that a final summons shall be sent to Denmark, calling upon her to annul the patent of the 30th March, and return to the rigorous fulfilment of the Convention of 1851-1852. A delay of four weeks will be allowed to Denmark for compliance with the summons.

PRUSSIA.—The official Staatz Anzeiger of Tuesday publishes a Royal decree, dated the 1st inst., based upon Article 63 of the Constitution, and countersigned by the entire Ministry. The decree empowers the Administrative authorities to prohibit, temporarily or altogether, after two warnings, the publication of newspapers the attitude of which is upon the whole dangerous to the public welfare. The Ministry is also authorised to forbid the introduction of foreign newspapers into Prussia upon similar grounds, when thought advisable. Six Berlin journals have published a joint declaration reserving their rights in view of this royal ordinance, and stating that the Government has yet to furnish the nation with proofs of the legality of the measure. It is reported that the King will shortly proceed to Carlsbad for the benefit of his health, and be represented by a Viceroy (Stadthalter) during his absence. The Crown Prince having declined, Prince Carl, the brother of the King, will, it is said, fill that post. The King has conferred on Cardinal Antonelli the Grand Cross of the order of the Red Eagle. The official journals assert that the statement of Mr. Hennessy, M.P., that Russian troops who had crossed the Prussian frontier near Herzyce were provided by the Prussian authorities with ammunition, is a mere invention.

RUSSIA.—The Journal de St. Pétersbourg reprints the proclamation which the Czas attributed to the Emperor of Russia, ordering the peasants to massacre all Roman Catholics, and adds:—"This is what a newspaper prints which pretends to be a serious publication." The same paper declares the rumours of an attempted insurrection at Smolensk and its environs to be entirely unfounded. It is stated in financial circles that Russia is about to contract a new loan of 500,000,000fr., half to be raised in Paris, the other half in Amsterdam.

FINLAND.—The gun-boats lately stationed at Helsingfors have been sent to Cronstadt. The fortifications of Sveaborg are carried on with great activity. A corps of 10,000 Finnish troops is forming, and large bodies of Russian troops are on the road to strengthen the Russian military forces in the Grand Duchy. A serious conflict has taken place at Nyby between a Russian regiment and the Finnish inhabitants, in which several persons were killed and wounded. The Russians had been guilty of great excesses.

POLAND.—The insurgents have gained a victory at Kalisz, in the palatinate of Lask. The Russians suffered considerable loss. In the government of Mohilew the insurgents have occupied Gorki. On Thursday week 300 mounted insurgents, commanded by Rozycki, dispersed six Russian frontier posts, and afterwards entered Galicia, where the necessary measures were taken for disarming them. A sanguinary engagement has taken place near Grochow. On the 28th ult. Czachowski defeated four companies of Russian infantry and a squadron of cavalry at Bialobrzegi. The Russians were also defeated by Oborski on the 30th ult. at Konin. Engagements have taken place between the Russians and insurgents at Stawatycze and Czernk, on the Bug. A large number of waggons with wounded Russians arrived at Kalisch on Tuesday. The Russians returned from the engagement considerably reduced in numbers. The fight appeared to continue, since fresh troops were despatched on Tuesday for the scene of action. Up to that time the insurgents had remained masters of the field, having captured two cannon.

ITALY.—In the Chamber of Deputies on Friday the new President delivered a speech, in which he declared that he recognised in his election a homage rendered by the Chamber to the political principles of the late Count Cavour, whose fellow-labourer he had been. This speech was received with applause. The Chamber then deputed the President to appoint a committee to draw up a reply to the King's Speech. Signor Minghetti introduced several financial and administrative Bills, and expressed a hope that these new laws would come into force on the 1st January, 1864, and produce results as soon as possible. "The financial plan of Italy," he said, "will thus correspond with the confidence shown by financial Europe." The Minister for Foreign Affairs laid on the table some diplomatic documents relating chiefly to the relations of the kingdom with the Papal States, the Polish question, Switzerland, and Servia. On Saturday the Brigandage Commission introduced a Bill giving the Prefects exceptional power to proclaim by law the provinces infected by brigandage. During the Parliamentary recess this proclamation is to be made by Royal decree. On Monday the draught of the Address was read in the Senate. It states that perfect harmony exists between the powers of the State to hasten the work of unification. The Senate approves the policy of the Government in re-establishing good relations with the great Powers, and in concluding the convention with France for the suppression of brigandage, and promises its loyal support in the completion of the general organisation of the State. The draught address was agreed to. Prince Humbert, the heir-apparent to the Crown, presided on Monday at the ceremony of letting water into the Grand Cavour Canal. An immense concourse assembled to witness the proceedings. The political trials at Rome commenced on the 29th ult. Chevalier Fausti spoke for two hours in his defence. The decision of the Tribunal has not yet been made public. It is said that the Pontifical Government is preparing a reply to the assertions of Lord Palmerston relative to the state of things in the States of the Church. This determination is said to have been approved by all the Catholic Powers.

TURKEY.—Fuad Pasha was nominated Grand Vizier on Monday. He will retain the portfolio of Minister of War, with Halil Pasha as his deputy. Emir Pasha has been appointed Chancellor of the Divan, and Commissioner in the Conference on the affairs of the Herzegovina, in the place of Zia Bey. The majority of the foreign officers in the Turkish army have claimed their discharge, in order to take part in the Polish insurrection. Several Italian and Hungarian officers belonging to the Italian service have arrived at Constantinople on their way to join General Turr in the Principalities. An English merchant vessel was run into and sunk off Constantinople on the night of the 29th ult. by the Austrian Lloyd's steamer Pluto. The crew of the English vessel were saved, but the captain's wife and children were drowned.

CIRCASSIA.—The new camp of the Russians was totally routed by the Circassians in the beginning of last month. A few of the Russians escaped, all the rest were killed or made prisoners.

INDIA.—Intelligence from Teheran, viâ Bagdad, announces the death of Sultan Achmet Khan, at Herat. His son continues the defence of the city.

JAPAN.—Great excitement prevailed at Yokohama pending the Japanese reply to the despatch of the British Government. The British residents at Yokohama held a meeting on the 3d of April.

CHINA.—Accounts from Shanghai of April 22, state that Koo-shang has surrendered. The siege of Chiansu has been raised. Taelsom (?) has surrendered, and the garrison has declared for the Imperialists.

COCHIN CHINA.—Advices from Saigon announce the return of Admiral Bonnard to that place from Hué and his subsequent departure for France. It was supposed that the Emperor had ratified the treaty with the French Government, confirming the proclamation of the colony of Saigon as French territory made on the 1st January.

AUSTRALIA.—The Melbourne Parliament was opened on the 24th April. The first intercolonial conference has finished satisfactorily. Australia challenges England to a horse-race, to come off at Victoria, for 10,000*l*.

UNITED STATES.—General Grant occupied Jackson, Mississippi, in the rear of Vicksburg, on the 14th ult., having previously had a brisk fight at Raymond and Mississippi Springs, driving the Confederates from those places towards Jackson. In his official despatch he states that General Joseph Johnstone commanded the Confederates, who, after three hours' desperate fighting, returned northward. The Federals, after destroying the State Capital and public and private property to an amount of between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000 dollars, evacuated the city. The latest intelligence (to the 18th) is from Confederate sources, both official and private. It recounts an obstinate but indecisive battle between General Grant and General Pemberton, at Edwards' Station, on the 16th. General Pemberton, with 12,000 men, is said to have sustained himself against the Federals, who were 24,000 strong, and to have fallen back in good order, at night, to his intrenchments beyond the Big Black River. General Grant afterwards proceeded northward some eight miles, where he was again confronted by General Johnstone. Official reports received in Washington to the 20th ult., say that General Grant has captured Haines Bluff and the entire works of Vicksburg, with a large number of prisoners and 57 guns. The battle was still raging, with the prospect of capturing the entire Confederate force in Vicksburg. General Grant then held Jackson, the Black River Bridge, and Haines Bluff. This news was generally considered highly favourable to the Federals, and had relieved the Government of Washington from great anxiety, as it had previously been feared that General Grant might be decoyed by the Confederates into an incautious advance from his base at Grand Gulf, and that his army might be eventually surrounded and forced to capitulate. Admiral Porter, with his own fleet and a portion of Farragut's gun boats, took possession of Alexandria, 70 miles up the Red River, on the 6th ult. On the same day General Banks's forces arrived at Alexandria, forming a junction with Admiral Porter. Alexandria was abandoned by the Confederates, who retreated to Schreveport, and took their gun boats above Red River Falls. The capture of Alexandria interferes with the Confederate supplies from Texas and Arkansas. On the nights of the 8th and 9th inst. the batteries at Port Hudson were bombarded by Admiral Farragut's mortar fleet and gunboats. No response was made by the Confederates on the first night, but on the second the firing on both sides was very heavy, continuing for several hours. The Northern press think that Grant, Porter, and Farragut's present movements will ensure the opening of the Mississippi. 30,000 Confederates, with 14 pieces of artillery, are reported to have crossed the Cumberland River and again invaded Kentucky, with the view of flanking General Rosencrans and compelling him to abandon his position at Murfreesborough. Twenty-eight Confederate regiments are stated to be at Norris Town, East Tennessee, for the same purpose. Colonel Grierson, with a brigade of Illinois and Iowa cavalry from General Grant's army, has made an extraordinary raid, passing from Tennessee through the heart of Mississippi, and reaching safely Bâton Rouge, Louisiana. He is said to have travelled 800 miles in 17 days, destroying 4,000,000 dollars worth of property and portions of most important railroads, and to have captured 1000 prisoners and 1200 horses. Two Federal despatch steamers, plying between Roanoke Island and Norfolk, were captured by the Confederates on the 15th ult. On the 19th two Federal regiments, which were advancing from Suffolk to a given point by parallel roads, mistook each other for the enemy; a spirited engagement ensued, and several men in each regiment were killed and wounded before the error was discovered. The position of the Army of the Potomac is to be changed from the line of the Rappahannock to a point unnamed, where its presence is likely to afford greater security to Washington in case of an advance upon the capital by General Lee. Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, has offered to raise 50,000 Volunteers in that State for the defence of Washington. The offer has been accepted by the President. The assumption of the command of the army by General Halleck, and the supercession of Mr. Seward and Mr. Stanton by General Butler and Mr. Sumner, are asserted to be changes not unlikely to take place. It was reported from Washington that the President has commuted Mr. Vallandigham's sentence from imprisonment in Fort Warren to transportation to the Confederate States, and that he was to be sent forthwith to Louisville en route to General Rosencrans, who was to deliver him, under a flag of truce, to General Bragg. A meeting has been held at Albany, to protest against Mr. Vallandigham's arrest and sentence, at which a letter from Governor Seymour was read, characterizing the arrest as an act which had brought dishonour upon the country, which was full of danger to its citizens, and which bore upon its front a conscious violation of law and justice. Resolutions were adopted denouncing the assumption of military power by the Government or its officials, asserting the right of free speech, and calling upon Mr. Lincoln to liberate Mr. Vallandigham. A mass meeting on the same subject was held at Indianapolis, Indiana, on the 20th, when speeches were made denunciatory of the war and the arbitrary acts of the Government, especially in the arrest of Mr. Vallandigham. 40 or 50 persons were arrested for carrying concealed weapons, and shouting for President Davis in the streets. As the railway trains were leaving the city in the evening, shots were fired from the windows at the Soldiers' Home and the houses along the route. The trains were then stopped by the military, and about 500 pistols and revolvers taken from the passengers. General Francis Meagher's resignation of the command of the Irish Brigade was accepted by the President on the 14th ult. When this brigade took the field it was 5000 strong, it now numbers less than 400 men. The remainder have either fallen in battle, died of their wounds or disease contracted in camp, been taken prisoners, or deserted. Mr. Seward's reply to the French note, inviting the American Cabinet to join diplomatic action with the great Powers in favour of Poland, refuses the co-operation of the Washington Cabinet on the ground that America can never deviate from her traditional policy of non-intervention, except in cases of evident necessity. The Federal steamer R. R. Cuyler, cruising off Mobile, captured the steamer Eugénie while attempting to run the blockade. The Eugénie was fitted out at New York some weeks since, and despatched to Havannah, viâ Nassau, for the purpose, it is now supposed, of carrying arms and ammunition to the Confederates. The British steamer Linnet has also been captured.

MEXICO.—Accounts from Puebla to the 30th of April, published by the New York journals, say that the French have had two further conflicts with the Mexicans, in the first of which the Mexicans held their ground, and in the second remained masters of the field, capturing 150 Zouaves. Juarez has left for Comonfort's army, to urge offensive operations.

BRAZILS.—The opening of the Brazilian Chambers took place on the 3d of May. The Emperor, in his speech on the occasion, said that the solution of the difficulty with England depended on the King of the Belgians. The Chambers, in the address which they unanimously adopted in reply to the Imperial speech, said:—"All Brazilians are ready to make the sacrifices necessary to maintain the honour of Brazil."

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.—The House reassembled to-day after the Whitsuntide recess. Railway Accidents.—Lord BROUGHAM inquired whether the Government intended to bring in any measure to diminish the speed of railway trains. He had himself suggested at the Liverpool Congress of the Social Science Association that the speed of trains should be limited by law to 25 miles per hour, but had been opposed by several eminent engineers. The late dreadful accident on the Brighton line near Streatham had, he believed, occurred from the needless velocity at which the train was driven.—Earl GRANVILLE said that the Government did not intend to interfere by legislation on the subject.—The Earl of HARDWICKE said that accidents on railways were to be attributed not so much to the speed of the trains as originally arranged, but to the increased speed at which the engines were driven in order to make up for delays caused by defective administration.—The Burial Service.—Lord EBURY moved an address to the Crown praying for a Royal commission to consider what steps should be taken to obviate the evils arising from the present compulsory and indiscriminate use of the burial service of the Church of England. Clergymen were now compelled to read the service in all cases under a penalty; and although the body about to be interred might be that of a notorious drunkard or professed unbeliever, and the clergyman might have conscientious scruples as to reading certain passages of the service, he had no alternative but to comply. Under these circumstances he was of opinion that the subject was one well worthy the attention of a Royal commission.—The Earl of DESART opposed the motion, and moved that it be considered that day six months.—The Archbishop of CANTERBURY could not agree to a course which would afford an opening for a wide and extensive revision of the Liturgy. At the same time, he thought there were portions of the burial service which were open to exception. He did not see why a clergyman should be exposed to penalties for conscientiously objecting to read the service over the body of a person who had died in the open avowal of disbelief in the truths of Christianity. For his own part, nothing would induce him to comply in such a case, and he would prefer incurring the risk of any proceedings that might be taken against him.—Earl GRANVILLE recommended Lord Ebury to withdraw the motion, although he thought a clear case had been made out against the retention of some of the expressions used in the burial service.—The Archbishop of YORK said that if the matter were to be left to the feelings of individual clergymen, 12,000 or 13,000 new judges would be created in the different parishes of the kingdom.—The Bishop of LONDON said he should have no hesitation in advising his clergy to omit the passages in the service if they could not use them conscientiously. At the same time he hoped that Lord Ebury would rest satisfied with the discussion which had taken place, and would not divide the House. He assured him that the subject should receive full consideration from the Episcopal bench.—The Duke of MARLBOROUGH thought the question was one which could be dealt with better by Convocation than by a Royal Commission.—Earl STANHOPE was opposed both to a Royal commission and to Convocation, and recommended that the bench of Bishops should be authorised by the Crown to consider this important subject.—Earl GREY thought it would be better to adjourn the debate for a month, in order to allow longer time for consideration of the question.—The LORD CHANCELLOR agreed in this suggestion, and protested against the Bishop of London advising his clergy on his own authority to contravene the law.—After some remarks by Earl RUSSELL and the Bishop of St. DAVID'S, Lord EBURY withdrew his motion conditionally on a measure being introduced by the bench of Bishops. The Savings Banks Moneys Bill, the Stock Certificates to Bearer Bill, and the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill passed through committee.

TUESDAY.—The Savings Banks Moneys Bill was read a third time and passed.

THURSDAY.—Brazils.—The Earl of MALMESBURY gave notice that on Tuesday, the 16th inst., he will call attention to the state of our relations with the Brazils. The Telegraphs Bill was referred to a Select Committee.

FRIDAY.—Duchy of Cornwall Management Bill.—The Duke of NEWCASTLE moved that the House go into committee on this Bill. He said that the property of the Prince of Wales was held under a charter given by Edward III. to the Black Prince, and the great desire of the King was to make it inalienable. The charter deprived the Princes of power to grant the leases of the property of the Duchy beyond their own lives; and up to the reign of William IV. the arrangements produced most inconvenient results. At the time of the Queen's accession the income from the property was only 11,000*l*., but in consequence of the prudent management of the Prince Consort, it now yielded an income of 50,000*l* per annum. The present Bill was intended to prevent the imposition of fines in connection with leases, and to enact the lengths of leases granted by the Council. It provided that for lands the leases should not extend beyond 30 years, and leases of houses should not be for longer periods than 99 years.—Lord BROUGHAM bore testimony to the great ability of the Prince Consort in the management of the Duchy of Cornwall, and after a short conversation the House went into Committee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—Condition of Turkey.—Mr. GREGORY called attention to the condition of the Turkish empire and its dependencies, and moved for papers on the subject. He reviewed at some length the policy adopted by her Majesty's Ministers in upholding an empire which was in the last stage of decrepitude and decay. Constantly recurring insurrections on the one hand, and threatened massacres on the other, were but the premonitory symptoms of an impending dissolution; and, in anticipation of that event, he urged upon her Majesty's Government the duty of following such a course with regard to Turkey as would render the break up as innocuous as possible, so that England would not be found fighting on behalf of Mahometan barbarism as it is, against Christian civilisation as it might be.—Mr. B. COCHRANE commented upon the improvidence and expenditure of the Turkish Government, and stated that the personal expenditure alone of the Sultan was at the rate of nine millions per annum. He did not wish to see Turkey wiped off the map of Europe, but after all the sacrifices which we had made to secure the independence of that empire, we were justified in demanding that the pledges given in respect to the Christian population should be fulfilled.—After some remarks from Mr. GRANT DUFF, in the course of which an unsuccessful attempt was made to count out the House, Mr. LAYARD vindicated the policy of the Government, and urged that it would be impossible for any one who had not travelled in the East to form a correct estimate of the condition of affairs there. Referring to the state of Servia, he contended that the Porte had strictly performed its treaty obligations, while the Servians, under their present ruler, had violated them both as regards Turkey and the great European Powers. He could not justify the recent bombardment of Belgrade, but it was due to the Turkish Government to state that, when apprised of the circumstance, they at once dismissed the pasha. There was a time when he entertained great hope of the future of Servia; but he owned that the recent acts of its present prince had completely changed his opinions. With regard to the general state of Turkey he read numerous reports of British consuls in different provinces, showing that the grievances of the Christian population under the Sultan's rule were not attributable to the Turks, but to the Christian bishops and priests, and that security to life and property had greatly increased. He granted that the administration of justice in the remoter districts was still very defective, and that much difficulty was experienced in getting the local tribunals to receive the evidence of Christian witnesses, but the Turkish Government were using their best efforts to remove such civil disabilities. As to the finances, the fact that the Porte had allowed the agents of England and France to examine the whole of their revenue and expenditure, taken with the reports of Lord Hobart and Mr. Foster on the subject, afforded the strongest proof of the desire of the Government to improve the administration and put the finances on a proper footing. The trade of Turkey too had greatly increased, roads were in course of construction, fiscal reforms had been introduced, custom-house abuses had been abolished, and more had been done by the Turks in the course of the past year for the cultivation of cotton than in any other part of the world. In short he believed that such was the elasticity of Turkish resources that the revenue would in a short time be doubled. He had great faith in the future of the Ottoman empire, and he was persuaded that the policy of England towards that country would more than anything else shed lustre on the reputation of the First Minister of the Crown.—Mr. MAGUIRE was of opinion that Mr. Layard had drawn far too favourable a sketch of the condition of Turkey; that the Government was corrupt at the core, and that the best thing for the cause of Christianity and the civilisation of Europe was to sweep Turkey back into Asiatic barbarism.—Lord H. SCOTT considered that maladministration of the empire affected not only the Christian but the Mussulman population; while the condition of the Turkish prisons was far more deplorable than even of Southern Italy.—Mr. COBDEN said that the question of Servia had lately been brought before the public by special agents from that country, the chief complaint against Turkey being the maintenance of the fortress of Belgrade. That place was, however, of no real use to Turkey, for she had no possessions within 200 miles of it; it was kept up at considerable cost to the Turkish Government, and its maintenance was to be attributed in great part to the perverseness of the Foreign Office. The real question was whether our policy was to be for the interests of the Christian population of Turkey or for those of the Mahometan. He dwelt especially upon the rejection of the evidence of Christians in the courts of justice as an indication of the barbarous usages of the country, and said he believed that Lord Palmerston was the only statesman in Europe who had faith in the reformation of the government or the prosperity of the empire.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that it was undoubtedly the duty of the English Government to uphold the civil and political privileges of the Christian subjects of the Ottoman Empire. It was also our duty to be loyal to our treaties with the Porte, but we were likewise bound to see that the obligations into which Turkey had entered were faithfully carried out. He would be a bold man who should maintain that the dominion of the Turks had been productive of happiness to mankind; but the existence of an Ottoman Power in Europe was an established fact, and if we were not prepared to encourage a general crusade against it we should not enter upon a policy that might prove the source of greater evils. After some remarks by Mr. GRIFFITH in reply, the motion for papers was withdrawn, and the House went into Committee of Supply pro formâ. The orders of the day were postponed, and the House adjourned to Monday.

MONDAY.—The Exhibition Building.—In reply to Lord J. MANNERS, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that an arrangement had been come to, subject to the approval of Parliament, for the purchase of the interest of the Commissioners of the Exhibition of 1851 in the site of the present building for 120,000*l*., and for the purchase of the building itself, less the annexes, for 80,000*l*. Ventilation of the House.—Mr. D. GRIFFITH asked whether it would not better to ventilate the House by opening the windows rather than by shutting them and pumping up the air from the cellars beneath.—Mr. COWPER said the air was not pumped up from the cellars, but that it was washed in a stream of pure water and afterwards passed through clean canvas, so as to intercept all floating impurities. In cold weather the air was warmed, and in warm weather it was iced, the object being to obtain a uniform temperature within the chamber of 64°. Federal Recruiting in Ireland.—In answer to Mr. HORWOOD, Sir R. PEEL said there was reason to believe that a great many young men in Ireland had been induced by their friends in the Federal States, at the instance of the Federal Government, to take passage for America, with the intention of enlisting in the army. The Government were making inquiries, and would do all in their power to put an end to the practice.—On the report of the Inland Revenue Bill, Mr. HUNT moved to substitute for clause 21, altering the law relating to occasional licences, a clause enacting that the consent of one justice of the peace only shall be necessary for the granting of such licence, and that the hours during which an occasional licence shall authorise the sale of beer, spirits, or wine shall extend from sunrise to one hour after sunset.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER did not oppose the motion, which was agreed to.—On the motion of the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, new clauses were added empowering the Commissioners of Taxes for any division of a county to hold their meetings within an adjoining city or other place of exclusive jurisdiction, and authorising the deduction of income tax from coupons on stock certificates, although the half-yearly payment be under 50*s*.—Mr. HUNT moved to add a clause exempting from stamp duty securities and appointments made pursuant to the Highways Act of last Session.—The motion was opposed by the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, as extending the objectionable system of exemptions. The motion, after a short debate, was negatived upon a division by 146 to 116. The Bill was then recommitted, in order that certain other clauses relating to railways and publicans' licences to sell tobacco might be added. Patriotic Fund Asylum.—On the order for going into committee of supply, Mr. J. ABEL SMITH called attention to the resignation of the majority of the ladies' committee of the Royal Victoria Patriotic Asylum; and to the circumstances that one girl had been burned to death while undergoing a sentence of solitary confinement, that another of 16 had been flogged in the establishment, and that the act had been condoned by the executive committee.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON, on the part of the War Office, repudiated all control over the institution in question.—Sir J. PAKINGTON, as a royal commissioner, said that the majority of the ladies' committee had resigned because the executive committee refused to dismiss the lady superintendent and the chaplain. A resolution was, however, passed by the committee disapproving and regretting the conduct of the lady superintendent and the chaplain. They also disapproved the whipping of the girl, and had taken steps to prevent the recurrence of such a punishment. At a subsequent meeting of the commissioners Earl Grey brought forward a resolution disapproving of the retention of the lady superintendent and chaplain, but on a division it was rejected by seven to three. Many reforms had lately been introduced into the asylum, and that Lord St. Leonard's, one of the minority in the division, had expressed himself satisfied with the manner in which it was now conducted.—After some observations from Mr. KINNAIRD and Mr. BRISCOE, the subject dropped, and the House went into committee of supply on the Civil Service Estimates. The principal questions discussed had reference to the Royal Parks, and various suggestions were made with a view to their more economical management. The Fountains in Trafalgar Square were also brought under review, and Mr. BRISCOE suggested that in order to prevent their continuing to be objects of public derision, the squirts should be done away with, and the basins filled up with earth and planted with azaleas and rhododendrons. It was likewise incidentally mentioned that a sum of upwards of 6000*l*. was about to be expended on Stables for the Speaker, but that they were at such a distance from the right hon. gentleman's official residence that a further sum of 80*l*. would be required for an electric telegraph to communicate with them. With regard to the paintings in the Queen's Robing Room at the House of Lords, Mr. GREGORY complained of the delay which had taken place in completing the works undertaken by Messrs. Herbert and Dyce, to whom considerable sums of money had already been paid. Mr. Cowper explained that the works in question were necessarily of a slow and tedious character, but that the artists had assured him that they were making steady progress with them. Several votes were agreed to, and at midnight the CHAIRMAN reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again. The Dockyards Protection Act Amendment Bill, the Cayman Islands Bill and the Alkali Works Regulation Bill were read a second time. The Vice-Admiralty Courts Bill passed through Committee. The Lords' amendments to the Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill were considered when Mr. HUNT proposed to restore the clause struck out by the Lords, providing that the expenses of the commission of inquiry should be paid by the borough in respect of which charges of corruption might be reported. On a division the motion was negatived by 61 to 40, and the amendments were agreed to. The Port Erin Harbour (Isle of Man) Bill was read a second time.—Lord PALMERSTON, in moving the second reading of the African Slave Trade Treaty Bill, complimented the United States' Government upon the liberal manner in which they had acted with reference to the object of the treaty. After a short discussion, the Bill was read a second time. On the order for the third reading of the Offences (South Africa) Bill, Mr. ADDERLEY opposed the Bill, and moved that it be read a third time that day three months. The Bill was defended by Mr. C. FORTESCUE, and opposed by Mr. A. MILLS. Ultimately the Bill was recommitted, but the CHAIRMAN was ordered to report progress. Other Bills were forwarded a stage. The Admiralty Court (Ireland) Bill was withdrawn.

TUESDAY.—The Alexandra.—In answer to Mr. HORWOOD and Mr. HORSFALL, The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said he had every reason to believe that the case of the Alexandra would come on for trial on Monday week, but he could not furnish copies of the informations upon which the Government had taken action. Maynooth.—Mr. WHALLEY moved that the House should resolve itself into a committee to consider the Act for the endowment of the College of Maynooth with a view to its repeal, due regard being had to vested rights and interests

He contended that the Act endowing the institution had proved a failure, and had not fulfilled the expectations of its promoters. Under its operation the Jesuit or Ultramontane system of instruction had been substituted for the Gallican, and all he asked was that the grant should no longer be removed from the control of the House of Commons, so that the college might have the opportunity of defending itself from the charges that had been brought against it. The motion was seconded by Mr. Somes, and opposed by Mr. Black.—Sir R. Peel defended the Act by which the college was endowed, and said that regard being had to the peculiar circumstances of the country, and to the great preponderance of Roman Catholics over Protestants, it would be unjust and ungenerous on the part of the members of the Church of England to exclude their Roman Catholic fellow-subjects from the educational advantages which they derived from the efficient maintenance of the College at Maynooth.—Mr. Newdegate supported the motion, and urged that the College of Maynooth having become a mere monastic institution; and seeing that even in Roman Catholic countries like Spain it had been found necessary to reduce such establishments, it was an anomaly to give them a Parliamentary support in a Protestant country.—After a reply from Mr. Whalley, amid impatient calls for a division, the motion was negatived by 198 to 100. Sea Fisheries.—Mr. Fenwick moved an address to the Crown for a royal commission of inquiry into the sea fisheries of the United Kingdom, with the view of increasing the supply of a favourite and nutritious article of food for the benefit of the public. He cited a number of statistics to show the material importance of the sea fisheries, and stated that the amount of capital embarked in them was upwards of 10 millions sterling, whilst they gave employment to nearly 250,000 of the bravest and most adventurous of our seafaring community. But owing to the want of proper regulations, the system of beam trawling as at present carried on, in shallow waters especially, threatened in course of time to destroy the fisheries altogether. —Mr. Cave seconded the motion, and noticed how hardly the law pressed upon our deep-sea oyster dredgers.—Mr. Clay dissented from some of the statements of Mr. Fenwick, and thought the proposed inquiry not at all called for.—Mr. Bentinck believed that, though the inquiry would not do much harm, it would not do much good.—Mr. Collier considered that Mr. Fenwick had not made out sufficient ground for a Royal Commission, which would cost much and occupy much time.—Mr. Liddell supported the motion.—Mr. M. Gibson said that the proposed Commission would have a very wide field of inquiry, without any definite object. Negotiations were going on between this country and France for a joint Commission, the inquiries of which would touch some of the questions raised by Mr. Fenwick, and he did not think it advisable to appoint another Commission of such a roving character. The motion was supported by Colonel Dickson, Mr. R. Hodgson, and Mr. M'Mahon, and was carried on a division by 50 to 27.—Mr. Hassard called attention to the state of laws relating to Charitable Donations and Bequests in Ireland, and was proceeding with his speech when the House was counted out at a quarter-past 8 o'clock.

Wednesday.—Public Houses Bill.—Mr. Somes moved the second reading of this Bill, stating that its object was to close public-houses on Sundays. He had been assailed by the organ of the public-house and gin-palace interest for attempting to induce the House to legislate on the subject. He denied that he was actuated by any bigotted motive, or by any desire to enforce the proper observance of the Sabbath, or that the measure was intended to restrict the liberties of the working people. Upwards of 4000 petitions with 700,000 signatures had been presented to the House in favour of the Bill; whilst against it there were only 180 petitions signed by about 150,000 persons. A large proportion of the former was composed of working men, their wives and families; and so thoroughly convinced was he of the necessity of the measure, and of its value to the labouring classes, that, although he had been threatened with the loss of his seat if he persisted in giving it his support, he was prepared to incur even that penalty rather than shrink from the duty he had undertaken.—Mr. Pease seconded the motion. —Capt. Jervis moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. He contended that no real necessity existed for such a measure, and that the House was not called upon to legislate for a few drunkards, but for the great majority of the people who were not drunkards.—Mr. Ker Seymer seconded the amendment. He gave credit to the promoters of the measure for being influenced by the best and purest intentions, but in his opinion there were greater evils than drunkenness, and he believed that if the Bill were to pass into law, the result would be but to create a feeling of rankling discontent among a large class of the people.—Mr. Clay suggested that the measure should be made a permissive one.—Mr. Horsfall said that it was the essence of the measure that it put the public-house interest upon the same footing with other trades. Under the existing law licensed victuallers had almost a sole monopoly of Sunday trading. He believed the Bill would prove a social, national, and lasting blessing to every class in the community.—Mr. W. Martin opposed the Bill on the ground that legislation could not stop drunkenness; and Mr. Baines supported it because he thought it would.—Mr. Packe condemned the measure as likely to perpetrate an injustice upon moderate consumers.—Mr. Lawson believed that if the Bill were passed it would do more for the improvement of the moral and social condition of the people than any other measure that had received the sanction of Parliament for many years past. He thought however that London and Westminster might be excepted from its provisions.—Sir G. Grey said that if the Bill passed the result would be that not a single glass of beer could be sold from 11 o'clock on Saturday night until 6 o'clock on Monday morning throughout the whole of England and Wales, and in his opinion it would be impossible to enforce the provisions of any Act with such an object. It would inflict much inconvenience on large masses of workpeople, and probably cause a violent reaction to the risk of those salutary regulations and restrictions which now existed by law. He had no reason to think that drunkenness was increasing, on the contrary there was evidence that it was on the decrease. He should oppose the further progress of the measure on the ground of its violent, rash, and precipitate character.—Mr. H. Berkeley also opposed the Bill, declaring that he had no sympathy with water-drinkers.—Mr. Adderley was opposed to the more stringent provisions of the Bill, but was ready to vote for the second reading, in order that it might be amended in committee.—Sir M. Peto, as one of the largest employers of labour in the country, took upon himself to say that the working classes were not prepared for legislation of this nature.—Mr. Newdegate said he should vote for the principle of the Bill, in order that it might be rendered permissive in committee.—Sir H. Cairns was favourable to the principle affirmed in the preamble, and would vote for the second reading. After some remarks by Sir J. Shelley, Mr. Sheridan, Mr. Ward-Hunt, Mr. Hardy, Mr. Ayrton, and Lord H. Vane, the House divided, when the amendment was carried by 278 to 103. The Bill was therefore lost. The Sheep and Cattle (Scotland) Bill was read a second time. The Fisheries (Ireland) Bill was read a second time pro formâ. The Vice-Admiralty Courts Bill was read a third time and passed. In committee of ways and means the Chancellor of the Exchequer moved a resolution fixing the charge for Occasional Licences to Sell Beer, Spirits, or Wine at 2*s*. 6*d*. per day, such licence not to exceed six days in all. The motion was agreed to.—Mr. Bruce obtained leave to bring in a Bill to consolidate and amend the acts relating to the Payment of Regimental Debts, and the distribution of the effects of officers and soldiers in case of death, and to make provision for the cases of desertion, insanity, and other cases.

Thursday.—The Exhibition Building.—In answer to a question from Mr. Gregory, Lord Palmerston said that no design by Captain Fowke, or any other person, for the alteration or completion of the Exhibition Building, had been submitted to the Government.—Mr. Gregory gave notice that, on the proposal to vote a grant of public money for the purchase of the Building, he intended to move a direct negative.—Mr. Tollemache and Colonel Pennant complained that the Chancellor of the Exchequer had charged the Holyhead Harbour Committee, of which they were members, with being an unfair and partial committee.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer disclaimed any intention of implying that either Mr. Tollemache or Colonel Pennant could be influenced by personal considerations.—Colonel H. Herbert warmly rebuked the Chancellor of the Exchequer for having used language insulting to the committee.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer denied that he had used insulting terms, or had travelled beyond what he considered to be his duty.—Mr. Hennessey, Mr. Disraeli, and Colonel French were of opinion that the Government should have moved to rescind the motion for the nomination of the committee rather than have imputed unworthy motives to them. After some observations from Mr. Bright, the subject dropped. On the order for going into Committee on the Volunteers Bill, Mr. Bagwell moved that it is impolitic any longer to exclude Ireland from the operation of the Volunteer system, and unjust, should such exclusion continue, to tax Ireland for the support of English Volunteers. He complained of the invidious distinction created by this exclusion, and said that as long as a difference was made between Ireland and other parts of the kingdom, Ireland would continue to be a source of weakness and uneasiness to the Government.—Major Knox regarded the motion as made only for an electioneering purpose. He did not think the proposal a safe one, and, as an Irish member, he should oppose it.—Sir D. L. Evans and Colonel French supported the motion.—The Marquis of Hartington said it was not through any want of confidence in the loyalty of the people that the Volunteer system was not extended to Ireland, but, owing to religious animosities in some parts of the country, it was apprehended that if Volunteer corps were formed in Ireland they would assume a religious character and serious collisions might occur.—Lord Palmerston said the Government had no doubt that the Irish were in the main very loyal subjects, and, that, if an occasion should arise to call upon them to arm in defence of the country, they would manifest their loyalty. But in Ireland religious opinions had a tendency to call into operation that exuberant pugnacity which was a national quality, and which the Government wished to reserve for a common enemy, and not to tempt the Irish, in order to keep their hands in, to exercise it upon each other. That was really the whole of the matter. After some observations by Mr. Maguire and Sir G. Bowyer, in support of the motion, the House divided, when the motion was negatived by 156 to 45. The House then went into committee on the Bill. The 19th clause, which applied the provisions as to actual military service to Volunteers acting in the suppression of riots or tumults, was withdrawn. On clause 21, which sanctions the dismissal without appeal of Volunteers by the colonel in command, Sir R. Clifton moved an amendment, providing that the causes of dismissal should be committed to writing, and communicated to the accused by the adjutant of the corps, and that the existence and sufficiency of such causes should be judged by a court of inquiry consisting of members of the same corps.—Lord Elcho defended the clause on the ground that the power which it was proposed to give to commanding officers would not be abused.—Mr. Cox protested against the arbitrary power which the clause would give to commanders of corps. On a division, the amendment was negatived by 108 to 21. The clause was then agreed to. The remaining clauses were agreed to without opposition, and the Bill passed through committee. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates. On the vote of 4920*l*. for Embassy Houses Abroad, Lord R. Cecil moved as an amendment that the vote be reduced by 400*l*., the salary of the clerk of the works at the Embassy house at Pera. A discussion ensued in reference to the heavy annual charge for repairs of this residence, and a general opinion was expressed that so long as a permanent clerk of works was maintained so long would the expenditure be continued. On a division the amendment was carried by 74 to 68, and the vote as reduced was agreed to. Several votes were subsequently agreed to, including those for the New Public Offices, the demolition of the houses at the south side of Palace Yard, and other purposes. At midnight the Chairman was ordered to report progress.—The Inland Revenue Bill was recommitted. The African Slave Trade Treaty Bill passed through Committee. The Removal of Irish Poor Bill was read a second time. On the report of the Drainage and Improvement of Land (Ireland) Bill, a discussion arose as to the further amendments of which notice had been given by the Government, and which were ultimately agreed to. Other Bills were forwarded a stage.

Friday.—Lisburn Election.—The election committee reported that Mr. Barbour was not duly elected, and that he and his agents were guilty of bribery and treating. Ionian Islands.—In answer to Mr. Griffith and Lord J. Manners, Lord Palmerston said the Ionian Islands were erected into an independent State by treaty and not by any action of Parliament, and therefore any change that might be made in that condition would be made in the same manner in which the original arrangement was completed, namely, by treaty. Of course the cession could not take place without the consent of the parties who were to sign the treaty. Public Works.—On the order for going into Supply, Mr. B. Cochrane moved as an amendment, that for the sake of obtaining greater unity of design in our public buildings and with a view to efficiency and economy it is desirable that a permanent commissioner of public works and buildings should be appointed. [Left sitting.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

The Exhibition Building.—An estimate has been issued of the sum proposed to be voted by Parliament in the year ending March 31, 1864, for the purchase of land and purchase and alteration of buildings used for the purposes of the late International Exhibition. The total estimate is 484,000*l*., towards which, for the present year, 67,000*l*. are required for the purchase of the land from her Majesty's Commissioners for the year 1851; 80,000*l*. for the purchase of the existing building from the contractors; and 25,000*l*. for repairing, altering, and eventually completing the building, leaving the further amount that may be required at 312,000*l*.

Lancashire Relief Fund.—A meeting of the Mansion House Committee was held on Friday after an interval of a fortnight. The report stated that the total sum received up to that day was 494,954*l*., including 907*l*. interest which had accrued on money invested at call. Of this 408,183*l*. in all had been remitted to Lancashire and Cheshire. Letters were read from some of the local relief committees stating that, in consideration of the improved state of trade, they were enabled to suspend their relief operations for the present. Applications were made for aid in providing outfits for persons in the distressed districts to whom free passages had been offered to places in the colonies, showing that there is a growing desire to emigrate among the unemployed people. The committee made a grant towards the outfit of 14 persons at Manchester who are about to start for Quebec as pioneers, for the purpose of reporting fully to the Manchester Committee on all matters relating to the emigration of unemployed operatives. A small grant was also made to a committee at Carlisle towards outfits for persons in that neighbourhood. An application from a committee at Glossop for a similar purpose was deferred for further information, the chairman stating that the committee would be prepared to make grants towards outfits, though in no instance more than at the rate of 2*l.* a head, to any regularly organised committee who would see to the proper expenditure of the money. The Committee then made grants to the amount of 4,300*l.* for the ordinary purposes of relief, to be distributed by the local committees.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL.—A public meeting was held on Monday evening at the Bridge House Hotel to consider the insufficient provision now made to fulfil the objects of the charity of St. Thomas's Hospital, the unnecessary delay in fixing the site for the future hospital, and the unreasonable desire on the part of some of the Governors to remove the hospital to a distance from the poor of the neighbourhood. The chair was taken by Mr. John Locke, M.P., and there were present the principal guardians and vestrymen of St. George's and St. Saviour's, Southwark; Christchurch Blackfriars; Lambeth, Camberwell, and Bermondsey, and many other inhabitants of the parishes surrounding the locality in which the hospital has hitherto been established. The chairman in opening the proceedings said that by various charters and grants from the year 1213 the building and lands called St. Thomas's Hospital were granted for the benefit of the poor of Southwark, and there was no pretext whatever for removing it from them. Dr. Rendle, Mr. Newman, Mr. Legge, Mr. Bricknell, Mr. Vickers, Dr. E. B. Jones, Mr. Freeman, Dr. F. Jones, and Mr. Goddard addressed the meeting, chiefly in reference to the premature and unnecessary removal of the hospital from its old site, and to the comparative advantages of the Surrey Gardens and Bethlehem Hospital as the best situation for the new hospital. After a long discussion the following resolutions were carried unanimously:—

1. "That St. Thomas's Hospital, named in the Charter of Edward VI. 'The House of Poor People in Southwark,' having been established in Southwark now more than 300 years as 'a place and house for poor people to be there relieved and maintained,' and having before its removal afforded relief annually to upwards of 40,000 persons, mostly of the immediate neighbourhood, suffering from illness and accidents—it is the opinion of this meeting that the hospital should be rebuilt upon a site as near as possible to the poorer population of the neighbourhood in which it has always been, and to which it has done so much good service; and that in no case should it be rebuilt more distant from the old hospital than the site now occupied by Bethlehem, that behind Newington Church, or that known as the Surrey Gardens." 2. "That a deputation be appointed by this meeting to join the Committee of Parishes for the purpose of waiting upon the Governors of St. Thomas's Hospital with a copy of the resolutions now passed, and that the deputation be instructed respectfully, but firmly, to request their most serious attention to the subject, and also a second interview, as soon as convenient, for their decision. That, if it should be deemed necessary, the deputation should also seek an interview with the governors of Bethlehem, and that afterwards another public meeting should be called, if in the opinion of the Committee of Parishes it should appear desirable."

A general meeting of the Governors of the Hospital was held on Thursday to receive a report on the subject of a site for the new hospital. The report recommended the vacant ground behind Newington Church as the best that could be obtained, but Parliamentary powers would be necessary for the purchase. If that site could not be had, there was little to choose between the Surrey Gardens and Myatt's Ground in the Camberwell New Road. In the course of the discussion it was stated that there was no chance of coming to an understanding with the Governors of Bethlehem, and the site of West Square, near Bethlehem, was suggested, upon which Mr. South, the senior surgeon, said that no place could possibly be more unfit. It was ultimately agreed that the report should be printed and circulated, and that another meeting should be held in a fortnight to determine the question.

VISIT OF NEW ZEALAND CHIEFTAINS.—Thirteen New Zealanders, three of whom are women, and most of them chiefs, are now on a visit to this country, accompanied by the interpreter to the Colonial Government. The principal man among them is a youth of 17, upwards of 6ft. in height. They are clothed in skins of various colours, their faces are painted, and their hair is stuck full of feathers; they carry their peculiar weapons, and some of them are tattoed. They intend to travel through the kingdom and to visit the principal dockyards, arsenals, public institutions, manufactories, and other places of interest, in order to obtain such general information respecting the greatness and power of England as may prove a lasting benefit to themselves and to their several tribes on their return to New Zealand. They have already visited the Crystal Palace, which appeared to excite their attention in a most extraordinary manner, particularly the collection of Ferns in the tropical parts of the building, which they said was the strongest reminiscence of their own country they had as yet seen. They were also present at a meeting at the Mansion House last week, when Kameriara Te Hautakiri Wharepapa, the son of one of Kiongi's celebrated generals, made the following speech in a full sonorous voice, which was translated by the interpreter:—

Ladies and gentlemen of England,—I salute you all. I am much pleased at this opportunity of appearing before so large an assembly at the house of your chief magistrate. Some time ago when the English first came to my land, some of my people were being eaten by the others. But the book of the good Lord of England was brought to New Zealand, and when the Gospel came the evil practices of our forefathers ceased, and we were allowed to live as you live. One of my forefathers visited England in the reign of King George IV. He brought back nothing good. He brought back fire-arms, with which to destroy a great number of his own people. But we are come for a different purpose. We have not come to purchase fire-arms to destroy our own countrymen—we have come to seek for knowledge, which we wish to take back with us. Ladies and gentlemen of England, my heart is very glad, and now for the first time I live. I have seen the first gentleman of England, and I shall not rest until I have seen the Queen of England. We have come to England to see how the English people will behave to us, and we shall write back home once a month to our friends and tell them of what we do and see. We have no desire except to live in peace and harmony with Europeans. We have none but good feelings towards Europeans who come to live in our land. Ladies and gentlemen of England, this is all I have to say!

THE ECLIPSE.—A total eclipse of the moon took place on Monday night. Shortly after nine o'clock the face of the moon became partially obscured, and at five minutes to eleven the eclipse became a total one, and lasted until half-past eleven, at which time the moon resumed her natural appearance.

MURDER OF A WIFE IN THE CITY ROAD.—An inquest was held on Tuesday, on the body of Mrs. Hannah Webb, aged 40, whose death was said to have been caused by the violence of her husband. After hearing evidence at great length, the jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against James Webb, who had been committed by the police magistrate on the previous day for trial on the capital charge.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that the deaths registered in London in the week ended Saturday, May 30, were 1,296. The average number in the corresponding weeks of the ten years 1853-62, corrected for increase of population, was 1,139. The present return is therefore 157 above the average. There were 68 deaths from smallpox, 46 from typhus, 78 from scarlatina, and 39 from measles. During the week the births of 1,005 boys and 992 girls, in all 1,997 children, were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1853-62 the average number was 1,770.

Provincial.

BILSTON.—A fatal boiler explosion took place on Saturday at the Old Iron Works of Messrs. Sparrow & Co., by which four men were killed, and 15 more wounded. The day and night men were changing their shifts of work, and during the few minutes of this occurrence the machinery stood still, and there was so great an accumulation of steam in the boiler that the boiler gave way. 200 men were on the premises at the time, and the wonder is that the loss of life was not greater.

LIVERPOOL.—A public meeting in the concert-room of St. George's Hall was announced for Wednesday last, for the purpose of expressing sympathy with the family of the late General Jackson, and of deciding upon the most appropriate way of paying a substantial tribute to his memory. The public meeting was subsequently abandoned, and a subscription towards the erection of a monument at Richmond was opened instead.

MANCHESTER.—At the weekly meeting of the Executive Committee on Monday, the hon. secretary reported that the receipts of the week had been 2,120*l.* 0*s.* 4*d.*; leaving a balance at the bank of 364,301*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.* Communications were read from various local committees, expressing their thanks for grants heretofore made to them, and adding the gratifying intimation that they would be enabled to dispense with further aid from the Central Committee during the summer months. Mr. Commissioner Farnall's weekly report stated that on the 23d ult. there was a decrease in the number of persons receiving relief, as compared with the previous week, of 5,822. Grants were made to 19 places, amounting to 3,130*l.*, with 285*l.* from the employment and school fund. The next meeting was ordered to be held on that day fortnight.

Ireland.

ADULTERATION OF WORKHOUSE SUPPLIES.—Dr. Cameron, "Public Analyst" to the City of Dublin, having been employed by the South Dublin Board of Guardians to examine the brandy and sugar supplied to the workhouse, has sent in a startling report. The so-called French brandy he found to be a spurious article, consisting of spirits of wine, flavoured with some such fruit as Prunes, and coloured with burnt sugar. The sugar he found extremely damp, containing a very large proportion of treacle, and a considerable amount of such impurities as sporules of fungus, particles of cane, albumen, and starch granules. It contained also in great abundance a species of acarus or mite, closely resembling in appearance and nature the insect which, by burrowing in the skin, produces itch. "It is no exaggeration," says Dr. Cameron, "to affirm that there cannot be less than 100,000 of these insects in every pound of sugar. In 10 grains weight I estimated 500, most of which were so large as to be distinctly visible to the naked eye." Such sugar is not only detrimental to health, but the least economical kind that can be employed, from its defective sweetening power. It was unanimously resolved that the contractors should be prosecuted.

THE EGMONT CASE.—The Lord Chancellor sat on Monday for the purpose of hearing this celebrated case, the leading facts of which were recently before the public when it was brought into the Court of Chancery in England. The hearing then took place before Vice-Chancellor Page Wood, who postponed the delivery of his judgment until the Court of Chancery in this country, where the bulk of the Egmont property is situated, should have decided on the present petition. The case excited so much interest that the court was crowded to inconvenience by the members of the bar and the general public. The Lord Lieutenant was present, and occupied a seat on the bench. The pleadings in the case occupy hundreds of brief sheets, while the correspondence referred to is equally voluminous. The petition of the Earl of Egmont recites the history of the family, and the connection of Edward Tierney with the late earl, as agent of his estates in Ireland and Wales; the present representative and principal respondent being the Rev. Sir William Lionel Darell, married to Edward Tierney's only daughter, and heiress of all the Tierney property. The Irish estates are in the county of Cork, known as the Churchtown and Kanturk estates. They contain 11,250 acres, and were at the time of Earl John's death of the annual value of 9,000*l.* or 10,000*l.*, the selling value being about 250,000*l.*, while the whole of the incumbrances amounted only to 101,000*l.* The reading of the affidavits filed on the part of the petitioner and of the various letters and documents occupied a considerable portion of the day. The Solicitor-General, Mr. Brewster, Q.C., Mr. Whiteside, Q.C., Mr. Chatterton, Q.C., Mr. Warren, Q.C., Mr. Owen and Mr. Davies, are the counsel for the petitioner. Serjeant Sullivan, Messrs. Walsh, Q.C., Ball, Q.C., C. Todd, and H. P. Jellett are engaged for the respondents.

Scotland.

PRECEDENCY OF EDINBURGH AND DUBLIN.—The committee charged with the arrangements for the ceremonial of uncovering the Memorial of the Exhibition of 1851 on the 10th inst., have had under consideration the position to be occupied in the procession by the representatives of the cities of Edinburgh and Dublin, and have decided that the Scottish capital is entitled to precedence over the Irish. The quartering of the arms on the Royal Shield gives a heraldic precedence to Scotland, and it appears that in all the great public ceremonies, such as coronations, which have occurred within the last hundred years, the officials of Scotland have been ranked before those of Ireland. At the coronation of George III. the Scottish peers, as on all other occasions, ranked as British peers (in terms of the 23d article of the Union) before the British peers of their own degree, created since 1707; while the Irish peers were ranked after all the English and Scottish of their degree. On the same occasion Ulster King at Arms ranked below Clarencieux and Norrey; while Lyon King at Arms ranked next to Garter. The same precedence was followed at the coronation of George IV., at which a larger number of officials were present, at that of William IV., at that of her present Majesty, and at the funeral of the Duke of Wellington.

Railways.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE BRIGHTON RAILWAY.—On Friday evening an appalling accident occurred to the 5 o'clock express train from Brighton to Victoria, by which four passengers were killed, and upwards of 30 others were more or less severely injured. The train arrived at Croydon 20 minutes after time, and in order to make up for this lateness, the driver put on the steam at a pressure so excessive as to cause the boiler to burst and the engine to leave the rails, dragging with it in its descent down an embanked part of the line between Streatham and Balham the entire train of 15 carriages. The force of the explosion was so great that the top of the boiler was actually thrown two fields off. All the carriages were capsized, and some of them reduced to splinters. Of others, the bottoms had fallen out, letting the travellers through to be torn and crushed beneath the wheels. Others had to be broken to pieces before the sufferers could be extricated. From others doors were wrenched off to be converted into litters. Any description of the ruin is impossible; rails, axles, and wheel tires, were thrown about in every direction, twisted into the most fantastic shapes like so many pieces of wire. The engine driver was so fearfully scalded that he died on Saturday in the hospital. The fireman was also dreadfully scalded and burnt, but hopes are entertained of his recovery. Mrs. Chilver, wife of Mr. T. F. Chilver, surgeon, of New Burlington Street, and the daughter of the late Sir Charles Clarke, Bart., the celebrated accoucheur, who was travelling with her husband, and was far advanced in the family way, was killed on the spot, as were two soldiers of the Grenadier Guards, who with two companies of the regiment, with their officers, Colonels Keppell and Burnaby, Capt. Norton, Lieut. Trotter, and Quartermaster Collins, in all 150 strong, were returning from their periodical rifle practice at Eastbourne. Besides the two Guardsmen killed on the spot, some 30 others were extricated with great difficulty and more or less wounded, one with his ribs fearfully fractured, and suffering from internal hæmorrhage. Among the other sufferers were the Rev. Dr Cureton, Canon of Westminster, and his family. Dr. Cureton was dreadfully injured about his face and legs. His daughter, Miss Blanche Cureton, had one of her legs fractured. His head nurse had some of her ribs broken, and her teeth were knocked out. The under nurse received several bruises. Two of the guards, whose break-van, being next to the engine, was completely smashed, had a most marvellous escape, one being whirled away with only a broken arm, and the other with only a few bruises. The officers in command, who were in a carriage at the end of the train, escaped unhurt. On Sunday a special telegraphic message was received by the commanding officers from her Majesty at Balmoral expressing her regret at the catastrophe, and her sympathy with the sufferers; and messages have since been sent daily through the Commander-in-Chief, informing her Majesty how the men have been going on. On Monday the Prince of Wales went to the hospital in person to inquire after the wounded men, all of whom are now in a fair way towards recovery.

RAILWAY TRAVELLING.—Dr. Waller Lewis, medical officer of the London Post Office, states in his report just issued that he has arrived at the following conclusions from observations of the health of the travelling officers of the Post Office:—That railway travelling has little, if any, injurious effect on the healthy, strong, well built persons, if the amount be not excessive and if they take moderate care of themselves; but that persons who take to habitual railway travelling after the age of 25 or 30 are more easily affected than those who begin earlier, and that the more advanced in age a traveller is the more easily is he affected by this sort of locomotion. Weak, tall, loosely-knit persons, and those suffering under various affections, more especially of the head, heart, and lungs, are very unsuited for habitual railway travelling.

Tim Whiffler made desperate efforts to retain his advantage, and kept Buckstone to his level, as in a most exciting race they rushed along, amid the cheers of thousands, and passed the chair at such a pace as horses have seldom passed it before, and without the difference of a fraction of an inch between them. There was the usual confusion, and cheers and counter cheers for both horses, whom the supporters of each were confident had each won until the signal for a dead heat went up. ### METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, June 1.

We have rather a larger supply of Beasts, and consequently trade is heavy, but there is not much reduction in price. The number of Sheep is also larger, and the demand very small, especially for heavy fat Sheep. Sizeable qualities meet with purchasers at about late rates; but other kinds are on the average lower. Calves and Lambs scarcely maintain Thursday's quotations. From Germany and Holland there are 250 Beasts, 3890 Sheep, and 219 Calves; from Spain, 340 Beasts; from Scotland, 250; from Norfolk and Suffolk, 3020; and 150 from the Northern and Midland counties.

THURSDAY, June 4.

Although the supply of Beasts is considerably smaller than on Thursday last, the demand has decreased so much that we cannot quote the same prices, and a clearance cannot be effected at the reduced quotations. The number of Sheep and Lambs is considerably larger, consequently trade is very bad, and a large proportion remain unsold. The choicest descriptions meet with purchasers at our quotations; but other kinds can scarcely be sold. Calves and Lambs are also lower. Our foreign supply consists of 129 Beasts, 1660 Sheep, and 556 Calves. Milch Cows, 120.

BRITISH WOOLS.—LONDON, June 5.

Our trade continues in a sound state, but consumers having provided themselves with a supply of many descriptions for their immediate wants, are not disposed to increase their stocks at the present very high rates demanded by the farmers.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, June 1.

The supply of Wheat from Essex and Kent to this morning's market was small, and met an active inquiry at the full prices of this day se'nnight. Foreign was inquired after, without leading to much business, and late rates were difficult to obtain. In the value of Barley, Beans, and Peas there was no alteration. Oats met a slow sale at last week's prices. For Flour the demand was very limited, and we do not alter our quotations.

FRIDAY, June 5.

The weather during the past week has been fine, and of a warm summer temperature. The general reports of the crops are good. The Wheat trade has been dull, with a tendency in prices to decline, excepting in some of the agricultural markets of the east coast. Business in spring corn remained inanimate, but previous values were maintained. Flour has been neglected, and quotations are nominal. Since Friday last 33 vessels have been reported off the coast. The floating trade has remained very quiet, and no alteration in prices is to be reported. In Paris (June 4), the Flour trade has remained quiet at late prices. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 39s. 9d. per 280 lbs. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 12,750 cwts. The finest descriptions of Wheat have advanced about 6d. per 480 lbs.; other sorts are unaltered, and business has been limited. The arrivals of English grain this week are very small, but of foreign large. To-day's market was badly attended, and Wheat was sold to a limited extent only, at Monday's prices for both English and foreign. Spring Corn of all descriptions was steady at late quotations.

LIVERPOOL, June 2.—We had a fair attendance of both town and country millers and dealers at this morning's market, but fine bright sunshine operated against business, and the demand for Wheat was very limited at Friday's quotations. Flour had a moderate inquiry, and good samples brought previous rates. Indian Corn was neglected, and 3d. per qr. cheaper. Oats and Oatmeal slow of sale. Beans declined 3d. per qr. Peas and Barley remain as last quoted. The market closes dull.

FRIDAY, June 5.—The market quiet, with little doing in Wheat and Flour, and prices favour buyers. Beans and Indian Corn unchanged. Oats and Oatmeal quiet but steady.

The above RANGE is most complete, and strongly recommended for its unrivalled ECONOMY, CLEANLINESS, CONVENIENCE, DURABILITY, and is a certain CURE for SMOKY CHIMNEYS.
It is an entirely new invention, and consists of large MEAT ROASTER, PASTRY OVEN, and WROUGHT-IRON BOILER. The top forms a HOT PLATE for BOILING, STEWING, &c. The whole heated by ONE SMALL FIRE. One 5 feet wide is equal to an ordinary Range 8 feet wide.

Extracted from the London Daily Telegraph, May 19, 1862.
"International Exhibition, Class 31.
"Of the most recent inventions it should be said that Messrs. Jones & Rowe's Patent Worcestershire Range has attracted very special attention, and has been commended by the best authorities. A valuable peculiarity of their Ranges is the placing of the OVEN and ROASTER one above the other instead of side by side; and the ROASTER is constantly replenished with fresh air."

NEW EDITION OF NATURE-PRINTED FERNS.

On June 24th will be published, in Two Volumes, royal 8vo., price Three Pounds,

NATURE-PRINTED BRITISH FERNS;

BEING FIGURES AND DESCRIPTIONS OF THE SPECIES AND VARIETIES OF FERNS FOUND IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

By THOMAS MOORE, F.L.S.

THE FIGURES NATURE-PRINTED BY HENRY BRADBURY.

The Work contains 122 Plates and 500 pages of Letter-press.

 The Text is rendered as complete as possible. It consists of characters and descriptions of the Genera and Species, with their synonyms, distribution, and range; an account of the multitudinous Varieties which the keen researches of Fern-gatherers have discovered; and a sketch of the best mode of Cultivation. The account of the Varieties embrace some very interesting novelties, which have been kindly communicated for publication by their discoverers. A classified Synopsis of the Species, a sketch of Fern Classification, and a Glossary of technical terms are included in the plan of the Work.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

FROM THE ATHENÆUM.

"For this kind of work Nature Printing is exactly adapted. Every delicate and inimitable ramification is most attractively and accurately represented."

FROM THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.

"We must take this opportunity to recommend to our botanical readers, and indeed to the public generally, this publication, which represents, with the fidelity and beauty of Nature herself, the Ferns of Great Britain and Ireland. Mr. Bradbury has successfully introduced into this work the peculiar mode of Nature-Printing first practised in the Imperial Printing-office at Vienna, which is by far the most accurate and pleasing method of obtaining the portraits of botanical specimens. The collection is in the highest degree interesting, and forms a complete manual of the Ferns peculiar to these islands."

FROM THE SATURDAY REVIEW.

"The process by which it is produced is that delightful one which has been a labour of love to Mr. Henry Bradbury in bringing to perfection. To speak of the accuracy of the plates is of course a misnomer. They are of the nature of the photographs; and the only possible drawback to the work is, that its extreme beauty will banish to the drawing-room table, as a mere example of pretty drawing, what, as a scientific manual, has not been equalled."

FROM THE QUARTERLY REVIEW.

"We have here pictures of all our British kinds of Ferns, with their principal variations of form, presented to us with precisely the same appearance as would be exhibited if the living species were pressed flat upon sheets of white paper. The merest tyro may identify in a few minutes any species by simply placing the living leaf side by side with its portrait, which reproduces it in the minutest detail and in its natural dimensions."

News of the Week.

In the House of Lords on Friday the Duchy of Cornwall Management Bill passed through committee. The Vaccination (Ireland) Bill and the Bakehouses Regulation Bill were read a second time. On Monday, in answer to the Earl of Ellenborough, Earl Russell stated that England and France had agreed upon a proposition to be made to Russia in favour of Poland, and had invited the concurrence of Austria. As the reply of Austria had not yet been received, it would be inexpedient to enter into the nature of the proposition further than to state that it was consistent with the provisions of the Treaty of Vienna. On the motion for the second reading of the Prison Ministers' Bill, Lord Berners moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day six months. The Earl of Derby spoke in favour of the Bill, and the amendment was negatived on a division by 65 to 35. The Bill was then read a second time. On Tuesday Earl Russell laid upon the table the papers relating to Greece, stating that Prince William of Denmark had accepted the Crown, and that his title had been recognised by the Great Powers. His lordship also laid on the table the communication which had been made to the Powers with respect to the intention of Her Majesty to cede the Ionian Islands to Greece. The Earl of Carnarvon moved the second reading of the Security from Violence Bill, the object of which was to inflict the punishment of flogging on garotters. Lord Cranworth moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a second time this day six months. After a short discussion the amendment, at the suggestion of Earl Granville, was withdrawn, and the Bill was read a second time without a division. On the report of the Duchy of Cornwall Management Bill, a long discussion took place on the powers given by it to the Prince of Wales to make grants of land to Dissenting Chapels. The debate was ultimately adjourned to Friday. The Vaccination (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. On Thursday, in answer to the Earl of Carnarvon, Earl Russell said that there was a good deal of mystery and contradiction with respect to the nature and provisions of the recent Convention between the Governments of Russia and Prussia. The convention had been represented at Berlin as solely a military one, entered into at the request of Russia, while at St. Petersburg it was alleged that it had been entered into at the request of Prussia. It was also reported that there was a secret article, but he had no reliable intelligence on the subject.

In the Commons on Friday Mr. B. Cochrane moved that a permanent commissioner of public works should be appointed. Mr. Cowper opposed the motion, which was ultimately withdrawn. Mr. Fortescue called attention to the circumstances attending the imprisonment and death of Regimental Sergeant-Major Lilley, of the 6th Dragoons, now serving in India, and to the imprisonment of two troop sergeant-majors of the same regiment, without being brought to trial, and asked whether Colonel Crawley, under whose authority this took place, was to be permitted to remain in command of the regiment. The Marquis of Hartington said that the Judge Advocate General had given an opinion that there was not sufficient evidence to establish the charge of conspiracy which Colonel Crawley brought against the sergeant-majors, and that the punishment inflicted upon them was illegal. He added that it was the intention of the Government to make a grant to the family of Sergeant-Major Lilley. The House then went into Committee of Supply upon the remaining Civil Service Estimates, when a long debate took place place upon the vote for Harbours of Refuge. Mr. Lindsay moved the reduction of the vote for the harbours of Alderney and Dover. This amendment was negatived, on a division, by 76 to 62. Several other votes, including those for Holyhead and Portpatrick Harbours, were agreed to. The debate on the third reading of the Drainage and Improvement of Land (Ireland) Bill was adjourned. On Monday, on the order for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. Gregory moved a resolution that the Royal Botanical Gardens of Edinburgh should be opened to the public after the hours of Divine service on Sundays, like other botanical gardens supported by Parliamentary grants. On a division, the motion was negatived by 123 to 107. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, and was counted out after a few votes had been agreed to. On Tuesday Mr. Buxton moved a resolution that the subscription required from the clergy to the Thirty-nine Articles and to the Prayer Book ought to be relaxed. Mr. M. Milnes moved, as an amendment, that subscription should be relaxed in the case of the Prayer Book only. Sir G. Grey admitted that the law was not in a satisfactory state; but the Government were not prepared to assent either to the motion or the amendment, though they would not be unwilling to consider the question of subscription so that the securities of the Church might not be weakened. If, therefore, the amendment should be withdrawn, he would move the previous question. The amendment was then withdrawn, and the "previous question" after a long debate was agreed to without a division. Mr. Dalglish moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the constitution of the Board of Admiralty, and the different departments under its control. Lord C. Paget opposed the motion, and the debate was ultimately adjourned. On Wednesday the Innkeepers' Liability Bill and the Savings Banks Acts Amendment Bill passed through committee. The Election Petitions Bill was read a second time. The House then went into Committee on the Metropolis Turnpike Roads Acts Amendment Bill on recommittal, and agreed to the clauses with amendments. On Thursday Mr. Grant Duff called attention to the abuses existing in many endowed charities, with especial reference to their bearing upon the amount of the vote for elementary education. Mr. Lowe then moved a vote of 804,002*l.* for public education, and gave a short explanation of the past year, and of the alterations made under the Revised Code, with the results of examinations. Mr. Black moved as an amendment, a reduction of the vote by 30,000*l.*, for stipends of pupil-teachers. After a long discussion, the amendment was withdrawn, and the vote agreed to. The vote of 122,883*l.* for the department of Science and Art, after a lively discussion on the architectural merits of the International Exhibition, was agreed to. The Volunteers Bill, as amended, was considered and agreed to after an ineffectual effort by Sir R. Clifton to obtain the insertion of a clause giving volunteers a right of appeal against dismissal by commanding officers.

From the United States we learn that General Grant, after destroying Jackson, invested Vicksburg on the 18th ult., in conjunction with Admiral Porter, who had managed to get his gun boats up the Mississippi. Between the 19th and the 27th the siege was pushed with great vigour, but the Confederates had repulsed with heavy loss three assaults of the Federals, and expressed their confidence of holding the city until the arrival of General Johnstone, who was collecting a large force near Jackson, with the intention of making an attack on General Grant's rear. General Banks was reported to have crossed the Mississippi at Bayou Sara, seven miles above Port Hudson. A portion of the Confederate army under General Lee has crossed the Rappahannock, and another division is preparing to invade Kentucky. President Lincoln having commuted the sentence passed on Mr. Vallandigham to banishment beyond the Federal lines, that gentleman has been delivered to the Confederates at Shelbyville, and is now at General Bragg's head-quarters awaiting the decision of the Confederate Government on his case.

The French Government has received despatches from General Forey, announcing the capture of Puebla on the 27th May, and the unconditional surrender of General Ortega and the Mexican garrison.

From Japan we have the important news that Colonel Neale, the British Chargé d'Affaires, has demanded reparation from the Tycoon for the attack on the British Legation on the 26th of June, and the assassination of Mr. Richardson while riding in the public road in September last. The terms demanded are the trial and execution of Mr. Richardson's murderers, a large pecuniary indemnity for the offence, and compensation to the sufferers or their surviving relatives. The ultimatum was sent on the 6th of April, and 20 days allowed for a reply. A large fleet of ships of war and gun-boats, under the command of Admiral Kuper, was stationed in the harbour of Yokohama for the purpose of enforcing the demand if the refusal of the Japanese Government should render it necessary to do so.

Home News.

The Court.—On Saturday the Prince and Princess of Wales visited her Majesty after her arrival at the Castle. On Sunday morning the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Alfred, Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, and Prince Leopold, attended Divine service in the private chapel. The Rev. Lord Wriothesley Russell officiated. On Monday morning the Queen walked and drove in the grounds. The Prince of Wales left Frogmore for Marlborough House. The Princess of Wales visited her Majesty at the Castle, and remained to luncheon. Her Royal Highness afterwards returned to London. Prince Alfred left for London. On Tuesday morning the Queen, accompanied by the Princesses Helena and Beatrice, came to London by special train on the Great Western Railway. Her Majesty was met at the station by Prince Alfred, and proceeded thence to the Horticultural Gardens. Her Majesty was received at the entrance in Exhibition Road by the Duke of Buccleuch, President; Sir W. Dilke, Vice-President; and the Council and Secretaries of the Society, who had the honour of being presented to her Majesty. The Queen proceeded up the centre walk of the Gardens to the spot where the Great Exhibition Memorial is erected, surmounted by the statue of the Prince Consort. Her Majesty was there met by Mr. Durham, the sculptor of the statue, and the Chairman and Secretary of the Memorial Committee, who had the honour of being presented to her Majesty. Her Majesty made a lengthened inspection of the Memorial, visiting every spot whence a fresh view might be obtained, and frequently expressed the gratification it afforded her. Her Majesty also marked her interest in the progress of the Gardens by afterwards spending a considerable time in the conservatory and adjoining terraces, with which she declared herself much pleased. Her Majesty then returned by the Eastern Arcade to her carriage in Exhibition Road, and drove to Marlborough House to visit the Prince and Princess of Wales. The Prince of Orange visited her Majesty at Marlborough House. The Queen returned to Windsor at 2 o'clock. On Wednesday morning the Queen, accompanied by the Princess Helena, walked and drove in the grounds. In the afternoon Princesses Helena and Louisa, and Prince Leopold left the Castle for Marlborough House, to accompany the Prince and Princess of Wales to the uncovering of the Memorial in the Horticultural Gardens. Earl Russell arrived at the Castle in the evening and had an audience of the Queen. On Thursday morning Prince Alfred, Princess Helena and Princess Louisa, drove to Claremont. In the afternoon the Queen held a Privy Council. Earl Granville had an audience of Her Majesty. Yesterday morning the Queen came to town and paid a visit to the Exhibition building, which she had not seen since the ground was marked out for its foundations in the autumn of 1861. Her Majesty arrived at precisely half past 10, accompanied by the Princesses Helena and Louisa, and attended by her ladies and gentlemen in waiting. The Queen entered by the Western Dome, and was received by the Earl of Derby and the Earl Granville, who, the one on her Majesty's right and the other on the left, escorted her into the nave. Among those present were the Commissioners of the Exhibition of 1851, and all the Commissioners of the Exhibition of 1862, excepting the Duke of Buckingham. Having entered the Nave, the Queen walked slowly up the centre, where she paused for a moment, and afterwards proceeded beneath the Eastern Dome, where she looked at the majolica fountain. At this point several presentations were made by Earl Granville. Among the gentlemen presented were Lord Overstone, Mr. Disraeli, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Lowe, Sir R. Murchison, Mr. Thomas Baring, Sir F. Sandford, Sir W. Dilke, Mr. Kelk, the Messrs. Lucas, Mr. Fairbairn, Mr. Crace, and Captain Fowke. Leaving the ground floor, her Majesty ascended the gallery under the dome, commanding a view of the whole length of the building, the general effect of which her Majesty viewed with evident interest. Thence the Queen proceeded to the water-colour gallery, and afterwards to the other picture galleries, passing right through the English department and a portion of the foreign. On leaving the entrance to the picture galleries Mr. Redgrave was presented to her. Her Majesty, on proceeding along the gallery, recognised Lady Portman, formerly lady-in-waiting, and, graciously advancing towards her, affectionately shook hands and kissed her ladyship. Having descended to the nave, about the centre of the building, her Majesty crossed it, and proceeded to the Horticultural Gardens, where she spent a few moments, and ultimately left by the north entrance into the Kensington Road. The time spent in the building and gardens by the Royal party was 35 minutes. Her Majesty was attired in deep mourning, wearing a narrow widow's cap; the only colour visible was the mauve lining of her parasol. The Princesses wore lavender silk dresses with black trimming, white cloaks, and light-coloured bonnets. Owing to there having been scarcely any notice of the intended Royal visit, no very large number of persons had assembled to witness her Majesty's arrival and departure.

The Queen's Visit to Germany.—It is understood that her Majesty will take her departure for Coburg about the second week in July. The Queen will not occupy the château of Rheinhartsbrunn, as she did last year, but will live at Rosenau, which the Duke of Saxe-Coburg has placed at her disposal. It is expected that Earl Russell will accompany her Majesty as Secretary of State.

The Prince and Princess of Wales on Friday attended the Eton regatta, and the other festivities connected with the Eton anniversary. On Monday morning their Royal Highnesses left Frogmore for London. In the afternoon the Prince held a Levee on behalf of the Queen at St. James's Palace, at which nearly 400 noblemen and gentlemen were presented. In the evening the Prince and Princess honoured the Corporation of the City of London with their company at a grand ball and supper in Guildhall. On Tuesday morning the Prince, accompanied by Prince Alfred, rode out on horseback. In the afternoon the Prince and Princess received addresses of congratulation from the Archbishop, Bishops, and clergy of the Province of Canterbury in Convocation, and from the Bishop and clergy of the cities of London and Westminster. A deputation from the Grocers' Company had an interview with the Prince to confer the freedom of the Company on his Royal Highness. In the evening the Prince, accompanied by Prince Alfred and Count Gleichen, honoured the performance at Her Majesty's Theatre with their presence. On Wednesday morning the Prince of Wales and Prince Alfred rode on horseback. The Princess took a carriage drive. In the afternoon the Princesses Helena and Louisa and Prince Leopold arrived at Marlborough House from Windsor, and Prince Arthur arrived from Greenwich Park. Shortly before 4 o'clock the Prince of Wales went to the Horticultural Gardens and uncovered the memorial of the Exhibition of 1851 and the statue of the Prince Consort. His Royal Highness was accompanied by the Princess of Wales and other members of the Royal family. The procession was composed of six dress carriages, with an escort of Life Guards. On Thursday morning the Prince and Princess, accompanied by the Princess Mary of Cambridge and the Prince of Leiningen, went to Claremont, and returned in the afternoon to Marlborough House. In the evening the Prince of Wales dined with the Merchant Taylors' Company.

Visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Scotland.—The Aberdeen papers say that the Prince and Princess of Wales are expected at Abergeldie Castle about the end of July.

Approaching Visit of the Queen of Prussia.—A despatch from Berlin of Thursday says that on the departure of the King of Prussia for Carlsbad next week, the Queen will proceed to Windsor, at the invitation of Her Majesty Queen Victoria.

Marriage of the Duke de Chartres and the Princess Francoise d'Orleans.—The marriage of the second son of the late Duke of Orleans to his [illegible] the daughter of the Prince de Joinville, took place on Thursday, according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, in the Chapel of St. Raphael, at Kingston-upon-Thames. The marriage being strictly private and domestic, no invitations were issued by the Royal family either in France or England. This did not, however, prevent a numerous gathering of attached friends of the House of Orleans, many of whom came spontaneously from France to offer their respect to the youthful Prince and Princess. The scattered members of the ex-royal family have been assembling at Claremont for some days past. The Duke de Montpensier arrived from Madrid on Saturday, his Duchess having been prevented from accompanying him by inability to bear the fatigue of the voyage. The Duchess of Saxe Coburg, accompanied by her two sons, the Princes Augustus and Philippe, reached Claremont on Tuesday, and on the following day Prince Philip of Wurtemburg joined the family circle. The [illegible] to the neighbourhood of Claremont extended to Kingston, where the inhabitants assembled in large numbers to witness the arrival of the bridal party at the chapel. From the entrance gate to the porch the chances of bad weather were provided against by a covered way, within which were stationed the children of St. Raphael's School, bearing baskets filled with rose leaves wherewith to strew the bridal path. The company provided with tickets for the chapel began to arrive at 10 o'clock, and in less than half-an-hour the edifice was fully occupied in every part, except that small portion reserved for the Royal party. Among the arrivals from London were the Austrian and Prussian Ambassadors, the Belgian, Hanoverian, Bavarian, Italian, Portuguese, Saxon, and Swedish Ministers, and a large number of French ladies and gentlemen. The members of the Orleans family arrived about half past 10. The Duchess of Saxe Coburg was the first to enter the chapel, accompanied by her sons, the Princes Philippe and Augustus. The Duke de Nemours, with his daughters, the Princesses Marguerite and Blanche d'Orleans, followed, and the Duke and Duchess d'Aumale, and the Duke de Montpensier, with Prince Philip of Wurtemberg, were all in their places at a quarter before 11 o'clock. Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar and the Prince of Leiningen came down from London, and joined the bridal party in the chapel. The Duke de Chartres arrived at a few minutes before 11, attended by his elder brother, the Count de Paris, as "groomsman." His Royal Highness gracefully received the greetings of his friends, and awaited at the altar the approach of his bride. Presently both young Princes returned to the porch to receive their venerable grandmother, the Queen Marie Amelie, whose entrance into the chapel was marked by a visible emotion, all present rising from their seats to pay her homage. Her Majesty advanced with dignified step up the centre aisle, leaning on the arm of the young bridegroom, and supported by the Count de Paris, the organ playing a voluntary. On reaching the altar the Queen and the Count de Paris knelt in devotion for a few moments, and then took their appointed places in front of the altar. Precisely at 11 o'clock the bishops and priests left the altar to meet the bride, who, accompanied by her parents, the Prince and Princess de Joinville, arrived from [illegible]. Kneeling at the altar, the youthful pair listened attentively to the religious exhortations addressed to them by [illegible], the Roman Catholic Bishop of Southwark, who, in a few brief and appropriate words, led their attention to the venerable relative whose presence graced their nuptials, and whose example he exhorted them to emulate. At the close of this address the Prince and Princess were admitted within the altar rails, when the Bishop demanded who gave each to the other. The Prince de Joinville answered for his daughter, and the Count de Paris for his brother, the youthful pair each acknowledging their response by a profound obeisance. The mutual plighting of troth followed, after which the Prince and Princess retired from the altar, and again kneeling in front of the rails received the benediction of the Bishop. The bride and bridegroom, with the Count de Paris and the Prince de Joinville, then entered the sacristy, where the usual record of marriage was signed and duly attested. On their reappearance in the chapel a musical mass was performed, at the close of which the Royal party returned to Claremont. Meantime the ladies of the neighbourhood had assembled in the grounds and on the steps beneath the portico of the mansion, where a number of children, each carrying bouquets of choice flowers, awaited the return of the bridal party. The bride's approach to the house was heralded by a feu-de-joie from a battery of guns, manned by an improvised corps of artillerymen, composed of young tradesmen of the neighbourhood, and when the young couple alighted they were affectionately greeted by the assembled spectators. The company present at the ceremony continued to [illegible] up to 1 o'clock, at which hour the Princesses Helena and Louisa arrived, having posted across from Windsor Castle. The Princesses were received by the Count de Paris and the Prince de Joinville and conducted to the drawing-room, where they offered their congratulations to the bride and bridegroom. The Duchess of Cambridge and the Duke of Cambridge were the next arrivals. At half-past 1 o'clock the approach of the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Princess Mary, and Prince Alfred was announced by a Royal salute, the band of the [illegible] Militia playing a few bars of the National Anthem. The Royal visitors were received by the Count de Paris, the Prince de Joinville and other members of the Orleans family. The Count de Paris led the Princess of Wales and the Princess Mary was conducted by the Prince de Joinville. Their Royal Highnesses first paid their respects to the Queen Marie Amelie, and then offered their congratulations to the newly-married pair. Previously to the déjeuner the Duke de Chartres, mindful of the pleasant [illegible] between his young bride and the neighbours among whom she had been nurtured from childhood, took occasion to present her to the visitors assembled in the vestibule. He said he thanked them with all his heart for the kindness they had shown to himself and his bride, and wished them every happiness [illegible]. At 2 o'clock the illustrious guests sat down to breakfast. The bride and bridegroom led the way from the drawing-room, the Prince of Wales following with the ex-Queen. The Count de Paris came next, leading the Princess of Wales. Prince Alfred followed, leading the Princess de Joinville, and then came the Prince de Joinville with the Princess Helena, the Duke of Cambridge with the Princess Louisa, the Duke d'Aumale with the Duchess of Cambridge, the Duke de Montpensier with the Princess Mary, Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar with the Duchess Augustus of Saxe Coburg, Prince Philip of Wurtemburg with the Princess Marguerite of Orleans, and the Prince of Leiningen with the Duchess d'Aumale. The other guests at the Royal table were Prince Augustus of Wurtemburg, and the Ambassadors and Ministers present at the marriage. The bride and bridegroom sat in the centre of the table, faced by the Prince of Wales and Queen Marie Amelie, and supported by the Princess of Wales and the Princess de Joinville. Towards the close of the déjeuner the health of the newly-married pair was [illegible] by the venerable Queen herself, who, with glass in hand, arrested general attention by emphatically calling upon her guests to respond to the toast, "A la santé du [illegible] et de la Duchesse de Chartres." The illustrious party [illegible] responded to the appeal, rising from their seats and greeting the young couple with every mark of affectionate esteem. After the déjeuner was concluded, the Prince and Princess of Wales and other members of our Royal family took an affectionate leave of the Duke and Duchess de Chartres, and departed on their return to London. At [illegible] o'clock the bride and bridegroom left Claremont on their way to Scotland.

The Kinsale election has terminated in the return of Sir George Colthurst by a majority of 14 over Mr. Fitzgibbon, the numbers being 62 to 48.

THE BISHOPRIC OF MADAGASCAR.—The Bishop of Cape Town has recommended to the [illegible] the appointment of the Rev. Mr. [illegible], the chief of the London Missionary Society's agents in Madagascar, as the first Bishop of the proposed new diocese.

THE CASE OF BISHOP COLENSO.—The Cape papers state that the rural deans of the diocese of Natal have [illegible] to the Bishop of Cape Town as Metropolitan, [illegible], and that the Bishop has informed them in reply, that if they frame articles against Dr. Colenso it will be his duty and that of the other Bishops of South Africa to summon the Bishop of Natal to answer them.

LORD LIEUTENANCY.—The Earl of Lichfield has been appointed Lord Lieutenant of Staffordshire, in the room of the late Lord Hatherton.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Moniteur announces that the Minister of Foreign Affairs received on Wednesday evening the following despatch from M. de Montholon, Consul-General of France at New York:—

"New York, June 1.

"News from Havannah and Vera Cruz.—Puebla is in our hands. Ortega has surrendered without conditions, with 18,000 men."

Salvos of artillery were fired on Thursday at the Invalides in celebration of the capture of Puebla, and the Emperor yesterday received the congratulations of the Emperor of Austria and the King of Prussia on the victory. Subsequent despatches received in Paris add to the facts already known that immediately after the capitulation of Puebla General Forey despatched a division on the road to the capital in order to occupy the passes. The Paris evening papers state that the Mexican troops who were taken prisoners will be sent to the interior of the islands of Martinique and Guadaloupe. It had previously been resolved to send fresh reinforcements, to the number of 10,000 men, to Mexico, and orders had been given for four ships of the line, three transports, and two or three steam frigates to be got ready to convey them to Vera Cruz. The Moniteur publishes an official announcement on the steps taken to ensure the supply of provisions and munitions to the troops in Mexico. On April 19 the army was furnished with [illegible] for six days, the removal of which was easily effected. Independently of the [illegible] from St. Nazaire, the Minister of Marine has organised a ship service, leaving Cherbourg or Toulon on the 20th of every month, carrying out supplies and bringing back the sick. M. Havin, director of the Siècle newspaper, and the Opposition candidate for the representation of La Manche, has been returned for that department. MM. d'Andelarre and Marmier have been elected in the department of Haute Saone. The Pays says that Prince Napoleon after leaving Egypt will proceed to Constantinople with the intention of removing or lessening the difficulties attending the question of the Suez Canal. Senhor de Moreira, late Brazilian Minister in London, will reside in Paris until the settlement of the dispute between England and Brazil.

PORTUGAL.—The feeling against the Ministry appears to be gaining ground in the north of Portugal. The discussion of the Budget has terminated, but the chief clauses, having been referred to the committees, must again undergo discussion. The bill augmenting the tax on property, and rendering it compulsory for officers and soldiers to go on foreign service, has been passed. The King has given a grand dinner party at the [illegible] Palace in celebration of the birthday of Queen Victoria. The corvette [illegible] has been sent to cruise in the waters of the Azores, to look after the American vessels of war.

SWEDEN.—Advices from Helsingfors state that great excitement prevails there. The Governor of Finland has again asked the citizens to sign the address of allegiance to the Emperor of Russia, but they have declined to do so.

DENMARK.—The King on Saturday received the Greek deputation at Christiansborg in solemn audience, in order to announce to them the acceptance of the Crown by Prince William. His Majesty was attended by all the Princes of the Royal House, the Ministers and entire Court, the high functionaries of the kingdom, and the ambassadors of England, France, and Russia. Admiral Kanaris, the spokesman of the deputation, read in Greek the decree of the National Assembly electing Prince William to the Crown. The King of Denmark replied as follows:—

"We accept for our young relative, the crown to which he has been called by the Greek people. [illegible] [illegible]"

Turning to Prince William, the King continued:—

"[illegible] If you make your [illegible], you and your people will prosper."

The King then took up the insignia of the Order of the Elephant, and advanced to the Prince, saying:—

"[illegible] a Knight of the order of the Elephant."

The King next conducted the Prince to the highest step of the throne, kissed him three times, and said with deep emotion and hearty kindness:—

"Receive the blessing of your King, and may God be with you."

King George subsequently gave audience to the deputation at the palace of Prince Christian. Admiral Kanaris made a speech, concluding as follows:—

"Greece is convinced that your Majesty is filled with a sense of the high duties to which you are called, and will devote yourself to the welfare of the country and the development [illegible]"

King George replied:—

"[illegible] the attainment of our common object—the happiness of Greece. I have grown up in a country where legal order is combined with entire constitutional freedom, and which has thereby attained large and [illegible]. The lessons I have here received shall accompany me to my new country, and I shall always keep in view the motto of the King of Denmark, 'The love of the people is my strength.'"

The new King of the Greeks was much cheered by the people upon leaving the Castle of Christiansborg. In the evening a grand banquet was given by the King of Denmark, at which 250 guests were present. His Majesty proposed the health of King George of Greece, saying that he had always himself endeavoured to find happiness in the love of his people, and that he advised the young King to follow the same course. King George replied that he would faithfully observe his Majesty's advice, and that it should be his constant endeavour to do honour to the land which had given him birth. On Sunday the Greek deputation had an audience of the King of Denmark, at which his Majesty conferred high Danish orders upon its members. The deputation left Copenhagen on Tuesday. The young King will not leave before the end of the year. A matrimonial alliance between his Majesty and the royal family of England is spoken of. An identical note has been sent by the Cabinet of Copenhagen in reply to the notes addressed by the Austrian and Prussian Governments in that of February. In this reply to the two Governments, the Danish Cabinet, in a courteous but decided manner, refuses to make any alteration in the ordinance of March 30. It says:—

"The tenor of the patent of the 30th March does not furnish a pretext for any demand whatsoever on the part of the Germanic Confederation, inasmuch as the recent Royal measures do not [illegible] the position of Holstein towards Denmark. The Federal [illegible] and [illegible] have left no choice to Denmark. The patent of the 30th March must be maintained, or the Danish monarchy must become [illegible]."

BELGIUM.—It was reported last week that the King of the Belgians was again in a very critical state, and the accounts received privately from Brussels were of an alarming nature. It is now said that these rumours are entirely unfounded. His Majesty's health, although not robust, is in a satisfactory condition.

PRUSSIA.—The Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Prussia arrived at Dantzic on Friday, and paid a visit to the Rathhaus, where they were received by the municipal authorities. The chief magistrate having expressed his sorrow that circumstances would not permit the manifestations of public rejoicings at the visit of their Royal Highnesses, the Crown Prince replied:—

"I also regret that I have come here at a time when disagreement has taken place between the Government and the people, the news of which surprised me greatly. Being absent, I was unaware of the ordinances which have brought about this position of affairs and took no part in the deliberations when they were resolved upon. But we are all convinced—and no one better than I, who know the noble and patriotic sentiments of the King—that Prussia, under His Majesty's sceptre, is securely approaching the greatness which Providence has marked out for her."

The Chief Magistrate, Herr Winter, replied to the speech of his Royal Highness by calling upon those present to give three cheers for the King and the Crown Prince. The Municipality of Berlin on Friday resolved to agree to the proposition made on the previous day by the Common Council, to send an address to the King, of which the following is a summary:—

"The address calls the attention of his Majesty to the prejudicial consequences of promulgating the recent ordinance on the press, and of carrying on the Government without a settled Budget. It represents the unfavourable influence of the long protracted constitutional conflict upon the relations of property, trade, and the public credit, and concludes by requesting the King to reestablish the constitutional state of affairs by a speedy convocation of the Diet."

At the sitting of the Municipality on Tuesday, a Royal decree was read definitively prohibiting the execution of the resolutions determined upon by the common council on the 4th inst. Motions for complaint to the Chief President and for the issue of an address to the Crown having been successively negatived, it was resolved simply to refer the Royal decree to a committee, whose report is looked for with great interest. It is said that the Government threatened to suspend the Burgomaster, but the Crown Prince interfered, and caused the order for suspension, while on the point of being issued, to be recalled. The Common Council of Breslau has decided upon sending a deputation to the King, to petition his Majesty to withdraw the late press ordinance, and to convoke the Diet. The chief magistrate, Herr Elwanger, opposed this proceeding most energetically. The deputation left for Berlin on Thursday. The Minister of the Interior has issued an order to the Governors of the provinces relative to the discussions of municipal councils on constitutional affairs, and politics in general. The order says that such discussions being illegal cannot be tolerated, and that the resolutions passed by the councils cannot be carried out. The Minister expects that the authorities will exercise with energy the disciplinary powers with which they are invested in respect to the municipalities. The committee charged with making preparations for the statistical congress at Berlin have decided upon petitioning the Ministry to postpone the congress for one year, on account of the present state of political affairs.

AUSTRIA.—The Emperor received the reigning Duke of Saxe Coburg Gotha in audience on Wednesday. At a Council of Ministers held on Tuesday, the proposals of the Western Powers on the Polish question were taken into consideration. No concurrence with these propositions was however arrived at. Austria will send counter-proposals of a mediatory character to Paris. It is said that the proposals of the Western Powers contained the following points:—

1. A general amnesty offered to all insurgents, including the leaders. 2. An amnesty having a retrospective action for 15 years, and including all Polish State prisoners, emigres, and exiles. 3. The obligation on the part of Russia not to increase the military force in Poland for the next 15 months. 4. A complete autonomy and independent administration for Poland.

HUNGARY.—The assembling of Hungarian officers in the Principalities has caused uneasiness at Pesth, where revolutionary pamphlets are in circulation. The majority of the people are quiet, but it is feared that they may be led away by the exertions of agitators. The house of a tailor in good business has been searched by the military, and papers of a seditious kind having been found he was made prisoner. Several other arrests have taken place.

RUSSIA.—Prince Gortschakoff actuated with the desire of giving immediate publicity to his reply to Mr. Seward's note on the Polish question, has, instead of transmitting it in the regular way to the Russian Ambassador in America, sent it to Mr. Clay, the American Minister resident at St. Petersburg. In this reply, Prince Gortschakoff expresses the warmest sentiments of gratitude on the part of the Emperor Alexander towards the American Government. The Municipal Council of Moscow has resolved upon the formation of a civic militia and thousands of citizens enrolled themselves in the first two days.

POLAND.—The Bank of Warsaw has been robbed of 5,000,000 roubles, consisting mostly of bonds. It appears that the Commissioners of the Exchequer, on examining the government treasury, discovered that Russian Bank notes, Polish Bonds, and gold half-imperials, to the amount of 5,000,000 silver roubles, had been abstracted. In their place was left a receipt signed by the national government. Four officials, and the books in which the numbers of the missing bonds were entered, had also disappeared. It is said that all the telegraphic lines leading from Warsaw have been destroyed. On the repeated requests of the Archbishops of Posen and Gnesen, the Pope has ordered a grand jubilee to take place in the diocese of Posen, commencing upon the 20th inst. The jubilee is intended to celebrate the thousandth anniversary of the introduction of Christianity into Poland by Cyrillus and Methodius. The Church Festival of Corpus Christi Day at Warsaw has passed off with the utmost tranquillity. The procession consisted of 50,000 persons, and neither police nor military were paraded, the National Government having pledged itself for the orderly observance of the day. On the 29th ult. an engagement took place at Grochowy, in the palatinate of Kalisz, in which the Russians were defeated by the insurgents with great loss. They returned however to the attack on the following day at Slawiszyn, when they were again defeated. Another encounter took place on the 31st ult. at Bendzewo, in which several waggons full of Russian soldiers were driven across the frontier into Prussian territory, where they were received by the authorities, and cantoned at Pleszewo. Upon the 31st ult. the insurgents under Lelewel attacked the Russians under General Goscirad between Zawichost and Zaklikow. The Russians were defeated with considerable loss, while the insurgents had 15 killed and 18 wounded. Czachowski with his forces having joined the band of Konowitz, have defeated the Russians near Pilica, in the government of Radom. Engagements, terminating favourably for the insurgents, have taken place in Wyszogrod and Balwierzyski, in the kingdom of Poland, and at Horke in Lithuania. Koziello, the leader of a band of insurgents, fell at Wladyki on the 28th ult. Advocate Trzetrzewinski has been arrested at Warsaw. The Russians have shot the Abbé Iszola at Wilna. The well-known Lithuanian leader, Sierakowski, who had fallen into the hands of the Russians, has died of his wounds. The Polish leader Kononowicz has been captured by a stratagem, and is about to be shot. His band remains undiminished. 5,000 of the Imperial Guard have been despatched from St. Petersburg to Lithuania. A frightful accident happened to a train conveying a portion of the troops caused by the railway giving way. 300 soldiers were killed. M. Wolowski, late Minister of Justice in the kingdom of Poland, has been arrested at Warsaw.

ITALY.—The Treaty of Commerce between England and Italy was signed on Thursday. The State trials at Rome have terminated in the conviction of the prisoners. Chevalier Fausti and Signori Venanzi and Galmanelli are condemned to 20 years, and the other five to 15 years' imprisonment. The inauguration of the railway from Naples to Eboli has been celebrated by a banquet. Signor Tecchio, the representative of the railway company, drank the health of the King, and expressed his hope that Rome and Venice would soon be included within the Italian kingdom. The speech was received with enthusiastic applause, and cheers for the unity of Italy.

GREECE.—It is stated from official sources that the following are the conditions attached to the acceptance of the throne of Greece by Prince William. The Danish Government agrees to the amount fixed for the civil list of the young King, namely, 48,000*l*. The English Cabinet accedes to this point. The English Government, however, are opposed to the departure of the Prince for Greece before he attains his majority, which will happen at the end of the present year. The Danish Cabinet yielded this point, but desired—1st. The immediate cession of the Ionian Isles; 2d. The presence of an English fleet in the Piræus for a long-termed period; 3d. A Regency during the King's minority, the Regent to be an Englishman. On these points negotiations are still going on. On the night of the 22d a revolutionary movement at Athens was prevented by the intervention of an armed force. The soldiers continued to commit excesses in the provinces of Greece. Public order had been disturbed in several places. Several parts of the country were infested by brigands.

TURKEY.—Five ex-Chamberlains have been exiled to Barbary on account of frauds discovered to have been committed by them upon the Civil List. The investigation into the charges against the late Ministers Riza, Hasseib, and Saffeti Pasha has been commenced.

EGYPT.—Prince Napoleon paid a visit to the Suez Canal on the 18th ult. At a banquet given to him at Suez, the Prince, in proposing the health of the Emperor, said that he was the protector of every enterprise that added to the glory of France. He declared his firm belief that the Suez Canal would soon be a fait accompli, and said that M. Lesseps was one of the best friends of his country. M. Lesseps proposed the union of France and England.

COAST OF AFRICA.—The King of Ashantee has invaded the protected countries on the Gold Coast, in consequence of the refusal of the English Government to deliver up to him a fugitive captain who was accused of stealing rock gold, and who had sought protection in British territory. Commodore Wilmot, and the officers and men of Her Majesty's ship Rattlesnake, had intrenched and garrisoned Cape Coast Castle and the environs, and assistance had been demanded from Gambia and Sierra Leone by Governor Pine.

INDIA.—Lieutenant Jackson, of the Bengal Engineers, has been sentenced to four years' penal servitude for beating his native servant to death.

CHINA.—Fooshan has surrendered to an attack by the Anglo-Chinese force under Major Gordon, and the siege of Chang-zu has been raised. Taitsan also has surrendered, and its garrison has declared for the Imperialists.

JAPAN.—Colonel Neale, her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, has addressed the Tycoon on the subject of the last two outrages on foreigners, viz., the attack upon the British Legation on the 26th of June, when two of the guard from her Majesty's ship Renard were murdered; and the assassination of Mr. Richardson on the Tokaido in September. For these outrages Colonel Neale demands reparation, the principal clauses of the ultimatum comprising, "the trial and capital execution of the murderers of Mr. Richardson; a heavy pecuniary penalty on Japan for that offence; and a considerable compensation for the sufferers or their surviving relatives." Should these demands not be complied with, Colonel Neale reserves to himself the right of adopting coercive measures of a nature "proportioned to the degree of ill-advised obstinacy or resistance which the Japanese Government may assume." In order to give weight to these demands a fleet is assembled in the harbour of Yokohama, under the command of Admiral Kuper, consisting of the Euryalus, Pearl, Argus, Centaur, Rattler, and Racehorse, with the gunboats Havoc and Kestrel; these would shortly be joined by Her Majesty's ships Ringdove, Encounter, Scout, and Coromandel, with the gunboat Hesper. Two Dutch and two French vessels of war were also present with the English fleet. The Perseus and Leopard were in Hong-Kong harbour, and would probably join the admiral's fleet as soon as they could be got ready. The ultimatum was sent in on the 6th April, and 20 days allowed for a reply, but none had arrived up to the 17th. The mayor of Kanagawa is said to have stated to the admiral, that the Tycoon's Government was not strong enough to arrest and punish Shimadzoo Sabaro, father of Prince Satzuma; he was one of the murderers of Mr. Richardson, and it will be recollected that the Tycoon then expressed his comparative helplessness in the case. In the present emergency it is alleged that the mayor of Kanagawa has suggested that satisfaction should be taken from the Prince of Satzuma himself, by the seizure of the Loo Choo Islands, which are his property, and yield a revenue of half a million sterling per annum.

AUSTRALIA.—The proceedings of the Intercolonial Conference, for the adjustment of the commercial relations of the different colonies, were brought to a close on the 13th of April, but the conclusions arrived at do not seem to be regarded with much favour. On one point alone was the conference unanimous, and that was in protesting against the transportation of criminals to Australia.

UNITED STATES.—General Grant landed at Brulensburg on the 30th April, and on the 1st May defeated General Bowen's army at Port Gibson, capturing 1500 prisoners and 5 guns. On the 12th he defeated the Confederates at Raymond, the latter losing 800 men. On the 14th he defeated General Johnstone at Jackson, with a loss of 400 men, stores, and 17 guns. On the 16th he fought a bloody and decisive battle at Baker's Creek, defeating the entire Vicksburg army, under General Pemberton, with a loss of 29 guns and 4000 men. On the 17th inst. he defeated the same force at Black River Bridge, the enemy losing 2600 men and 17 guns. On the 18th he invested Vicksburg, and on the 19th General Steele carried the rifle pits on the north of the city, the right of General Grant's army resting upon the Mississippi, above Vicksburg. On the 22d the Federals were completely repulsed at all points of the line, and compelled to intrench and dig rifle pits. A furious battle was fought on the 25th. The latest news to the 27th says that the Federals had been repulsed in three assaults. The last assault was made by General Sherman with 20,000 men, and he lost 600 killed and a large number wounded. The Federal outer lines were within 100 yards of the Confederate works. The Confederate fortifications consist of a chain of forts 800 yards apart, connected by deep intrenchments, and extending several miles. It is supposed that regular siege operations will be necessary to capture the city. Apprehensions are entertained of an attack on General Grant's rear, as General Johnstone was reported to be in the neighbourhood of Jackson with 15,000 men, short of provisions. Southern journals assert that two gunboats had been sunk at Vicksburg, and that General Banks had crossed the Mississippi at Bayou Sara, seven miles above Port Hudson. Admiral Porter arrived in the Yazoo River on the 15th to co-operate with General Grant. Ascertaining on the 18th that the latter was approaching the rear of Vicksburg, he immediately opened communications with him by way of the Yazoo River. The Admiral then sent the gunboats to Haines Bluff, which the Confederates were evacuating, leaving their guns, forts, and tents, which Admiral Porter captured. The fortifications and rifle pits at Haines Bluff extended a mile and a quarter. Admiral Porter destroyed all the works, encampments, and gun carriages, and then pushed the gunboats up the Mississippi from below, and opened fire on Vicksburg. On the 19th he placed the mortars in position, with orders to fire night and day as rapidly as they could. He also sent gunboats up to Yazoo City, and officially reports that he has destroyed the navy yards at that place, together with three powerful steamers, a formidable ram, all kinds of machinery, and property valued at 2,000,000 dols. Southern accounts assert that the Vicksburg army can hold the city in defiance of the Federals, that six attacks have been repulsed, and express confidence that General Pemberton can hold out until reinforcements reach him. General Johnstone is reported to have stated that if Vicksburg could hold out 14 days he would furnish reinforcements of 100,000 men, even if it required that he should relinquish all the territory of his department. It is believed that he is massing a large force in the vicinity of Canton, north of Jackson, for the purpose of making a sudden and overwhelming descent upon General Grant's rear, and compelling him to abandon the siege and take refuge in his gunboats. The Confederates are crossing the Rappahannock. General Lee has issued orders informing the troops they were about to have long and rapid marches in a country without railroads, and warning them to prepare for severe hardships. Large columns are moving in the direction of Culpepper, but whether to make a raid into Maryland or to get between Hooker's army and Washington is not known. Two divisions of the Confederate army fronting General Rosencranz are reported to be moving slowly forward. The Confederate plan of campaign for the present year is said to be the defeat of the armies of Generals Hooker, Rosencranz, and Grant at points as far south as those Generals can be enticed, and an invasion of the north through Ohio and Pennsylvania. Despatches from Murfreesborough state that the Confederate General Marmaduke was reported to have captured Helena, Arkansas, and many negro soldiers, all of whom, together with their officers, he had hung. The public await further advices before crediting this report. General Burnside has informed General Bragg that he should hang ten Confederate officers if the Confederates retaliated for the two whom General Burnside asserts were spies, tried and condemned in accordance with the usages of war. President Lincoln having commuted the sentence on Mr. Vallandigham to transportation from the Federal States, he was delivered into the Southern lines, near Shelbyville, where he now remains at General Bragg's headquarters. President Jefferson Davis is reported to have telegraphed that if Mr. Vallandigham would not take the oath of allegiance to the Southern Confederacy he must be returned to the Federal lines. Mr. Seward's reply to the French note, inviting the American Cabinet to join diplomatic action with the great Powers in favour of Poland, refuses the co-operation of the Washington Cabinet on the ground that America can never deviate from her traditional policy of non-intervention, except in cases of evident necessity. The Great Eastern arrived off New York on the 27th ult. in 11 days from Liverpool.

CANADA.—The Canada Gazette contains the proclamation dissolving Parliament. The writs are returnable on the 3d of July. The Governor-General has sworn in the new Ministry as follows:—J. Sandfield M'Donald, Attorney-General West; W. M'Dougal, Commissioner Crown Lands; Oliver Mowat, Postmaster-General; Lewis Wallbridge, Solicitor-General West; W. P. Howland, Receiver-General; A. J. Ferguson Blair, Provincial Secretary; L. H. Holton, Finance Minister; A. A. Dorion, Attorney-General East; Letellier de St. Just, Minister of Agriculture; M. Thibadeau, President of the Council.

MEXICO.—The Havannah Diary of the 26th ult. reports the arrival at Havannah of the French war steamer Doria from Vera Cruz, with despatches from General Forey, announcing the occupation of Puebla by the French on the 17th ult., and the unconditional surrender of General Ortega with all his forces.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—Duchy of Cornwall Management Bill.—The Duke of NEWCASTLE having moved that the House go into committee on this Bill, Lord CHELMSFORD objected to certain privileges which it proposed to enable the Duke of Cornwall to confer on the Methodists.—The Duke of NEWCASTLE explained the state of religious feeling in the county, and showed the strong necessity and propriety of assenting to the clause, which was ultimately agreed to. The Bill then passed through Committee. In reply to a question by Lord St. LEONARDS relating to the Royal Victoria Asylum, the Duke of NEWCASTLE briefly stated what steps were about to be taken for the reappointment of the ladies' committee. The Vaccination (Ireland) Bill and the Bakehouse Regulation Bill were read a second time.

MONDAY.—Lord BROUGHAM laid on the table a Bill for the Establishment of Courts of Reconciliation.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, in asking information as to the present state of the Negociations respecting Poland, said that he did not consider he was premature in bringing this subject before the House, as it demanded discussion on the grounds of humanity and justice. The condition of Poland was dangerous, not only to Russia, but to all Europe, for the weakening of Russian influence tended to the destruction of the balance of European power. The more the present state of things was prolonged the greater would be the difficulty of applying a remedy, and he as a friend of Russia as well as of Poland desired to see it ended. Having discussed at some length the impracticable course pursued by the Congress of Vienna in annexing a constitutional kingdom to a despotic Government, he censured the few efforts Russia had made to overcome the difficulties thereby created. It was impossible, however, that there could be a good Government in Poland as long as the Emperor of Russia exercised direct authority: and he expressed a hope that if it were proposed to allow the Poles to manage their own internal affairs under the sovereignty of a Prince belonging to the Imperial family, England and the other Powers would willingly assent to such an arrangement. In conclusion, he scouted the notion of an armistice, and advised the Poles to persevere with arms in their hands until they had secured their liberty and obtained their just rights.—Earl RUSSELL said that since the replies given by the Russian Government to the notes of the three Powers, France and Great Britain had agreed on certain propositions to be made to Russia, and had referred them to Vienna for the assent of the Austrian Government. Such being the case it was as yet hardly fair to discuss them. He then entered at some length into the question raised by Lord Ellenborough as to the wisdom of the course adopted by the Congress of Vienna in regard to Poland and Russia, and detailed the reasons by which Lord Castlereagh had been guided on that occasion. Our present position was to be bound by the treaty of 1815, and it would be the duty of her Majesty's Government to propose terms consistent with that treaty for the advantage of Poland, and to endeavour to conduct the negotiations in such a manner as to preserve the general peace. The Poles would be no gainers by a general war, nor could he see what object the British Government could hope to attain, should it ever enter upon one.—The Duke of RUTLAND thought that the Emperor of Russia, by enforcing the conscription at Warsaw, was only desirous of getting rid of disaffected subjects, in order that he might at once introduce the constitution.—Lord Brougham, judging from the previous benevolent character of the Emperor of Russia, considered it was unfair to impute the conscription to him, although he ought to have repudiated that act instantly. He trusted it might be possible to give a constitution to Poland, and he hoped if a constitution were offered that the Poles would not hesitate to accept it.—Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE hoped that the Poles would not accept a constitution without guarantees from Russia. He doubted, however, whether there could be any security for peace unless Poland were made independent.—Earl GREY thought that if we did not mean to interfere with arms, diplomacy on our part would only aggravate the evils we sought to remedy. Prison Ministers' Bill.—The Duke of SOMERSET, in moving the second reading of this Bill, briefly explained the object of the measure, and dwelt on the propriety of providing for the spiritual wants of Roman Catholic prisoners.—Lord BERNERS thought the Bill unnecessary and mischievous, as it would put the Roman Catholic on an equality with the Established Church. He moved that the Bill be read a second time that day six months.—The Earl of DERBY said his opinion of the policy and justice of the Bill was so strong that, however much he lamented to differ from many of his friends, he felt bound to give a vote in its favour. He appealed to the life-long support he had given to the Established Church as a proof that he would not consent to any measure mischievous to its interest, and he denied that the Bill would place the Roman Catholic Church on an equality with the national establishment. The state of the law was unjust to Roman Catholic prisoners, and was only rendered not intolerable by the good sense of the magistrates, who proprio motu allowed prisoners to send for ministers of their own persuasion. He could not for one moment admit that because the teaching of Roman Catholicism was considered erroneous, therefore no Roman Catholic chaplain should be provided; because, whatever he might think of the errors of the Roman Catholic Church, there was no doubt that the ministrations of that church were alone acceptable to those who believed in it; and it would be most unjust to expect that Roman Catholic priests should attend their co-religionists without payment.—The Earl of HARROWBY thought the Bill would raise a new spirit of discord through England, and therefore opposed the Bill.—Lord CHICHESTER supported the Bill, but objected to its permissive nature, as it would render it inoperative.—The Bishop of LONDON did not know where, if this measure were passed, the principle it laid down would stop, as the same arguments would be used for introducing Roman Catholic priests into workhouses. The present state of the law gave every facility to Roman Catholic prisoners, and he could not understand why the status of a prison chaplain should be given to Roman Catholic priests in order to do that which they could do now.—Lord CORK, Lord ARUNDEL, and Lord DONOUGHMORE supported the Bill.—The Bishop of CASHEL opposed it. On a division the numbers were—for the second reading, 65; against, 30; majority, 35. The Bill was then read a second time.

TUESDAY.—Throne of Greece.—Earl RUSSELL laid upon the table the papers relating to Greece, and stated that Prince William of Denmark had accepted the Crown, and that his title had been recognised by the Great Powers, who would do all they could to get him recognised by other Governments. Among the papers would also be found the communication which had been made to the Powers with respect to the intention of her Majesty to cede the Ionian Islands to Greece.—The Earl of CARNARVON moved the second reading of the Security from Violence Bill sent up from the Commons, and the object of which, he reminded their lordships, was to inflict the punishment of flogging upon persons committing garotte offences.—Lord CRANWORTH moved as an amendment that the Bill be read a second time that day three months. He condemned it as a retrograde measure, which would do more harm than good. The present law would, he thought, be quite sufficient to punish offenders without a resort to panic legislation.—Earl GRANVILLE supported the amendment, for he could not approve of the Bill, although it had been passed by the other House of Parliament with large majorities; but, looking at the crowded state of the Opposition benches, he thought it would be useless to persist in opposing it further. After a few words from the Earl of HARDWICKE and HARROWBY, the Bill was read a second time without a division. On the report of amendments to the Duchy of Cornwall Management Bill being brought up, a long discussion ensued on the powers taken in the Bill for making grants of land for Dissenting Chapels, the Earl of DERBY expressing his opinion that the blocks of land in many instances for church, school, and parsonage-house would amount to an endowment. Ultimately the further consideration of the report was postponed to Friday.

THURSDAY.—Case of Sergeant-Major Lilley.—The Earl of SHAFTESBURY gave notice that on Monday he would ask whether the Government intended to institute a further inquiry into the conduct of Colonel Crawley, of the 6th Dragoon Guards, in reference to the death of Sergeant-Major Lilley.—The Earl of CARNARVON asked Earl Russell whether he could give any further information with respect to the nature and provisions of the recent Convention between the Governments of Russia and Prussia. He considered that the interference of the Prussian Government was a needless aggravation of the deplorable struggle now going on, and although the Prussian Government chose to merge its constitutional forms in those of a despotism, it was a matter for which it was responsible to Prussians only. Still, if they violated the principles of international law, as they had done in aiding Russia, they were responsible to the other Powers of Europe, especially to those who were parties to the treaty of Vienna. Although the Prussian Minister declared that the convention was not ratified, Sir A. Buchanan had declared that it was virtually in force, and the admission of the Government confirmed this opinion. It also appeared that the copy shown to Sir A. Buchanan by Count Von Bismark differed from that shown at St. Petersburgh to Lord Napier, who had ascertained that there was a secret article which had not been alluded to by Count Von Bismark. Such equivocation was very unworthy of the Prussian Government, whose policy was dangerous to itself, and fraught with mischief to Europe at large.—Earl RUSSELL said he could not add anything to the information contained in the papers already laid before Parliament. The noble earl had truly described the convention as being represented at Berlin as solely a military one, entered into at the request of Russia, whilst at St. Petersburg it was represented as entered into at the request of Prussia. In fine, there were all sorts of contradictions and mystery in reference to the terms of the convention, and whether it was a military one, or whatever it might be termed, it went beyond the arrangements which Prussia would be justified in making to prevent the insurrection extending into Prussian Poland. The Bakehouses Regulation Bill was read a third time and passed.

FRIDAY.—The Statute Law.—The LORD CHANCELLOR rose to call attention to the present state of the Statute Law and of the reports of decisions in the Courts of Law and Equity, and to introduce a Bill for the revision of the statute law. The object of the measure would be to insure a greater certainty in legal decisions—that a case might be decided according to the statute rather than by precedent. In asserting the necessity of such a measure, he quoted statements made by Lord Eldon, Lord Ellenborough, and other learned lords in giving judgment in cases which had come before them, all bearing evidence to the glorious uncertainty of the law.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—Public Works.—On the order for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. B. COCHRANE moved as an amendment, that for the sake of obtaining greater unity of design in our public buildings, and with a view to efficiency and economy, it is desirable that a permanent commissioner of public works and buildings should be appointed. He drew the attention of the House to many of our public buildings and monuments, to show the manner in which those works had been carried on, and the enormous excess of expenditure thereon beyond the estimates, caused, he contended, by the constant changes in the management of the Board of Works; and he thought the appointment of a permanent Commissioner would be an important step in the reform of the management of Public Works.—Mr. COWPER defended the administration of the Board of Works, and said that the greater portion of the extravagant expenditure complained of had been incurred when the Chief Commissioner was a permanent officer and not responsible to Parliament. He granted that there was an advantage in favour of permanency; but that was counterbalanced by the commissioner being in such case removed from Parliamentary influence, and his department not represented in the House of Commons.—Sir J. SHELLEY was convinced that, looking to the interests of the country, as regarded expenditure, it was expedient that there should be a permanent Commissioner of Public Works.—Sir M. PETO said what was wanted here was what they had in France—a person able to deal with questions in relation to public works, without causing disappointment. He desired to see a reform of the whole department; that the Board of Public Works should be really a department of public works.—Lord J. MANNERS said that there was already a permanent officer in the Board of Works, and that in his opinion the appointment of a permanent commissioner was not called for. The motion was then withdrawn. Ordnance Survey.—In answer to Mr. H. BAILLIE, the Marquis of HARTINGTON said that the men employed on the Scotch survey had been removed for the purpose of completing the surveys of the south-coast for the new fortifications, but they would immediately resume their duties in Scotland. Electric Light at Portland.—Lord LOVAINE asked if it was intended to adopt the electric light at Portland.—Mr. M. GIBSON said the Board of Trade had no power to introduce new lights along the coast, but he understood that Professor Faraday had reported to the Trinity Board that it would not be expedient as yet to rely exclusively on the electric light. For his own part he considered that the experiment of the light at Dungeness was most satisfactory.—Sir J. PAKINGTON urged the great advantage that would result from the employment of the light. After some observations from Lord H. VANE and Mr HENNESSY, the subject dropped. Case of Sergeant-Major Lilley.—Mr. FORTESCUE called attention to the circumstances attending the death, after four weeks imprisonment, of regimental Sergeant-Major Lilley, of the 6th Dragoons, at Mhow, in India, on the 25th May, 1862, and to the imprisonment at the same time, for a still longer period, of Troop Sergeant-Majors Duval and Wakefield, of the same regiment, without either of the three having been brought to trial, or any formal charge having been preferred against them, and asked whether Colonel Crawley, the commanding officer, under whose authority these transactions took place, was still permitted to command the regiment. He described the circumstances under which Lilley and his wife had died, and observed that, although redress and reparation were now out of the question, it was not too late for punishment—such punishment as he hoped the indignant voice of the House of Commons would mete out to him. He added that, should Colonel Crawley return to England, it was the intention of the friends of the late Sergeant Lilley to indict him for manslaughter.—Mr. CONINGHAM considered that Colonel Crawley was a disgrace to her Majesty's service, and that if the Duke of Cambridge retained him in the service his royal highness was unfit to command the British army.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON entered into a long statement of the circumstances which had led to the imprisonment of Sergeant-Major Lilley, which he admitted to have been a most unfortunate and tragic circumstance. The Judge-Advocate-General had given his opinion that there was not sufficient ground for charging Lilley with conspiracy or for sentencing him to imprisonment. It was, however, necessary to remember that Major-General Farrell was superior to Colonel Crawley, and that Sir William Mansfield was superior to Major General Farrell. An inquiry would, however, be instituted into the conduct of Colonel Crawley upon some of the collateral circumstances arising out of the transaction, and an allowance similar to the pension to which Sergeant Lilley would have been entitled would be given to his family.—Alderman SIDNEY hoped that there would be a most searching inquiry, for he believed that nothing short of the dismissal of Colonel Crawley would satisfy the public.—Colonel BARTTELOT said that Colonel Crawley courted the fullest inquiry into the charges brought against him.—Mr. Serjeant PIGOTT asked who was to blame if Colonel Crawley was not.—Captain ARCHDALL, as an old Inniskillinger, hoped the inquiry would have the effect of restoring the character of the regiment, and that the guilty parties, whoever they were, would be brought to justice. The House then went into committee of supply on the Civil Service Estimates, commencing with the vote of 80,000*l*. for Alderney and Dover Harbours of Refuge, which Mr. LINDSAY moved should be struck out, on the ground that the works were wholly useless and a source of danger rather than of security to shipping. After some discussion, during which Sir J. ELPHINSTONE said that the expenditure of a million of money on Alderney harbour had produced nothing but a perilous shoal, the committee divided, when the vote was agreed to by 76 to 62. Another long debate arose on the vote for Holyhead and Portpatrick harbours, with reference to the sum of 5000*l*. for the latter harbour, the vote being ultimately agreed to. Other votes were likewise agreed to, after much discussion, and the CHAIRMAN was ordered to report the resolutions. The Inland Revenue Bill, on the report, received further amendments. The Report of the Committee of Supply was brought up and agreed to. On the order for the third reading of the Drainage and Improvement of Land (Ireland) Bill, Mr. HENNESSY moved that the Bill be recommitted. After some discussion the debate was adjourned. Several Bills were forwarded a stage.

MONDAY.—On the order for going into a Committee of Supply, Mr. GREGORY moved a resolution that the Royal Botanical Gardens at Edinburgh should be open to the public after the hours of Divine service on Sundays, as is the case of other botanical gardens supported by Parliamentary grants. He urged the success that had attended the experiment elsewhere, and mentioned facts which showed the manner in which signatures had been obtained to a petition against the proposal. —The LORD ADVOCATE opposed the motion, on the ground that there was no necessity for a measure that would give offence to a large portion of the community in Scotland. He pointed out distinctions between the cases of the Dublin and Edinburgh gardens.—Mr STIRLING supported the motion. He admitted that a large majority of the clergy of Scotland opposed the proposal, but he did not believe that they represented the intelligent opinion of the laity. He stated additional facts, showing the scandalous mode in which petitions were got up. —The resolution was supported by Mr. G DUFF, and opposed by Mr. BLACK, Mr. KINNAIRD, and Mr. MURE, who said that the great preponderance of public opinion in Scotland was against the measure, and that there was no necessity for it.—Major HAMILTON also testified that the feeling of the people of Edinburgh, high and low, was against it.—After some observations by Mr. SCULLY in favour of the motion, Lord PALMERSTON said, although he could see no harm, but good, in the measure proposed by Mr Gregory, there was another consideration which ought to guide the House—namely, the religious, sincere, and honest feeling of the people of Scotland, to which they ought not, he thought, to do violence without very powerful reasons. Now, the feeling of the people of Scotland was said to be against the opening of the gardens on Sundays, and the Lord Advocate had shown that there was no necessity for the measure.—On a division the motion was negatived by 123 to 107. The House, having resolved itself into a Committee of Supply, resumed the consideration of the remaining Civil Service Estimates. The vote of 6000*l*. for the "four colossal couchant lions," to be placed on the pedestals at the base of the Nelson Column in Trafalgar Square, gave occasion to many remarks upon the extraordinary delay which had taken place in furnishing these ornaments. While discussing the vote for Lighthouses abroad, the Committee was counted out about a quarter past 8 o'clock.

TUESDAY.—The Fisheries Commission.—In reply to Sir E. GROGAN, Mr M. GIBSON stated that the royal commission about to be appointed would be instructed to include within its inquiry the sea fisheries of Ireland. Clerical Subscription.—Mr. BUXTON moved a resolution that the subscription required from the clergy to the Thirty-nine Articles and to the Prayer-book ought to be relaxed. He argued that the subscription was unnecessary and mischievous, and that it did violence to the consciences of many scrupulous persons, and deterred the best men of the Universities from offering themselves for ordination. The question was one essentially for the laity, as represented by Parliament, to deal with, and it was their duty to relieve the clergy from what they felt to be a grievous burden, and to open the way to the Church of England for many who were now excluded. The motion was seconded by Mr. GRANT DUFF.—Mr. M. MILNES moved an amendment to limit Mr. Buxton's resolution to the subject of subscription to the Prayer-book. In adopting this suggestion the House would not, he said, derogate from the integrity of the Church of England, or damage her power or influence, but would do a simple political right in expiation of a political wrong.—Mr KINNAIRD seconded the amendment.—Sir G. GREY saw many grave objections to adopting either the motion or the amendment. He was not, however, prepared to say that the present law might not be amended without inflicting injury upon the interests of the Church. In his opinion the law was not satisfactory, because it imposed obligations upon clergymen which might be met by a simple declaration. No change ought, however, to be introduced without the most careful inquiry. Believing that both the motion and the amendment would only create uncertainty and unreasonable expectations with regard to the length to which Parliament might be disposed to go, he would suggest that the amendment should be withdrawn, in which case he would move "the previous question" to the original motion. The amendment was then withdrawn, and the "previous question" put.—Mr NEWDEGATE expressed his regret that the Government had not taken a more decided course on this subject, for the motion, if adopted, would give far greater latitude of teaching to the clergy. The subscriptions to which exceptions were taken were the security to the laity that when they went to church they should hear the doctrine of their Church faithfully expounded.—Mr. WALPOLE warned the House how it tampered with those safeguards under which the Church of England had grown up to be the most pure and tolerant establishment in the world.—Mr. MORRISON supported, and Sir S. NORTHCOTE opposed the motion.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER defended the retention of the subscriptions, which he said had grown up out of the real boná fide necessity of the Church from the time of the Reformation. It was the opinion of the Government that the present state of the law on the subject was capable of improvement; it was, therefore, prudent not to meet the motion with a direct negative. The Government were not prepared to take upon themselves to propose any change, but to leave it open to consideration whether some improvement was not desirable, in boná fide concurrence with the ministers of the Church.—Mr. HADFIELD and Mr. B. JOHNSTONE supported the motion, Mr. LEFROY opposed it.—Mr. HENLEY referred to the unwillingness of young men to take orders. No one said that the formularies of the Church were wrong, or that the articles were wrong, or that men should profess what they did not believe. Mr. Buxton had asked them first to cut the cable and cast the ship loose, and then he would say what he would do.—Mr. H. SEYMOUR thought that, in moderate times like these, it would be desirable to do away with tests which had been imposed in an epoch of great excitement. That such tests were not necessary was proved by the Episcopal Chuch in America, where declarations were used in lieu of them.—Lord R. CECIL thought that the reason why young men were not entering the Church as heretofore was to be traced to causes far deeper than an objection to subscription—namely, an objection to the articles themselves. There could be no doubt that there was an intellectual movement against the truths in which the articles were enshrined, and that higher minds of the day were casting about for something to believe. He did not regard the subscription as an obstacle to Episcopal ordination, and therefore he would vote for its retention.—Mr. DISRAELI said the Government, in moving the previous question, had consented to a course which conveyed an implied assent that there were grounds for the House to consider the desirability of making some alteration in the existing law. He disapproved of this attempt to tamper with the ancient documents of the Church. There was nothing in the constitution which could not be cavilled at, questioned, and "improved;" but he feared that if these assaults were made upon the safeguard of the Church the result would be to sap the foundations of that edifice of public rights and liberties which had been built up with so much pains and consolidated at so much cost. If there was to be inquiry at all, the proper course would be to appoint a Royal Commission, who could submit the result of their deliberations to Convocation, and ultimately to Parliament. For his own part, he preferred rather to stand upon the ancient land-marks of the Church than to lend himself to the new and dangerous philosophy indicated by the motion.—Sir G. BOWYER said that his Church had no Act of Uniformity, but that, if he belonged to the Anglican Church, as he once did, he would not give a farthing for such an Act. The previous question was then put and agreed to without a division.—Mr. DALGLISH moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the constitution of the Board of Admiralty, and into the different departments under the control of that Board.—The motion was seconded by Mr. JACKSON, and opposed by Mr. SCOURFIELD, who pointed out the inability of a committee to conduct such an inquiry at this period of the session.—Mr. BENTINCK, though concurring in the object which Mr Dalglish had in view, recommended him to withdraw the motion.—Lord C. PAGET was not prepared to admit that the Admiralty was a perfect institution, but he contended that the evils evils incidental to it were greatly exaggerated. He expressed his willingness at any time to lay before the House all information that might be required with reference either to the constitution or the administration of the Admiralty. The real object of the motion appeared to be to take exception to the Admiralty, because they had commenced building iron ships in their own yards instead of giving commissions to the owners of private yards.—Sir H. WILLOUGHBY moved the adjournment of the debate, which was agreed to.

WEDNESDAY.—The Innkeepers Liability (No. 1) Bill and the Savings Banks Acts Amendment Bill, passed through committee. —Mr WARD HUNT moved the second reading of the Election Petitions Bill, the object of which was to prevent the withdrawal of a petition without the particulars of such withdrawal being disclosed to a standing committee of the House. He did not, however, wish to force any petitioner against his will to proceed with his petition, but to prevent sham petitions for purposes of extortion or annoyance, or with the view of effecting corrupt bargains.—Mr. COX supported the second reading, having been himself the object of a sham petition for the purpose of extortion.—Mr. COLLINS believed that more boná fide petitions were withdrawn than there were sham petitions presented. He would, however, support the preamble, as such assent would not preclude him from opposing the clauses.—Mr. BOUVERIE thought the Bill would impose a check upon the presentation of sham petitions.—Mr. AYRTON doubted whether the House would not be doing more harm than good by discouraging the presentation of petitions.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL joined in the approbation expressed of the main provisions of the Bill, but he thought the House ought to be very careful not to interfere with the right of petitioning. After a few words from Serjeant PIGOTT and Sir W. MILES in favour of the Bill, the motion for the second reading was agreed to. The Metropolis Turnpike Roads Acts Amendment Bill passed through committee. The Local Government Supplemental Bill, and the Dockyards Protection Act Amendment Bill were read a third time and passed. The Officers of Royal Naval Reserve Bill passed through committee.

THURSDAY.—The Slave Trade.—In reply to Mr CONINGHAM, Lord PALMERSTON said that the Federal Government of the United States had concluded a treaty with Great Britain for the suppression of the slave trade, and that the Government of the Confederate States had passed a law making the slave trade highly penal. As, however, the United States and the Confederate States had no relations save those of war, and as her Majesty's Government had not yet recognised the Confederate States, it would be impossible to enter into friendly negotiations for the extinction of slavery on the American continent. Educational Charities.—On the order for going into a Committee of Supply Mr. G DUFF called attention to the abuses existing in many endowed charities, with especial reference to their bearing upon the amount of the vote for elementary education. He complained of the great waste of power caused by the manner in which the large revenues of some of these charities were administered, pointing out instances in which they were applied to superfluous, obsolete, or even mischievous objects, and might be devoted to educational purposes. Large sums of public money were obtained in certain counties where charitable endowments existed, the funds of which, if properly regulated, would suffice without any public aid. Reports of School Inspectors.—Mr. W. E. FORSTER asked upon what conditions the reports of her Majesty's inspectors of schools were allowed to be published for the information of the House.—Mr LOWE said that the Council of Education published all the reports of the inspectors with the exception of those passages which in the opinion of the Council ought not to be printed. It was clear that no department of the Government could be efficiently conducted if subordinates were allowed to publish reports which had not been brought under the supervision of the heads of the department.—Mr. ADDERLEY, Lord R. CECIL, and Mr. CHILDERS complained of the inordinate length of the reports, and expressed a hope that in future some means might be taken to condense them.—The O'DONOGHUE made an appeal to the Government to fix a day for the discussion of Mr. DILLWYN's motion on the Ecclesiastical Revenues of Ireland.—Lord PALMERSTON said it was not the duty of the Government to find days for private members to bring on motions. This was the duty of the members themselves, who had ample opportunities. Several of the Irish members complained of the course taken by the Government. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the remaining Civil Service Estimates, and a number of votes were agreed to. On the vote of 604,000*l*. for Education, Mr. LOWE made a short explanation, in which he stated that the number of children in schools was 1,057,426—that school accommodation was provided for 1,378,000—and that the actual average number of children attending all the schools was 914,000. The vote now asked was 36,000*l*. less than that of last year.—Mr. BLACK objected to the stipends to pupil teachers, and moved that the vote be reduced by the sum of 40,000*l*.—Mr. LOWE defended the vote, and observed that after the 30th of the present month (on which day the revised code would come into operation) no more pupil teachers would be engaged by the Government. The vote was eventually agreed to. The vote of 82,883*l*. for the department of science and art also led to a lengthened discussion with reference to the South Kensington Museum, in the course of which the architecture of the building was freely discussed, Mr. LOCKE declaring that it was absolutely hideous, while Mr. CONINGHAM suggested that it should be removed.—Sir M. W. RIDLEY also complained of the defective mode of ventilation in the picture galleries, which, he said, was gradually injuring the paintings. An objection was likewise taken to the expenditure on account of four houses as permanent residences for the officers. Ultimately Mr. A. SMITH moved that the vote be reduced by 10,000*l*., but on a division the amendment was rejected by 129 to 31, and the vote was agreed to.—On the report of the Volunteers Bill, Sir R. CLIFTON moved an amendment of Clause 20, which he had moved in the Committee, that the sufficiency of the cause of dismission be judged of by a court, to consist of a captain, two subalterns, and two non-commissioned officers or privates of the corps. He alluded to cases of summary dismission of Volunteers by their commanding officer.—Mr. GRIFFITH spoke in favour of the amendment, which was likewise supported by Mr. COX, who contended that the Volunteers were at the mercy of their commanding officers, and mentioned instances in which individual Volunteers had been harshly treated.—Lord ELCHO replied to Mr. Cox, and showed that, in one of the cases he had mentioned, the facts did not justify his complaint. He protested against commanders of Volunteers being held up as tyrants, when every Volunteer had the remedy in his own hands.—After some observations by Colonel EDWARDS and Mr. HENNESSY, the Marquis of HARTINGTON opposed the amendment upon the same grounds as he had urged in the Committee, and contended that the clause was essential to the discipline of Volunteer corps. On a division the amendment was negatived by 100 to 29. A few verbal amendments were agreed to.—The Drainage and Improvement of Land (Ireland) Bill was recommitted.

FRIDAY.—Fisheries (Ireland) Bill.—After some remarks from Mr. V. SCULLY, Sir F. HEYGATE, and other gentlemen, the House went into committee on this Bill, when Sir Robert PEEL stated the intentions of Government and the alterations they proposed to introduce. The discussions on the various clauses occupied the remainder of the morning sitting. The House resumed at 6 o'clock. [Left sitting.]

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—On Saturday her Majesty's birthday was celebrated in the metropolis with more than ordinary enthusiasm, being the first demonstration of the kind since the death of the Prince Consort. All the Government offices were closed, and flags floated over the various public establishments. At noon Royal salutes were fired in the parks and the Tower, as well as at Woolwich, and the household troops paraded in the Wellington Barracks. In the evening the Cabinet ministers and other great officers of state gave full dress banquets in honour of the day, and the public establishments, the clubs and the principal shops were brilliantly illuminated.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES AT GUILDHALL.—On Monday evening the Prince and Princess of Wales were entertained by the Corporation of the City of London at a grand ball in Guildhall, in the presence of one of the most illustrious assemblages which the municipality has ever drawn together to share in its magnificent hospitality. The entertainment was worthy both of the guests and the City. All old precedents were quite disregarded on the occasion. The Metropolitan police not only aided the City functionaries, but actually lined the route. Barriers were erected and maintained at every opening, while the Life Guards kept the streets as early as 6 o'clock. The decorations of Guildhall were taken out of the hands of city architects and officials, and entrusted entirely to Mr. Crace, under whose skilful directions the old hall assumed an appearance such as it has never presented since its ancient roof was destroyed in the fire of London. A temporary roof was erected similar in appearance to those at Hampton Court, Westminster Hall, and other celebrated examples, giving the edifice the appearance of a grand baronial hall of the Tudor period. The arches were painted of a light colour, slightly relieved by lines of various tints, and bearing shields on which the arms of the 12 great City companies were displayed. The arms of the ancient Lord Mayors were emblazoned on a series of shields on the left side of the hall, and on the corresponding side were the arms of more recent civic chiefs down to those of the present Lord Mayor. At the sides the panels in the walls were filled with the arms of some of the numerous royal visitors to Guildhall, 18 in number, from Henry V. to the Emperor Napoleon. The throne and canopy at the eastern end of the hall were of a truly regal character. At the back of the daïs was hung a rich cloth of state, on which were emblazoned the arms of the Prince and Princess of Wales. The dais was surmounted by a canopy, at the front and sides of which was a valance ornamented with the arms of the Prince and Princess, and the rose, shamrock, and thistle, while above was an enormous Prince's plume in spun glass. The banners of the various City companies, and of the principal cities in the kingdom, were suspended round the upper part of the hall. The armorial bearings of the Prince and Princess Christian of Denmark, and the Danish national arms, emblazoned on oval shields, and surrounded by trophies of banners, were fixed half way up the columns of the hall. In addition to the clusters of lights suspended from the roof, many of the arches were lighted by lines of gas jets, having baskets of flowers beneath them. The floor was covered with a carpet manufactured for the occasion, and of a colour to harmonise with the general character of the decorations. The upper part of the daïs, on which the chairs of state for the Prince and Princess were placed, were covered with a carpet of a deep blue colour. The Council Chamber upstairs was fitted up as the Royal supper room, and presented a grand and regal aspect. Its lantern and tapering roof had been exquisitely gilded and decorated by Mr. Crace, and from the four columns on which the dome rests depended large gilt baskets filled with flowers. The lights from above were so arranged as to fall upon the portrait of her Majesty in her coronation robes. The east end of the Chamber was filled in with mirrors, between tall, green banks of heaths, ferns, and palms, which made the end of the room seem like a luxuriant garden in the tropics, in the centre of which a scented fountain cast its fresh spray into the air. The sides of the Chamber were hung with two rich tapestries by Giulio Romano. The north end of the Chamber was devoted to a display of the almost untold wealth of the Corporation and the great City Companies, and from the floor almost to the ceiling the side of the Chamber was hidden by massive gold plate. In the Court of Aldermen was arranged, for the gratification of the Princess, a representation in real foliage of the country residence and gardens in Denmark where she passed much of her youthful life. The surprise and evident gratification which this afforded her was one of the prettiest incidents of the night. In Guildhall Yard a temporary building in the Gothic style was erected two stories high, the basement serving as a reception room, and the upper story being the supper room for the general company. Both these apartments, though necessarily of a temporary character, were decorated with great taste in harmony with the hall itself. The company began to arrive as early as 6 o'clock. At a quarter past 9 a flourish of trumpets announced the arrival of the Royal guests. It took some time for them all to assemble in the reception hall, for the party was a large and brilliant one. Foremost came the Prince and Princess, the former wearing his uniform of a General in the Army, with the riband and star of the Garter. The latter wore a rich but simple white dress, with the coronet and brooch of diamonds given her by her Royal husband, but with the superb City necklace of brilliants. Her hair was turned back from her forehead, in the style with which her portraits have made all so familiar, setting off her features to the utmost advantage. With them came Prince Alfred, in his lieutenant's uniform, his face looking bronzed, and almost weather-beaten, in contrast with the fair complexion of his brother or the still more delicate bloom of his young sister-in-law. With the Royal party were the Duchess of Cambridge, the Duke of Cambridge, Princess Mary, Prince of Reuss Schleiz, the Prince of Orange, and the Princess of Servia, attended by a numerous suite. The Princess of Wales took the arm of the Lord Mayor, while the Prince gave his to the Lady Mayoress, and the party, headed by the Entertainment Committee, entered the hall, the band playing the National Anthem. On reaching the daïs the city officials mustered round a plain office table placed at the foot of the throne. At the head of this the Lord Mayor took the chair, and the members of the Corporation present at once resolved themselves into a Court of Common Council, the Lord Mayor, as President of the Court, wearing his official robes and gold chain; the aldermen their scarlet robes, and the councillors their mazarine gowns. The ponderous sword and mace of the Corporation lay piled in front of the Chief Magistrate. The Town Clerk, the Chamberlain, and the Clerk of the Chamber, took their usual places, wearing their official robes. The Court then, taking no manner of cognizance of the presence of Royalty, began to read the minutes of the previous Court, which were duly confirmed by a show of hands. The Town Clerk then read the resolution of the Court of the 12th March last, requesting the Prince to take up his freedom by patrimony, and directing that a copy of the freedom be thereupon presented to him in a casket of the value of 250*l*. The formal documents having been read, his Royal Highness read aloud and subscribed the usual declaration of loyalty to the Queen and obedience to the Mayor of the city. The Chamberlain then addressed the Prince in an appropriate speech, in which he recounted the virtues of the Prince Consort, and congratulated his Royal Highness on being the first Prince of Wales who had claimed the freedom by patrimony—that is, as a son born subsequently to his father's admission to citizenship. The Prince replied as follows:—

"My Lord Mayor, Mr. Chamberlain, and Gentlemen,—It is, I assure you, a source of sincere gratification to me to attend here for the purpose of being invested with a privilege which, for the reasons you have stated, you are unable to confer upon me, and which descends to me by inheritance. It is a patrimony that I am proud to claim—this freedom of the greatest city of the commercial world, which holds its charter from such an ancient date. My pride is increased when I call to memory the long list of illustrious men who have been enrolled among the citizens of London, more especially when I connect with that list the beloved father to whom you have adverted in such warm terms of eulogy and respect, and through whom I am here to claim my freedom of the City of London. My Lord Mayor and gentlemen, the Princess and myself heartily thank you for the past, for your loyalty and expressions of attachment towards the Queen, for the manifestation of this evening towards ourselves, and for all your prayers for our future happiness."

The Prince spoke in a clear voice, every syllable being heard throughout the vast hall with the utmost distinctness. At the conclusion of his reply a loud shout of acclamation arose from the company, and the orchestra again played a few bars of the National Anthem. It was then resolved that the address and reply be entered on the minutes, and the ceremonies terminated with the presentation of the two senior Aldermen, the mover and seconder of the address, and the Chairman of the Entertainment Committee. The Royal visitors then withdrew from the Hall, but, presently returning, the ball began, the Lord Mayor leading off in a quadrille with the Princess, immediately in front of the haut pas, and the Prince with the Lady Mayoress. Prince Alfred danced with the Princess Mary of Cambridge; and the Duke of Cambridge, the Earl of Mount Edgecumbe, Lord and Lady Bury, Major Teesdale, Colonel Keppel, the Hon. Mrs. Stonor, the Hon. Miss Stanley, Earl de Grey and Lord Harris took part in the quadrille. For nearly two hours the dancing was maintained with unflagging spirit, her Royal Highness joining repeatedly, and the Prince still more frequently. On one occasion, the Prince of Orange danced with the Princess in a quadrille, Prince Alfred dancing with the Lady Mayoress, and the Princess Mary with the Lord Mayor. At times the Duke of Cambridge, the Prince Reuss Schleiz, the Duke of Manchester, Earl Granville, Lord Grosvenor, Lord Bury, and other distinguished persons, joined in the dance, which was conducted in an open space in front of the daïs, kept with difficulty from the eager crowd of guests who pressed forward to witness it. Shortly before 12 o'clock the Reception Committee, amid a flourish of trumpets, led the way for the Royal party to supper in the Council Chamber, the Lord Mayor conducting the Princess, and the Prince the Lady Mayoress. The Lord and Lady Mayoress presided at the Royal table, the Princess of Wales being on the right of the Lord Mayor and the Prince on the left of the Lady Mayoress. On the left of the Prince of Wales sat the Duchess of Cambridge and Prince Alfred; on the right of the Princess the Prince of Orange, the Princess Mary, and the Duke of Cambridge. The other visitors who had the honour of supping with the Royal party, were her Majesty's Ministers and great Officers of State, the Foreign Ambassadors and their wives. The general company supped in the apartment over the Reception Saloon, and in the smaller Courts up stairs, the total number provided for being about 2000. The Prince and Princess left Guildhall at one o'clock, after cordially thanking the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress for the magnificent entertainment afforded them by the Corporation. The ball was subsequently renewed, and at six o'clock on Tuesday morning the hall was not deserted by the latest guests.

INAUGURATION OF THE PRINCE CONSORT'S MEMORIAL.—The public ceremony of uncovering the commemorative Memorial, erected not less as a perpetual record of the Great Exhibition of 1851 than as a tribute to the Prince Consort to whom its success was due, was celebrated at South Kensington on Wednesday with every circumstance of stately pomp and Royal ceremony. The whole fête was well planned in its broad features, well arranged in its minute details, and passed off with complete success. The line of procession from under the West Dome of the Exhibition through the Horticultural Gardens was marked out by double rows of seats, giving sitting accommodation to more than 10,000 visitors, the Exhibition building and the gardens being considered as one during the day. The seats for the Royal party were placed under the Western Dome, all the space around them being railed off for the official personages who took part in the procession. The seats round this enclosure were filled as early as 2 o'clock with a brilliant assembly, and at 3 there were at least 12,000 or 14,000 people in addition, collected on the line of route in the gardens. Precisely at 4 o'clock, with characteristic punctuality, the Royal carriages drove up to the western entrance. The rattle of arms was heard as the Guard of Honour of the Grenadiers saluted, the band struck up the National Anthem, and a loud cheer greeted the entrance of the Royal party. The Prince of Wales wore the uniform of a General Officer. The Princess was dressed in a pale mauve moire antique, with a white lace mantle and a light bonnet. The Princesses Helena and Louisa wore plain morning dresses. Prince Alfred wore the uniform of a Lieutenant in the Navy; and the two younger Princes, Arthur and Leopold, wore kilts of Royal Stuart tartan. The Executive branch of the Memorial Committee and a deputation of the members of the Horticultural Society having been presented by the Duke of Buccleuch to the Prince of Wales, the procession was immediately formed in the following order:—Trumpeters; Mr. George Eyles, Superintendent of the Horticultural Gardens; the Sculptor, Mr. Joseph Durham; the Memorial Committee; the Mayors, Provosts, and Chief Magistrates of those Cities and Towns which in 1851 formed Local Committees; the Lord Provost of Perth, the Lord Mayor of York, Lord Provost of Glasgow, Lord Mayor of Dublin, and Lord Provost of Edinburgh; the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex; the Lord Mayor of London; the Council of the Society of Arts; the Presidents of Learned and Scientific Societies of which his Royal Highness the Prince Consort was a Member; Her Majesty's Commissioners for the Exhibitions of 1851 and 1862, and their Secretaries; the Household of the Prince Consort; the Corps Diplomatique; the Members of her Majesty's Government and Household; the Archbishop of Canterbury; the Duke of Buccleuch and Council of the Horticultural Society, and the Executive Department of the Memorial Committee. The Prince and Princess of Wales followed, accompanied by Prince Alfred, the Princess Helena, the Princess Louisa, Prince Arthur, Prince Leopold, the Duchess of Cambridge, the Duke of Cambridge, the Princess Mary of Cambridge, and their respective suites. With trumpets sounding, the procession passed halfway down the nave, and then, turning to the left and ascending the gallery stairs, filed into a large temporary balcony, gaily decorated with garlands of flowers and scarlet hangings, which overlooked the Horticultural Gardens. The Royal party took their seats in the central part of the balcony, which projected beyond the rest of the structure. The appearance of the Prince and Princess of Wales was the signal for renewed cheering from the mass of spectators gathered in the open air. The Duke of Buccleuch, at the head of the Council of the Horticultural Society, then approached the Prince of Wales and presented, without reading, an address, congratulating his Royal Highness on his marriage, expressing the grief of the Society at the death of the Prince Consort, and concluding with a statement of the satisfactory progress of the Society, which now numbers 3450 Fellows. The Prince of Wales briefly thanked the Council for the address, and stated that a reply would be forwarded to them. The united bands of the Guards then performed Lindpainter's "Procession March," after which Mr. George Godwin, Honorary Secretary to the Executive Department of the Memorial Committee, stepped forward and read the following address:—

"May it please your Royal Highness,—In the year 1853, a meeting convened by the Lord Mayor of London, Mr. Thomas Challis, M.P., and presided over by him, was held in the Mansion House, to consider the propriety of erecting some memorial of the Great Exhibition of 1851, in connexion with a tribute of admiration to its great founder, the Prince Consort, your Royal Highness's illustrious and lamented father. The propriety of the step was at once recognised; and it was resolved unanimously, as well by the country at large as by the meeting, that the Exhibition 'was an event of the greatest importance to the nations of the world, by enabling them to observe the relative influence of science, art, and national characteristics upon production, by furnishing the means of a valuable review of the past, and by marking a new starting point for the future progress of productive industry and giving it an increased stimulus.' The meeting saw, too, with the wise author of the undertaking, that its tendency had been to promote useful intercourse between all peoples, and to induce in them feelings of good will towards each other. Money was accordingly subscribed for the erection of a Memorial, and active steps were taken to obtain a place for the intended monument on the site of the Exhibition in Hyde Park. Artists of all countries were invited to submit drawings and models in competition, and ultimately, out of nearly 50, the design sent in by Mr. Joseph Durham was selected. The endeavours to procure a site in the Park having failed, we, the Executive Committee, who had met with difficulties that might not have been anticipated—sought the aid of the Prince Consort. This was at once freely accorded on the condition, characteristic of his Royal Highness's noble self-denial, that the Memorial should be in no way personal, but one to which he could himself subscribe. The Royal Horticultural Society granted the fine site before which we now stand, on land belonging to the Royal Commissioners for the Great Exhibition, and therefore appropriate, the Commissioners themselves concurring in the grant; and from that time till the very last his Royal Highness continued to give consideration and personal assistance of inestimable value in completing and carrying out the project. Guided by his cultivated judgment, and aided by an increase of the funds, the design was enlarged and improved to its present form; and the last public act of the Prince in London was the approval of the statue of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, then intended to surmount the Memorial. A letter from your Royal Highness after the painful event that had plunged the nation into grief conveying the will of the Queen, that instead of Her Majesty's statue that of her beloved husband should crown the Memorial, and offering on your Royal Highness's own part to present the statue proposed to be thus placed—a letter which touched the heart of the country—enabled us to carry out the original desire of the subscribers, which was emphatically to offer a public and lasting tribute in connection with the Great Exhibition of 1851 to the good Prince—'to whose far-seeing and comprehensive philanthropy' (as now recorded on the face of the Memorial) 'its first conception was due, and to whose clear judgment and untiring exertions in directing its execution the world is indebted for its unprecedented success.' We take the liberty of expressing our great satisfaction with the admirable manner in which Mr. Durham has executed the commission confided to him. He has produced a work that we believe to be honourable alike to himself and to the country; and we trust this feeling will be generally shared in, especially by those eminent persons who assisted in the Great Exhibition, and whose names he has consequently recorded on enduring granite. In concluding this brief account of our proceedings, we tender most grateful thanks to the Queen for the interest Her Majesty has been pleased to show in the progress of this work, and the all-important assistance thus rendered us in our self-imposed labour. And we pray heartily and devoutly that Almighty God may, in his goodness, long preserve Her Majesty's life—a life most precious to her loyal and loving people. It only remains for us to acknowledge most respectfully the anxious readiness with which you, Sir, accompanied by the illustrious Princess whom all the kingdom welcomes with open heart, and by your Royal brothers and sisters, have graciously taken part in the proceedings of to-day. We offer in the name of the subscribers our earnest thanks, and we solicit that your Royal Highness will now be pleased to command the uncovering of the Memorial."

To this address the Prince returned the following answer:—

"Gentlemen,—I have listened with an interest, which I am sure will be shared by all present, to the details which you have given in connection with the Memorial to my lamented and revered father which we are assembled this day to inaugurate. As a son I cannot but be deeply affected by that part of your address in which you have referred to the beloved parent whose aid and counsel were never wanting when work was to be done, or when difficulties were to be overcome. I am confident that our proceedings in commemorating so proud a year in England's annals would have met with his approval, and I am sustained in the part which, in obedience to the Queen's commands, I have undertaken, by the conviction and grateful sense that the sympathy of the entire nation accompanies me. I have now the pleasure of directing that the Memorial—of which the artist may well be proud—be now uncovered."

At the close of this address the Royal standard was run up close by the statue, and the canvas covering was removed amid a Royal salute, fired from a battery in the Park. The Memorial is entirely constructed of red and grey granite, on a base of Portland stone. Its form is that of a temple, with projecting bases at four equal distances, of sufficient size to carry seated four bronze figures 8 feet high, representing the four quarters of the globe. The entire height of the Memorial, exclusive of the under work with arches, is 42 feet; the width across the angles of the granite is 18 feet. The entablature is broken to correspond with the projections of the base. Beneath, and in front of each statue, there are four bronze medallions inserted in the granite base, representing enlarged copies from the prize medals awarded to successful exhibitors of 1851. Behind each of these statues arise two pilasters and two pillars of the Corinthian order, from stylobates placed above the heads of the statues. The capitals and bases of the columns are of bronze, the shafts of polished red granite, the effect of which is very good as an architectural decoration. Polished red granite is also introduced with equal effect in the crescent side panels of the base, and upon the circular side panels of the body of the temple. Upon the four latter panels there are inscribed in gilded incised lettering the principal features and facts relating to the first International Exhibition, including a record of all those who were actually engaged in any responsible position connected with its management, commencing with the Royal President of the Commission, the late Prince, whose statue in bronze surmounts the Memorial. It is 10 ft. high, and in the mantle and with the insignia of the Master of the Order of the Bath—the Queen, as Sovereign, being head of every other Order. The frieze of the Temple bears upon it, in gilded lettering, two inscriptions—one from Isaiah, "Let all the nations be gathered together, and let the people be assembled;" the other from the Psalms, "I will remember the works of the Lord; surely I will remember Thy wonders of old." On the north tablet is the dedication of the Memorial itself, as follows:—

"Erected by public subscription. Originally intended only to commemorate the International Exhibition of 1851, now dedicated also to the Memory of the great Author of that undertaking, the good Prince, to whose far-seeing and comprehensive philanthropy its first conception was due; and to whose clear judgment and untiring exertions in directing its execution the world is indebted for its unprecedented success. ALBERT FRANCIS AUGUSTUS CHARLES EMANUEL, the PRINCE CONSORT. Born August 26, 1819. Died December 14, 1861."

"He was a man! take him for all in all,
We shall not look upon his like again."

The Royal party on leaving the balcony entered the gardens, where a procession was formed in the same order as before. Their Royal Highnesses made the tour of the gardens, stopping at several parts to inspect the gardens, the conservatory, and the Memorial, receiving as they passed along enthusiastic demonstrations of esteem and loyalty. Their Royal Highnesses left the gardens shortly after 5 o'clock, and the great body of the visitors, who are said to have numbered not less than 20,000, almost immediately dispersed.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT MERCHANT TAYLORS' HALL.—On Thursday the Merchant Taylors' Company gave a grand banquet in their hall, in honour of the Prince of Wales becoming an honorary member of their ancient corporation. The ceremony of his reception was accompanied with the usual forms, and in acknowledging the compliment the Prince spoke as follows:—

"Master, Wardens, and Gentlemen,—It is with a real pleasure that I have come here to take up my freedom of the Merchant Taylors' Company. The history you have given of the Princes of England who have become freemen of your ancient corporation has increased my ambition to follow their example. Were another motive wanting it would be supplied by the revered and dear memory of him whose words on a similar occasion you have heard in this room where I now address you. The wealth and hospitality of the Merchant Taylors proclaim the wisdom with which its affairs are administered, and its widely extended charities the spirit in which its wealth is used. The history of its educational establishments tells its own tale of the success which has attended the liberal principles and sound basis on which they are formed. Mr. Warden and gentlemen, I am proud to belong to a corporation which thus nobly works for the benefit of the human race, and I esteem it an honour to have my name enrolled amongst the freemen of the Merchant Taylors' Company."

The freedom of the company was very beautifully illuminated on vellum, and presented to the Prince in an ebony casket, richly covered with gold chasing, in which was introduced the arms of the Prince and the Company. At the banquet which followed, the Prince again briefly acknowledged the welcome he had received, and the Duke of Cambridge, in returning thanks for the Army and Volunteers, said that the Company ought highly to appreciate the compliment paid to them by the Prince, as it showed on his part that it was his anxious hope and desire that the old institutions of this country should be maintained in all their efficiency. The Earl of Derby, in returning thanks for the honorary members, spoke as follows:—

"It is quite clear that on this occasion it would be highly improper in me to touch on a single question bearing in the slightest degree on the political or party divisions of the day. That is forbidden by the mixed character of the assembly I address—by the presence of many from whom I may differ in political opinions, but for whom I entertain sincere regard and friendship, and, above all, by the presence of the illustrious Prince who has this day honoured us with his company and membership—than whom I will say there is no one who takes a deeper interest in all the affairs of this country, and, although no one can attend more sedulously to them, yet, from his high and distinguished position, he stands above, and must at all times be kept invariably separate from all political connections and party considerations. But so much I think I may say on the present occasion without hurting the feelings of any one—that there are topics on which in the present day there is little or no difference of opinion, and in most of our great political topics the questions which separate us and create differences between us are differences rather of degree than of principle, and while we are all of us, some faster and some slower, some more cautiously and some more eagerly, anxious to increase, improve, and amend the institutions of our country, we are all of us disposed to rest our improvements and our adaptations to the spirit of the age on the old foundations and the time-honoured institutions of the country. There is no one, high as his station may be, distinguished as may be his position—I will not except even the illustrious Prince who has done us the honour of becoming this day an honorory member of this great company—who may not be proud of being associated with a company so distinguished as the present—distinguished not only by that splendid and magnificent hospitality which in itself is not mere show or empty profusion, but which serves the practical purpose of bringing together in social intercourse classes of the community who otherwise see little of each other; but, far more than that, a company which knows how to make so honourable and generous a use of its wealth—which knows how to subscribe so liberally to all the charities of the country; and, above all, has done so much by its example, attention and pecuniary means for supporting, maintaining, and upholding the great and fundamental cause of religious and moral education throughout the country."

Mr. Disraeli, in returning thanks for the House of Commons, said:—

"It is a source of pride and satisfaction to the people of this country to remember that the Prince of Wales, however exalted his position, is also a member of Parliament. He has taken his hereditary seat in the Senate of his country. There he has learnt the course and conduct of legislation, and there, if imperious duty prompted him, he might legitimately express his opinions by his voice. It is the boast of your company to-day, and it is one well founded and much to your honour, that his Royal Highness has to-day taken up the freedom of your company; but the country recollects that he has already in the House of Lords taken up the freedom of this country. It is in the recollection of these public circumstances that the people of England find a source of great satisfaction. They look on them as a guarantee for the future welfare of England. They look on them as the source of proud satisfaction to the illustrious Prince himself, and the best security for the happiness of the people."

THE GUARDS' BALL.—The preliminary arrangements are completed for the festivities which are to take place on the 26th inst. as a welcome to the Prince and Princess of Wales from the officers of the Guards, in the British division of the picture gallery of the International Exhibition. Three magnificent salons are to be constructed, comprising a reception-room, a ball-room 200 feet long, and a supper-room. The approach and staircases will be fitted with military decorations, in which the Household Brigade will form an imposing spectacle, and at the head of the principal staircase the regimental bands will be stationed and will perform until all the company is assembled. The reception-room will be sumptuously furnished with rich carpeting, pictures, statues and flowers of the rarest description, and be lighted with candelabra bearing wax lights. Messrs. Lucas have contracted to fit the ball-room with a floor specially prepared for dancing, and the walls will be draped or papered with a light tinted paper or textile material. But the greatest display is reserved for the supper-room, in which gold and silver plate and china, lent for the occasion by some of the most distinguished collectors who are among the personal friends of the officers of the household regiments, will surpass the richest decorations of any similar event of the season.

FIRE AT THE HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.—On Monday afternoon some alarm was caused by a portion of the House of Commons being discovered to be on fire. At appears that a flue from the kitchen passed over the corridor leading from the Speaker's House to the Library, and a brick in the flue having become displaced the heat acted on the woodwork of the corridor, till it burst into a blaze. The members who were engaged in committees, left the business on which they were engaged and rushed to the spot; and the policemen and firemen stationed about the building, with the fire apparatus at their command, soon extinguished the flames, and the flues were all examined and cleansed before the Speaker took the chair at 4 o'clock. It seems that the smell of fire had been noticed for some time; but no one could discover whence it proceeded till it made itself visible.

LOSS OF THE CANADA PACKET SHIP.—The new iron ship Canada was lost on her voyage from London to Montreal, having been "nipped" in one of the huge fields of ice which are found in the Atlantic in the early part of the year. The Canada left the Thames about the first week of last month, and on the night of the 26th ult. fell in with loose detached ice, which accumulated so fast, that early on the following morning the ship was surrounded. An effort was made to wear ship, when the tiller broke into several pieces, and it was discovered that the vessel was hard and fast in the ice, and striking heavily. Attempts were made to repair the rudder, when it was discovered that she was making water fast. Many of the bolts and rivets were gone, and beams and bulkheads were started by the ship being crushed in the ice. Cargo was thrown overboard, the pumps were set to work, and everything done with a view of keeping the vessel afloat, but the water rose so fast, that a passing ship being sighted, a signal was fired, and the ship Able Seaman, from London, bore down and took on board the crew of the Canada, which had 13 feet of water in her hold, and soon afterwards suddenly disappeared. The Canada was nearly 1000 tons burden, and was largely insured at Lloyd's. Another ship, called the Aronica, from Quebec for Liverpool, is reported to have been seen in a distressed condition in the ice, but her fate is not yet known.

Thames Angling Preservation Society.—The annual meeting of this society was held a few days since at the Freemasons' Tavern, Mr. Whitbread in the chair. The secretary read a report detailing the proceedings of the society for the past year. It stated that artificial breeds had been in numerous cases most successfully performed. 203 brace of trout in a spawning condition had been placed in the Thames, and great results were expected. Whether the salmon turned into the river during the present and preceding year would remain in the Thames was as yet matter of conjecture, but, no doubt, much would depend on the way in which the main drainage system was carried out. For experiment the society had hatched and reared 6000 Rhine salmon, 4000 of which had been placed in the river at Hampton, and also 22,000 young trout in a healthy condition. The treatment of the ombre chevalier ova received from the French establishment at Huningues, had been very successful. Of about 4000, good and bad, placed in the river at Hampton, the society had reared 3000 young fish, all healthy. The committee were also able to state that 2000 young grayling would shortly be placed in the river. The committee regretted to say that their old enemy, the otter, had again appeared in the Thames, and had hitherto escaped with impunity. The committee acknowledged the liberality of the Thames conservators, and also noticed with satisfaction the recent measures adopted by the legislature to protect the salmon fisheries of the country, so imperatively necessary to prevent the total destruction of that fish. The report then referred to the great benefits the society conferred on the public at large, rendering it worthy of a much more extended support than it had yet received. The income and expenditure was nearly balanced, there being a small excess in favour of the society. The report was unanimously adopted.

General Post Office.—A Parliamentary return has been published showing that the post offices and road letter-boxes have increased to 14,776, and day mails and free deliveries are continually extended, and new rural posts established. The mails are now conveyed over 160,000 miles a day in the United Kingdom. The number of letters delivered in 1862 was 605,471,000, being 12 millions more than in 1861. In 1862 the Post Office carried as many letters as would make, in England, 24 to each person; in Ireland, 9; in Scotland, 19. At Liverpool and Birmingham the proportion was as high as 30 letters to each person, at Bristol 35, at Manchester 38, at Dublin 39, at Edinburgh 41, and in London 49. The increase in printed circulars has been very great; in relation to the Lambeth election there were as many as 40,000 posted in a single day. Nearly half-a-million letters passed through the temporary post office in the International Exhibition. More than 450,000 valentines passed through the London office on the last anniversary. The number of newspapers delivered in 1862 was nearly 73,000,000—about half-a-million more than in the previous year. The number of book packets was rather more than 14,000,000—an increase of about 1,700,000*l.*; 7,587,045 inland money orders were issued in 1862, for 15,761,259*l.*—above 1,000,000*l.* more than in 1861. In England and Wales there was about one to every three persons, in Scotland one to every five, in Ireland one to every 11. A money order, if stamped with 1*d.* stamp, may be made not payable till 10 days after date, thus allowing time for acknowledgment or for stopping the payment. Small sums sent in postage stamps may be exchanged for money at all the larger offices on payment of a commission of 1*d.* on 40 stamps; and in London alone nearly 60,000*l.* was thus paid last year for stamps. In sending them by post they should be folded in rather thick paper, so that the contents may neither be seen nor felt through the cover. The regulation compelling payment of the registration charge on letters containing money or articles of value has answered well, and will soon be extended to the country. It has caused a great diminution in application for missing letters containing coin—a diminution by more than one-half; the regulation came into operation in London last August, and 58,000 letters were compulsorily registered in the remainder of the year. It is satisfactory to learn that, while in the last quarter of 1861 four London letter-carriers were convicted of stealing cash letters, in the corresponding quarter of 1862 not one was even charged with such an offence. During the last half of 1862, out of about 900,000 registered letters, the whole number lost was only 12, containing together 9*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.*

Nonconformist Emigration.—About 700 emigrants took their departure on Monday week from Blackwall for Albertland, the new colony, in New Zealand, founded mainly by dissenters. A party of 1000 colonists were sent out about twelve months ago, and the reports they sent home have encouraged the agents to send out 1000 more, of whom the present body is the main portion. They embarked on board two vessels at Blackwall in the presence of a large number of spectators.

New Convent and Girls' School. — Cardinal Wiseman opened a new convent and girls' school last week in Albert Place, Spitalfields, adjoining the Roman Catholic Church in that locality. There was a large attendance of Roman Catholic clergymen from different parts of London. After the religious ceremonial a déjeûner took place, at which the Hon. Charles Langdale presided. After the usual toasts Cardinal Wiseman addressed the meeting. He alluded to the rapid increase in the number of buildings devoted to worship and education. He acknowledged that much kindness and good feeling had been shown in many localities by liberal-minded Protestants towards Catholic clergymen engaged in the effort to provide education for the poor.

The Main Drainage Works.—At the meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works on Friday, Mr. Bazalgette, the chief engineer, presented his report, from which it appeared that the original estimate for the main drainage of the metropolis, which formed the basis of the Act for borrowing 3,000,000*l.*, in 1858, for the execution of such works, was framed upon the then value of materials and workmanship, which had since considerably increased, so much so, that in the estimates for the northern scheme the original sum was 271,290*l.*, whereas it was very probable that the cost would not be less than 300,000*l.* The estimate as to the north of Thames intercepting system and conveyance down to Barking Creek, instead of a total cost of 1,378,190*l.*, would reach 1,750,000*l.*, and the south side of the Thames 750,000*l.*, with extension of same through Woolwich to an outlet in Plumstead Marshes, 500,000*l.*, making a total of 3,000,000*l.* The report was received.

Murder and Attempted Suicide.—On Thursday Mary Anne Payne, aged 21, residing in Allsopp Place, Marylebone, was charged at the Marylebone Police Court with the murder of her child, Charles Albert Payne, aged two years and three months, and further on her own confession, with attempting to commit suicide, first by taking poison, and afterwards by throwing herself out of a second-floor window. The evidence left little doubt that the prisoner was under the influence of insanity at the time, and she was ultimately remanded for a few days.

The Public Health.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that in the week that ended Saturday, June 6, the deaths registered in London were 1214. The average number in the 10 years, 1853-62, corrected for increase of population, was 1132. The present return is therefore 82 above the average. During the week the births of 971 boys and 877 girls, in all 1848 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1853–62 the average number was 1850.

Provincial.

Bridport.—A shocking murder was committed in this town on Friday. A hemp sorter named Dommett, about 50 years of age, the father of six children, who had the character of a steady, honest, and industrious man, cut the throat of one of his children, a boy about seven years of age, with whom he had partaken of breakfast a minute before. It appears that an elder son had been out of work from ill health, and the loss of his earnings and the expenses of his illness had been preying on the mind of the father. The jury at the inquest returned a verdict of Wilful Murder.

Cambridge.—The Duke of Devonshire, to whom, as Chancellor of the University, the committee for the Cambridge Memorial to the Prince Consort referred the selection of the sculptor, has chosen Mr. Foley, R.A., to execute the marble statue which is to form the memorial.

Eton.—On Friday the Prince and Princess of Wales attended the festivities at Eton College, the "speech day," which is usually celebrated on the 4th of June, having been changed to the 5th, in consequence of the Cup being run for at Ascot on the 4th. A brilliant company was assembled on the occasion, and though the day was showery it had no effect on the enthusiasm of the Etonians, who cheered vehemently as the Prince and Princess arrived, and again when they took their departure. All the speeches were well delivered; the poetical address by the son of the Marquis of Bristol attracted particular attention. The regatta, the Rifle parade, and the fireworks in the evening, were all numerously attended. The fireworks were the only portion of the amusements that suffered from the weather.

Guildford.—The committee of the Surrey County Memorial Hospital have at length determined upon proceeding without delay with the building which is to be erected on a plot of two acres presented by the Earl of Onslow, on the slope of the Hogsback, close to this town. In answer to the advertisements for tenders, 33 large building firms competed, the highest offer being 15,254*l.*, and the lowest 10,629*l.* The committee have accepted the lowest tender but one—that of Mr William Barnes, of Nutfield, Redhill, for 11,303*l.* At present the committee have only money in hand and promises to the extent of about 7300*l.*, which includes 500*l.* offered by a gentleman on condition that two like sums should be contributed, which offer has not yet been responded to. Under these circumstances the committee reserve to themselves power to stop the further progress of the works after the building has been roofed in, should the funds at that time not be sufficient for their completion. It is now determined to make the hospital much more complete and perfect than was at first contemplated, and hence the original estimate, which was something under 8000*l.*, has been much exceeded. The plans were submitted to Miss Nightingale, at whose suggestion numerous practical improvements have been adopted. It is intended to use Parian cement for the internal walls of the wards, to have plate-glass windows, and to construct an additional floor in the roof, at the Earl of Onslow's suggestion, for which his lordship will pay. It is also intended to apply Fox & Barrett's principle, which will render the building fireproof, to have a hot-water supply over the whole of the hospital, a well with an engine and pump, tanks for rain-water and fittings of every description. Hopes were entertained that the Prince of Wales might have been induced to lay the foundation stone of the hospital, as being the first erected as a distinct memorial of the Prince Consort, but he was compelled by the many applications made to him from all parts of the country, to decline all those which are not locally connected with his property.

Manchester. — At the weekly meeting of the Executive Committee on Monday, the honorary secretary reported that the receipts during the week had been 2270*l.* 1[illegible]s. 3*d.*, leaving a balance in the bank of 362,465*l.* 12*s.* 10*d.* Mr. Commissioner Farnall reported that the decrease in the week ending the 30th May of persons in receipt of relief in 27 unions was 1858. The total decrease since the 6th of December was 102,386 persons, leaving 1[illegible]9,597 persons still chargeable. The secretary's monthly report for May stated that the total number of persons in receipt of relief on the books at the end of May as compared with the end of April showed a decrease of 72,000.

Norwich.—The 30 coach horses purchased some time since by Mr. W. F. Windham were sold a few days since by auction and realised 460*l.* Several of them were purchased by Mr. Windham in the winter for 30*l.* or 40*l.* each. The coach has been transferred to Mr. T. Raynham, a well-known local coachman, whose name has been substituted upon the vehicle for that of Mr. Windham. Mr. and Mrs. Windham are now living in London, and the lady's debts are said to be all paid.

Wilton.—An exceedingly beautiful monument in marble, the work of Mr. Phillip, of Roehampton place, Vauxhall Bridge Road, has just been placed in the parish church of Wilton, to the memory of the late Lord Herbert of Lea. The monument consists of a recumbent figure with clasped hands, resting on a tomb, with two angels at the head. The figure, an excellent likeness of his lordship when young, is admirably carved, and around the top of the tomb is a brass with the following inscription:—"Sidney, Lord Herbert, second son of George Augustus, eleventh Earl of Pembroke, born 16th September, 1810; died 2d August, 1861. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord; they rest from their labours. Founder of this church. In pace." The monument is erected on the right-hand side of the chancel, within the rails, opposite to the one by the same sculptor, erected at the latter end of last year to the memory of his lordship's mother, the late Countess of Pembroke.

Wotton-under-Edge.—The first stone of a monumental memorial of Tyndale, the martyr, and translator of the Bible, was laid a few days since near this town. The monument, which is to be erected by public subscription, will be on Nipley Knoll, and in the parish in which Tyndale was born. The knoll belongs to Lord Fitzhardinge and the freeholders of North Nibley, and the stone was laid by the Hon. Colonel Berkeley, M.P., as representative of his father. There was a very large assemblage of people. The spot selected is so lofty that the memorial will be seen from a great distance. It will consist of a tower 111 feet high, exclusive of the terminal, which is to be a reflector. The cardinals will be ornamented with sculpture, representing the chief events in Tyndale's life. Inside the entrance door will be a recess, in which a Bible will be chained, and there will be a book tray upon which it may be laid to be read. As yet only 800*l.* have been received towards the 1500*l.* required.

Ireland.

The Egmont Case.—The Lord Chancellor of Ireland gave judgment on Monday in this case, granting the prayer of Lord Egmont, and directing the question to be tried at common law at the next Cork assizes.

Murder of another Landlord in Tipperary.—On Thursday week Mr. Andrew Jackson, a magistrate, residing at Mount Pleasant, about four miles from Nenagh, after finishing his breakfast and ordering his car to be got ready to take him to Nenagh, lit his pipe and went out in his slippers, as he was accustomed, to take a walk in his shrubbery, which is close to the house. He also gave directions that his little son, four years old, should be got ready to accompany him on the car. Hours passed and he did not make his appearance; yet Mrs. Jackson was not alarmed, supposing that he had walked across the field to his brother's, or that he had gone into town with some friend who was passing. She sent to his brother's, and to her father's residence, but nothing was heard of her husband in either place. The idea of murder did not occur to her mind during the day, but during the night she sent the coachman, steward, and herd to search about the grounds, and about daybreak on Friday morning they found the body under a cluster of laurels in the shrubbery within a few yards of his house. The slippers were first discovered a few paces from the body, which was lying with the face downwards. The head was covered with blood, but as there were no marks of violence on the rest of the body, they feared he had burst a blood-vessel. A surgeon on being sent for found the skull broken in two places by a blunt instrument. The blow must have been struck with a bludgeon from behind, and the effect was instant death. The assassin seems to have been lurking behind a tree, and to have come stealthily behind Mr. Jackson as he sauntered quietly along the gravelled walk smoking his pipe without a thought of danger. His gold watch and money were gone, but it was supposed that this was done to divert attention from the real motive of the murderer, which was not robbery, but agrarian vengeance. The jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder against some person or persons unknown." The magistrates held a meeting at the Court House at Nenagh on the same day, and subscribed 500*l.* as a reward for the discovery of the murderer, and on Wednesday the Lord-Lieutenant offered 100*l.* on behalf of the Government. Four of Mr. Jackson's tenants who had paid him no rent for several years, and whom he had served with ejectment processes, were afterwards taken into custody. Two of them are brothers, named Peters, the names of the others are Cummins and Kennedy. The steward of the murdered gentleman, a man named Madden, and his son, have also been arrested since the inquest. The Nenagh Guardian says that Mr. Jackson was "generally esteemed and beloved by men of all classes and creeds." His wife was sister to Miss Smythwick, who was drowned a few years since at the Puffin Hole, Kilkee, in company with Colonel Pepper.

Railways.

The Charing Cross Railway.—The works of this important metropolitan line have lately been pushed forward with such vigour, that it is expected to be ready for opening in July. At Charing Cross the station is rapidly advancing, the walls being up nearly to the height required for carrying the iron and glass roof. The front facing the Strand, the lower part of which is to serve as the booking and general offices, and the upper part as a hotel, has advanced to the basement story, and the east wing, facing Villiers Street, is progressing with equal rapidity. The bridge may be considered as complete so far as its actual supports and heavy framework is concerned. Hungerford Bridge has disappeared with the exception of the lower part of the two towers, which rest upon the brick piers. The station in the West Strand will be 170 feet wide, and about 450 feet long. It will be on brick-built arches, the whole of which have been tarred and concreted. The arches, which are of enormous solidity, have a span of 30 feet, and cover a large area available for cellarage. The station front will be 100 feet back from the Strand, and its frontage will be 230 feet in length, extending from Villiers Street on the east to Brewer's lane on the west. On the Surrey side and the other bridges on this line, nearly the whole of the work is completed, and, with the exception of a bridge near the Borough Market, and another across the road leading to the present London Bridge Station, no heavy work now remains to be done. This latter bridge will be a skew bridge, and, being of very great span, requires to be of enormous depth in order to obtain the requisite strength. These will be the most unsightly structures ever erected in the metropolis, and will do more to disfigure London than anything which has been devised since the introduction of railways. When completed however, the new line from Charing Cross, connected as it will be with the South-Western, and the whole system of the South-Eastern, London, Chatham, and Dover and Brighton Railways, will be of immense value in relieving the crowded streets of the metropolis, and in providing for the wants of an enormous local as well as through traffic.

Law.

Court of Queen's Bench: Cardigan v. Calthorpe.—In this case the Earl of Cardigan had obtained a rule calling on the Hon Colonel Calthorpe, nephew of Lord Raglan, to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him for a libel, in asserting in his work on the Crimean war—entitled "Letters from Head Quarters,"—that Lord Cardigan instead of leading the light cavalry charge at Balaklava, actually fled from the field from cowardice before the whole of his men had reached the Russian batteries. Lord Cardigan submitted numerous affidavits from officers and men who were present on the occasion to show the utter groundlessness of this imputation; and Colonel Calthorpe to a certain extent admitted that his statements were unfounded, and instructed his counsel to say that he had instructed his publishers to destroy the unsold copies of his book. The Lord Chief Justice on Wednesday, in giving judgment, said there could be no doubt that the passages complained of did contain a gross libel, for which, in ordinary circumstances, the Court would have had no hesitation in granting a rule for criminal information, but as all the unsold copies had been destroyed, and Lord Cardigan, instead of coming to that Court in the first instance for redress, had taken the matter into his own hands by applying for a Court Martial, bringing the matter before the House of Lords, and other measures, the Court felt bound to refuse the application, but without costs.

Central Criminal Court: Robbery by a Dissenting Minister.—Thomas Wycherley, a Baptist minister, was indicted for stealing 50*l.* in Bank of England notes, and some articles of clothing and jewellery, the property of a lady named Sophia Levy. The principal witness against him was the servant, girl who is now undergoing punishment for her share in the offence, and her statements had varied so much at different times that little dependence could be placed on her word. Several other witnesses, however, were examined, who confirmed her evidence in all the material points. The jury afte quarter of an hour's deliberation returned a verdict of Guilty, and the prisoner was sentenced to six years' penal servitude, the judge observing that the crime he had committed was so much the worse from the fact that he was a man who, under the garb of sanctity, had wormed himself into Mrs. Levy's household, and then basely robbed her with the help of the servant Alleged Murder of a Husband.—Ann Doggett, a middle-aged woman, dressed in deep mourning, surrendered to take her trial for the manslaughter of William Henry Doggett. The case was of a very peculiar character. The offence imputed to the prisoner was, that she had by gross neglect and ill treatment caused the death of her husband. It appeared that deceased was suffering from dropsy, and that his illness was of such a character that it was impossible he could have recovered; but it was alleged that the prisoner had accelerated his death by neglecting to give him his medicine, and by treating him in other respects in a most gross manner. It was however admitted to be doubtful whether the charge was one legally sustainable, and it appeared that the greater portion of the acts imputed to the prisoner were committed while she was in a hopeless state of intoxication, and that when she was sober, she behaved kindly to deceased. Several witnesses having been examined, Baron Bramwell said that it might possibly be that if deceased had been more carefully attended to he would have lasted longer, but it appeared to him that there was no evidence to support the charge against the prisoner, and that she ought not to be convicted. If she had acted in the way that had been described, her own reflections and her conscience must be her punishment. The Jury then, under his lordship's direction, returned a verdict of Not Guilty. Burglary by Ticket of Leave Men.—Roderick O'Lochlen, 28, printer, and Arthur Hewitt, 30, smith, were indicted for feloniously breaking and entering the dwelling-house of Lord Chesham, and stealing therein jewellery and watches to the value of 110*l.* From the evidence it appeared that a police-constable was on duty at the lower end of North Audley Street, when he saw the two prisoners jump from a wall surrounding the premises of the prosecutor. They were immediately seized, and after some resistance secured. Upon each of them was found tremendously large life preservers, with which they attacked the constables, and when captured the whole of the stolen property was found in their possession. The Jury convicted both the prisoners. It was then proved that they were both ticket-of-leave men, and that the elder prisoner Hewitt had been a thief and depredator by profession since the year 1851, when he was sentenced to four years' penal servitude. From this he was released by ticket-of-leave, but was sentenced again to imprisonment in 1853. No sooner was he out of gaol than he again resumed his practice, and in 1859 he was sent into penal servitude once more. As this sentence, also, was for four years, and as he committed the crime for which he was now convicted on the 12th of last month, he must either have received a fresh ticket of leave, or have begun to prey again upon society without the loss of an hour after the expiration of his punishment. The other prisoner O'Lochlen, though only 28, had been twice before convicted, and had been once sent into penal servitude for four years, but had also been released on "leave." Baron Bramwell sentenced O'Lochlen to 15, and Hewitt to 10 years' Penal Servitude.

Obituary.

General Sir John Hanbury, K.C.B., K.C.H., Colonel of the 99th Regiment, died on the 7th inst., at 15, Charles Street, Berkeley Square, after a protracted illness, in his 81st year. He entered the army in 1799, and in his early career saw much active service. He served in the Egyptian campaign of 1801 as lieutenant in the 58th, including the actions of the 8th, 13th, and 21st of March, and received the gold medal from the Sultan. He was aide-de-camp to General Warde in the campaign of 1808-9, and was present at Sir John Moore's retreat, and at the Battle of Corunna. He served with the 1st Guards at Walcheren, in 1809, and subsequently in the Peninsular campaign, including the retreat from Burgos, Passage of the Bidassoa, and Adour, battles of Nivelle and Nive, investment of Bayonne, and repulse of the sortie. He received the war medal with four clasps for Egypt, Corunna, Nivelle, and Nive, and was created a Knight Commander of the Bath and of the Hanoverian Order. He was appointed colonel of the 99th Regiment in 1851, and attained the full rank of general in 1854. He was the second son of the late Mr. William Hanbury, of Kelmarsh, Northamptonshire, and married, in 1842, the eldest daughter of Sir Nelson Rycroft, Bart. His elder brother, William, was created a peer by the title of Lord Bateman in 1837, and the deceased was consequently uncle of the present lord.

The Rev. Dr. Russell, D.D., Canon of Canterbury, and Rector of St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, died at Canterbury on the 3d inst. He was formerly well known as head-master of the Charterhouse, and for 30 years has been rector of one of the most important of London parishes. Dr. Russell was educated at Charterhouse School, where he gained the gold medal of honour in 1801, and was thence elected student of Christ Church, Oxford, graduating in honours in 1806, and proceeding M.A. 1810. Having been ordained deacon in 1809 and priest in 1810, he returned to his school as head-master in 1811, and became a D.D. in 1819. For 21 years Dr. Russell guided the studies of a vast number of youths, many of whom became distinguished in after life—among them the Bishop of St. David's, Mr. Grote, Mr. Thackeray, Archdeacon Churton, Sir H. Havelock, Sir C. Trevelyan, Archdeacon Otter, Dr. Saunders, Dean of Peterborough, and Dr. Elder, both successively head-masters of Charterhouse, Mr. G. S. Venables, Q.C., the Hon. J. C. Talbot, Q.C., Mr. C. C. Clifford, M.P., the Dean of Christchurch, Sir H. Storks, Mr. Bernal Osborne, M.P., and Mr. Martin Tupper. In the most flourishing time of his mastership—1823-24—there were about 480 boys in the school; in 1829, there were but 299. Dr. Russell's character as a stern but able head-master of the old school is well drawn by his pupil, Mr. Thackeray, in "The Newcomes," whose Greyfriars is, of course, the Charterhouse. Dr. Russell was made a Canon of Canterbury by Archbishop Howley in 1827, and in 1832 he received from the Crown in succession to Dr. Blomfield, Bishop of London, the valuable rectory of St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, upon which he resigned his mastership. Though he was never a popular preacher, he was one of the best readers in the Church. As an administrator he was much valued in the church societies, and was, up to his death, the treasurer of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. Dr. Russell was author of a popular English grammar (1832), the "Rudiments of Latin" (1816), a Spital sermon (1833), "Concio ad Clerum" (1833), and he edited "Casaubon's Ephemerides," in 1850.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, June 8.

The supply of English Wheat for this morning's market was small, and disposed of at the prices of this day week. Foreign Wheat met an improved inquiry, but sales were slow, particularly for Baltic qualities, which must be written 1s. per qr. lower. For Barley there was a fair sale at last week's quotations. Beans and Peas are unaltered in value. Good fresh Oats are in demand at the prices lately current, but out-of-conditioned parcels are difficult of sale, and 6d. per qr. cheaper. For Flour there was a moderate inquiry at a reduction of 6d. per barrel.

FRIDAY, June 12.

Since the 5th inst. the weather has been very wet and boisterous. The rain is proving of the greatest benefit to all the crops. The Wheat trade has been dull; prices are generally written 1s. per quarter lower. The value of Barley, Beans, and Peas has remained unaltered, but Oats in the chief markets of the kingdom are quoted the turn lower. Since Friday last 38 vessels have been reported off the coast. A moderate business has been done in floating cargoes. Wheat prices were barely maintained; Maize declined about 1s. per quarter; other descriptions of spring corn remained steady, and Linseed fetched 6d. per qr. better prices. In Paris (June 11), the Wheat and Flour trades have improved in tone; extreme rates have been paid for Flour, and Wheat prices advanced about 9d. per qr.; the business transacted, however, has not been large. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 10,770 cwts. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 40s. per 280 lbs. The arrivals of all descriptions of grain this week are moderate, but large of barrel Flour. The attendance at this day's market was small. Wheat, both English and foreign, met a slow sale at Monday's prices. Spring corn of all kinds was steady at our late quotations. For Flour there was a moderate inquiry at reduced rates.

News of the Week.

In the House of Lords on Friday the Lord Chancellor introduced a Bill for the Revision of the Statute Law, the object of which was to secure its consolidation, arrangement, and abridgment. The Bill was read a first time. On Monday the Marquis of CLANRICARDE called attention to the proceedings of the American cruisers, contending that they were in many instances contrary to international law. Earl RUSSELL in reply said that representations had been made to the American Government respecting some of the recent seizures, and he believed there was every desire on the part of the Federal Government to prevent injustice from being done. Her Majesty's Government were of opinion that the blockade maintained by the Federal fleet was sufficiently efficient to entitle it to be respected, and that every allowance should be made for any hasty act on the part of the blockading force. The Prison Ministers' Bill passed through committee. In answer to a question by the Earl of SHAFTESBURY respecting the case of Sergeant-Major LILLEY, the Duke of CAMBRIDGE explained the circumstances under which he had ordered a court-martial to be held on Colonel CRAWLEY. On Tuesday the Vaccination (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed, and the Bleaching and Dyeing Works Amendment Bill passed through committee. On Thursday the Duke of RUTLAND asked the intentions of the Government in regard to the Exhibition Building, and condemned the idea of purchasing it at the exorbitant price of 80,000*l*. Earl GRANVILLE defended the course adopted by the Government. The Earl of DERBY, while approving of the purchase of the land, expressed his opinion that the Government ought not to take any steps in regard to the Building without more ample information than they at present possessed as to its capabilities for its projected purposes. The report of amendments in the Prison Ministers' Bill was agreed to. In reply to Lord LYTTELTON, Earl GRANVILLE stated that the Government were considering the best means of effecting an improvement in the law on vaccination.

In the Commons on Friday Colonel DUNNE called attention to the depressed condition of Ireland, and the amount of taxation imposed on that country, and moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the causes of such depression. The motion was opposed by the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER and Sir R. PEEL, and was ultimately withdrawn. The Drainage of Land (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed. On Monday Lord PALMERSTON moved a vote for the purchase of the Exhibition Building and lands at South Kensington, and explained at some length the objects for which the purchase was intended, and the various sums that would be required to alter and adapt the Building to those purposes. He concluded by moving a vote of 67,000*l*. towards the purchase of the land. Mr. GREGORY moved as an amendment, that the vote be rejected. On a division the vote was carried by 267 to 135. The vote for the purchase of the Building was postponed to Thursday the 25th. On the vote for the Department of Science and Art, Mr. A. SMITH moved to reduce it by 10,000*l*. The motion was negatived, upon a division, by 147 to 19. On the order for the third reading of the Volunteers Bill, Mr. HENNESSY moved the recommittal of the Bill with the view of omitting the 20th clause, authorising dismissal of a Volunteer by the commanding officer. On a division, the motion was negatived by 138 to 31. The Bill was then read a third time and passed. On Tuesday Mr. BERKELEY brought forward his annual motion for leave to bring in a Bill to cause the votes of parliamentary electors to be taken by way of ballot. Lord PALMERSTON opposed the motion, which was negatived on a division by 122 to 102. Mr. M'MAHON moved a resolution in favour of such alterations in the assize and circuit arrangements as would secure a more speedy trial of country causes. The motion was seconded by Mr. HADFIELD, and supported by Mr. BAINES, and while the latter was speaking the House was counted out. On Wednesday, on the motion of Mr. DILLWYN, the order for the second reading of his Endowed Schools Bill was discharged, and the Bill withdrawn. The Navy Prize Money Bill and the Civil Courts (Ireland) Bill were read a second time. Mr. LONGFIELD moved that the latter Bill be referred to a Select Committee. The motion was resisted by Sir R. PEEL, and negatived on a division by 40 to 36. The Election Petitions Bill was referred to a Select Committee. The Marriages Registration (Ireland) Bill passed through committee. The Offences (South Africa) Bill was read a third time and passed. On Thursday Mr. VILLIERS moved the second reading of the Public Works (Manufacturing Districts) Bill, the object of which was to afford employment for the distressed operatives in Lancashire and Cheshire. After a long discussion the Bill was read a second time. The House then went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates. On the vote of 236,000*l*. for public education in Ireland, Mr. O'REILLY objected to the district model schools, and with a view to their gradual abolition moved the reduction of the vote by the sum proposed for the school at Enniscorthy. On a division the motion was negatived by 122 to 38. Mr. HENNESSY moved that the CHAIRMAN report progress. On a division the motion was negatived by 115 to 35. The motion was again made with the same result, when the Government gave way, and progress was reported. The Charitable Uses Bill passed through committee. The Mutiny (East India) Act Repeal Bill was read a second time.

The Notes addressed to Russia by France, England, and Austria on the Polish question, were despatched to St. Petersburg on Thursday. It is said that they are nearly identical in terms, the only marked difference being that Austria does not suggest a suspension of arms in the form employed by the two Western Powers.

From the United States we learn that General LEE has evacuated Fredericksburg, and abandoned the line of the Rappahannock, and that General HOOKER has crossed the river, and occupied the evacuated city. The latest news from Vicksburg states that all the attempts of the Federals to take Vicksburg by assault had been unsuccessful up to the 2d inst. The Confederate General JOHNSTONE was reported to be at Jackson, with the intention of making an attack on General GRANT's rear. Port Hudson is besieged by the forces of General BANKS on land, and by the fleet of Admiral FARRAGUT by water. A great peace meeting has been held in New York, at which the war policy of the Administration was strongly denounced.

The Princesses Helena and Louisa, and Prince Leopold, with a guard of honour, received her Majesty at the Railway Station in Windsor, and the Queen, attended by the ladies and gentlemen in waiting, met her Majesty at the bottom of the staircase of the Castle, and conducted her Majesty to her apartments, which are those formerly occupied by the Duchess of Kent. It is understood that her Majesty will remain at the Castle for a fortnight.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.—On Friday morning the Prince of Wales honoured Mr. Heath with a sitting for his photograph at his rooms in Piccadilly. The Prince and Princess afterwards went to Twickenham to visit the Duke and Duchess d'Aumale, and partook of déjeûner with their Royal Highnesses. In the evening their Royal Highnesses dined with the Duke and Duchess of Northumberland at Northumberland House. On Saturday a deputation of ladies, consisting of the Countess of Powis, Lady Lucy Herbert, Lady Louisa Pennant, Lady Williams Wynn, Lady Williams, of Bodelwyddw, the Hon. Mrs. William Owen Stanley, Mrs. Wynne, and Mrs. William Gladstone, each representing one of the counties of North Wales, had an interview with the Princess at Marlborough House, and presented to her Royal Highness the jewels subscribed for by the ladies of North Wales. The Countess Vane, who was also deputed from one of the Welsh counties, was unavoidably prevented from attending. The present was composed of a leek formed of emeralds and diamonds, with earrings, and a brooch to correspond. On the leek was a motto in Welsh, signifying "To our own Princess." The Prince was present at the reception. The New Zealand Chiefs had an interview with his Royal Highness at Marlborough House. The Prince of Wales and Prince Alfred rode on horseback. In the afternoon the Prince and Princess honoured with their presence the military concert at the International Exhibition Building in aid of the Princess Mary's Fund for providing nurses for the Cambridge Asylum. In the evening the Prince had a dinner party at Marlborough House. On Tuesday morning the Prince and Princess left London about 10 o'clock for Oxford to attend the festivities of Commemoration week. Their Royal Highnesses travelled from Paddington by a special train on the Great Western Railway to Culham station. The details of their reception at Oxford will be found in our Provincial news. On Thursday afternoon their Royal Highnesses left Oxford for Windsor Castle on a visit to the Queen. The Prince and Princess were met at the Windsor station by Prince Alfred, who had been waiting their arrival. Their Royal Highnesses are expected to return to Frogmore in the course of next week.

VISIT OF THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES TO SCOTLAND.—The Aberdeen papers say that the Prince and Princess of Wales are expected at Abergeldie Castle about the end of July. Their Royal Highnesses will visit Halifax on their way, the Prince having signified his intention of being present at the opening of the new Town Hall.

PRINCE ALFRED joined her Majesty's screw corvette Racoon, 20 guns, Captain Count Gleichen, at Portsmouth on Friday as her junior lieutenant. His Royal Highness paid a visit to the Port-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief, the Admiral Superintendent of the dockyard, and the Royal Naval College. His Royal Highness afterwards returned to Windsor on short leave. In the course of a few days the Racoon will sail for a three months' cruise on the coast of Scotland, at the close of which Prince Alfred will commence his course of study at the Royal Palace of Holyrood.

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street.

PARLIAMENTARY MOVEMENTS.—The death of Captain Gordon has caused a vacancy in the representation of Berwick. Mr. Mitchell, of Stow, is a candidate for the vacant seat in the Liberal interest.

THE NEW CANON OF CANTERBURY.—The canonry in Canterbury Cathedral, vacant by the death of the Rev. Dr. Russell, has been conferred upon the Rev. George Drinkwater Bourne, M.A., of Oriel College, Oxford, rector of Weston-sub-Edge, Gloucestershire.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The election for the sixth circumscription of Paris has terminated as follows:—The number of voters upon the register was 40,916, of whom 29,162 recorded their votes. M. Gueroult, the Opposition candidate, editor of the Opinion Nationale, obtained 17,495 votes, and M. Fouché Lepelletier, the Government candidate, 11,016. M. Gueroult was therefore elected. The Opposition candidates have also been victorious in the second elections in the department of the Charente at Havre, and in the department of Seine-et-Oise; while the Government candidates have been returned at Bordeaux, in the department of the Nord, and in the Haut Rhin. At Lyons MM. Favre and Perras have been elected. At St. Quentin M. Malezieux, the Opposition candidate, has been elected by a large majority. At Bordeaux M. Curé has been elected by a majority of 40 votes. At Cambrai M. Boitelle has been elected by 15,429 votes against M. Steinewart, who obtained 14,874 votes. It is said that M. Ferdinand Barron will replace M. Haussmann as Prefect of the Seine, and that M. Rexuel will succeed M. Rouher, Minister of Agriculture, who will be appointed a Minister without portfolio. The resignation of M. Baroche is spoken of. The Minister of Marine has received the following despatch from Rear-Admiral Bosse:—

"Puebla surrendered unconditionally on the 17th of May. Our troops have captured 25 Generals, 900 officers, and about 16,000 men. General Bazaine is marching on Mexico."

The Moniteur of Monday published a despatch from General Forey, dated May 18, confirming the report of the departure of General Bazaine for the city of Mexico. It also published a letter addressed on the 12th inst. by the Emperor to General Forey, assuring the General that the capture of Puebla has given the greatest satisfaction. The Emperor says:—

"Tell the officers and troops how highly I appreciate the courage they have shown in this distant expedition, struggling against the climate and an enemy who is the more obstinate because he has been deceived with respect to my intentions. Our object is not to impose on the Mexicans a Government against their will, or to ensure the triumph of any party. I desire to see Mexico rise again with fresh life, and under a Government founded on the national will, show her respect to the law of nations, and by friendly relations acknowledge that she owes to France both peace and prosperity."

The Constitutionnel of Saturday publishes an article signed by M. Limayrac, stating that the capture of Puebla is the sure presage of a glorious end of the undertaking. The writer continues:—

"The nations know that our honour once satisfied and reparation obtained, our triumph changes into benefaction. We are not enemies, but liberators of the Mexican people, who were deceived by an iniquitous Government. They will learn that under Napoleon III. the French soldier is more than ever the soldier of civilisation and humanity."

The Nord says that a French vessel has been despatched to take possession of the State of Sonora. La France asserts that, upon learning the capitulation of Puebla, President Juarez decreed the transference of the seat of Government to San Luiz Potosi. This decision is presumed to indicate an intention of not defending the city of Mexico. The same paper states that orders have been forwarded to the ports of France to keep the men-of-war intended for Mexico in a state of armed preparation, and that the question of reinforcements will not be decided till further reports have been received from General Forey. In the meantime the organisation of the civil Government of Mexico will be proceeded with. It says that 120 officials of the Ministry of Finance, the Postal and Telegraphic services, the Custom House, &c., are to be sent out at once, and that when peace is restored a staff of engineers will be despatched to Mexico to study the question of a canal to the Pacific. It is understood that General Forey will be nominated a Marshal of France, and that General Bazaine will be appointed a Senator. The Emperor arrived in Paris, and presided at a Cabinet Council on Thursday. The King of Sweden has congratulated his Majesty on the victory of Puebla. The Prince of Orange has arrived at Fontainebleau, where his Royal Highness will pass a few days. The Notes of the three Powers upon the Polish question were despatched to St. Petersburg on Thursday morning. It is said that they are almost identical in terms, the only material difference being that Austria does not suggest a suspension of arms in the form adopted by France and England. The Patrie of Thursday evening publishes an article, signed by M. Delamarre, reviewing the atrocities committed by the Russians in Poland, and declaring that no hopes can be entertained of any benefit arising from diplomacy. The writer calls upon France, in conjunction with other friendly nations, to draw the sword and intervene actively for the re-establishment of an independent Poland, declaring that it would be a new crusade of civilisation against barbarism.

PORTUGAL.—The Chambers have closed without having completely discussed the budget.

SPAIN.—The Infanta Don Juan de Bourbon has addressed a letter to the Queen of Spain, tendering his submission. The Marquis Miraflores has declined to consider the subject until after the repeal of the law under which the Infanta was exiled.

DENMARK.—It is stated from Copenhagen that Count Sponneck, well known as a most efficient administrator and financier, and who formerly held the portfolio of Finance Minister, will accompany King George to Greece, and remain in that country five years.

FRANKFORT.—At the sitting of the Federal Diet on Thursday the special committees on the affairs of Holstein brought in their report, proposing that the Danish Government should be requested to withdraw its ordinance of the 30th March. The Danish representative at the Diet handed in a protest against the report of the committees. The proposal will be submitted to the vote of the Diet upon the 7th July.

PRUSSIA.—The recent speech of the Crown Prince at Dantzic has caused deep offence to the Court and Cabinet. The Ministry lost no time in making their complaints to the King, who is said to have written a letter to his son, stating that the least reparation he could make for his grave offence was to retract what he had said, adding that if he did not do so he would be deprived of his honours and appointments. The Prince, in concert, it is said, with the Princess Royal, wrote a firm answer to this demand, refusing to retract anything, offering to resign his command and dignities, and requesting leave to retire with his wife and family to some place where he might be free from the suspicion of interfering in any way in the affairs of state. The Queen of Prussia left Berlin on Monday evening for England. The King has refused to receive the deputation appointed by the Common Council of Breslau to present their address to his Majesty praying him to withdraw the late press ordinance, and to convoke the Diet. The King has also refused to receive the address, on the ground that it was illegally voted. The deputation has since been entertained at a banquet by the Berliners. Numerous other deputations have arrived with addresses from various provincial towns, protesting against the late proceedings of the Government. The Ministry use every effort to deter these deputations from coming to Berlin, where their presence causes great annoyance to the Ministers and the King.

AUSTRIA.—The Archduke Charles Louis, as representative of the Emperor his brother, opened the Reichsrath in state on Thursday in the Hall of Ceremony. The following is a summary of the Speech from the Throne:—

"The Emperor makes a satisfactory retrospect of the activity of the Reichsrath, and expresses a hope that Transylvania will also shortly take part in its deliberations. The Reichsrath closed its first Session under the blessings of peace, which the Government will endeavour to maintain undisturbed. Thanks to the liberal institutions of the Empire, its material and intellectual life is everywhere being rapidly developed, and its influence and position as a great Power are continually becoming more powerful. The financial condition of the Empire is becoming more and more satisfactory. The credit of the State and the public currency have most decidedly improved. It has been unnecessary to apply for any extraordinary credit during the current year. The Budget, which will be submitted to you, has been prepared with a view to the greatest possible economy. Bills relative to taxation will be submitted to you, the object of which is to re-establish the currency on a thoroughly sound basis. Bills will also be introduced upon the reform of the administration of justice. As regards the administration of the penal law more especially, these reforms will comprise oral proceedings, publicity, and trial by jury. The Bills for the reform of the civil law relate to bankruptcy, the private arrangement of debts, and the right of domicile."

The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha has left Vienna, where he was received with particular distinction by the Emperor. His Royal Highness's visit in the present state of Germany is considered extremely significant. The Duchess de Grammont, wife of the French ambassador at the Austrian Court, and daughter of Mr. W. A. Mackinnon, M.P., has embraced the Roman Catholic faith at Vienna.

RUSSIA.—The Journal de St. Pétersbourg publishes Prince Gortschakoff's despatch to Mr. Clay, expressing the Emperor's satisfaction at the reply of Mr. Seward to the proposal of France to join the diplomatic intervention in favour of Poland. It concludes by saying that "such facts draw closer the bonds of sympathy between Russia and America. The Emperor knows how to appreciate the firmness with which Mr. Seward maintains the principle of non-intervention." A reform of the tariff is imminent. A difference of 50 copecks per pood will be made in favour of importation by land. The existing difference of five copecks per pood upon tea, however, is to be maintained until 1866.

POLAND.—The insurgent chief Abicht and the Capuchin monk Konarski were hung on Friday, in front of the citadel of Warsaw. After the execution the Grand Duke Constantine received a warning from the National Government that it could no longer be responsible for his safety. The Archbishop and clergy of Warsaw also sent in a protest to the Government, and demanded that the body of Konarski should be handed over to them for interment. The protest and demand were immediately telegraphed to St. Petersburg, whence an order was received that the Archbishop should at once repair to the capital. Archbishop Felinski left Warsaw for St. Petersburg on the 14th. All telegraph lines leading from Warsaw have again been cut. The news of the capture of Puebla has created great sensation throughout Poland, and great rejoicing took place in the Polish camps. All the patriots now look eagerly for assistance from the Emperor Napoleon III. A report is current at Cracow that General Mouravieff, Governor of Lithuania, will replace the Grand Duke Constantine and General Berg. General Mouravieff has caused the Abbé Zumecki and the landowner Leskowicz to be shot, and the Polish chief Colysko to be hung. He has also issued an ordinance proclaiming that the penalty of the knout will be inflicted upon all ladies dressed in mourning. Several ladies are detained as hostages, and are threatened with death unless their husbands surrender themselves to the authorities. The Patrie says that these proceedings have excited a feeling of disgust among the Russian officers in Lithuania. Several Generals have tendered their resignations, and the Russian General Cheuchin has declared publicly at Wilna that it is impossible for a man of honour to serve under General Mouravieff. The insurgent leader Broniewski has met with considerable success at Nagoszew, in the palatinate of Plock. In Lithuania an engagement favourable to the insurgents has taken place at Olkieniki, near Kowno. On the 10th inst. Czachowski gained a brilliant victory over the Russians at Konskie, in the government of Sandomir. Two Russian companies were completely destroyed. On the same day the Poles defeated the Russians at Ignacew and Kalskie; and the insurgents, under Calicz Raczkowski, suffered a defeat north of Konin. On the 11th Czachowski's corps was beaten at Rataje, but his force was not dispersed as asserted in the Russian bulletins, and he is now awaiting reinforcements in the district of Sandomir. Cihowski and Bliziny have gained a complete victory over the Russians at Kielce, in Podlachia. Seven Russian officers were killed and buried by the insurgents. At Radzyn, on the 10th inst., the insurgent chief Krysinski dispersed a detachment of Russian infantry. A detachment of light Russian cavalry has been defeated, and 100 Cossacks lost their arms and horses at Mienoryszey. Three insurgent officers have been shot at Warsaw. Colonel Lapinski's expedition, which was stationed for a long time at Malmö, has unsuccessfully endeavoured to disembark, during a tempest, at Polangen, a village on the Baltic coast, in the government of Wilna. The expedition made the passage on board a Danish ship. Twenty-four Frenchmen were drowned in the attempt to disembark. The expedition returned to Gothland on the 14th inst.

ITALY.—In the Chamber of Deputies on Saturday the Minister for Foreign Affairs replied to questions put to him by Signor Mecchi respecting the international relations between Italy and Rome, and the intentions of the Government relative to the Polish question. The Minister stated that Italian policy in the Roman question had not varied with respect to the accord between Italy and France, and the Government was always disposed to treat on the basis of the principle of non-intervention. With regard to Poland he said that Italy could not follow a passive policy in the question, and was too strong for her influence not to be calculated in an European congress. In conclusion, he refuted certain revolutionary theories, and said that Italy ought not to be in permanent revolution in the midst of regular governments. In the sitting of Monday Signor Buoncompagni made a remarkable speech on the Roman question. He maintained that it was necessary to continue the alliance with France, and resume negotiations on the basis of the principle of non-intervention. He admitted that Italy ought to recognise the territorial rights of the Pope as they at present exist. At the same time the rights of the Romans with respect to their own Government must be preserved. In the sitting of Tuesday Signor Buoncompagni, having concluded his speech on the Roman question and the alliance with France, moved the order of the day, approving the policy hitherto pursued by the Minister of the Interior and the Minister of Foreign Affairs. Signor La Farina then spoke on the position of the Powers with regard to the Polish question, and expressed his belief that the only Powers who felt a sympathetic interest in the reconstitution of the kingdom of Poland were France and Italy. He also believed that the French empire was not adverse to Italian unity. The efforts of the Muratist party at Naples and of the partisans favouring the autonomy of Tuscany in 1859 were simply ridiculous, and would clearly never meet with the support of the Emperor of the French. In the sitting of Wednesday, Signor Rattazzi, as leader of the Opposition, made a speech accusing the Ministry in particular of having abandoned the negotiations on the Roman question, and of having allowed Austria to take, in the common action of the Western Powers, the part that properly belonged to Italy. Signor Minghetti in reply said that the Italian Ministry had never lost sight of the Roman question, and was still ready to treat. In the sitting of Thursday Signor Minghetti again addressed the Chamber, and defended the policy of the Ministry, concluding by urging the Chamber to pass a vote of entire confidence in the Ministry. Signor Rattazzi, in reply, made a personal attack on several Ministers who, during their political career, had served other Princes in 1848. Signor Minghetti retorted that the Ministers alluded to did not abandon their Sovereigns until those Sovereigns abandoned their country. Much applause followed this remark. The general discussion was then closed. The Perseveranza says that the legal advisers of the ambassadors of Austria and France at Turin, who have been directed to inquire into the Fausti-Venanzi trial, have disapproved of the conduct of the Roman Consulta in this affair. Cardinal Antonelli is reported to have given in his resignation. On the arrival of the news of the capture of Puebla the Pope ordered a salute of 21 guns to be fired from the Castle of San Angelo.

GREECE.—The Greek Government has ordered three days of public festivity in commemoration of the acceptance of the Crown by Prince William of Denmark. In Elis the portrait of the young King had been torn down by the mob. The National Guard were obliged to interfere.

TURKEY.—The Oesterreichische Zeitung of Friday publishes intelligence from Constantinople, stating that the reply of the French Government to the recent note of the Porte denies that the Suez Canal works are detrimental to the interests of Turkey.

EGYPT.—Prince Napoleon has returned to Cairo from Upper Egypt in good health. His Imperial Highness held a review of the Egyptian troops, at which the foreign Consuls were present. After the review the Prince set out on his return to Alexandria.

UNITED STATES.—Advices from Vicksburg to the 2d inst. state that General Grant has planted heavy siege guns close up to the Confederate works, and has erected earthworks for the protection of the troops. The bombardment of Vicksburg by the fleet appears to have had little effect, and Admiral Porter reports that the works are stronger than they dreamt of. Scouts report that General Johnstone, with 15,000 to 30,000 men, is at Jackson with the purpose of advancing between the Yazoo and Big Black Rivers, with the intention of retaking Haines Bluff and cutting off General Grant's retreat by breaking up his communication by the Yazoo River. One Federal division has gone up the Yazoo River to meet General Johnstone. A Confederate officer on the Rappahannock stated to the bearer of a flag of truce that General Grant, after being repulsed at every point, had fallen back upon the line of the Big Black River, and was fortifying his position to prevent Johnstone from crossing. The Northern journals discredit this statement. The New York World thinks the siege of Vicksburg may last during the greater part of the summer; other journals urge the Administration to reinforce General Grant. Admiral Porter has repeated the announcement of the capture of Haines Bluff by his gunboats. In an official despatch to the Navy Department, dated the 25th ult., he states that three steamers and a partially built ram, together with the navy yard and the different machine shops at Yazoo city, were destroyed. He calculates the loss to the Confederates at 2,000,000 dollars. On the 26th ult. the gunboat Cincinnati, which attempted to pass Vicksburg, was sunk by the fire of the Confederate batteries. More than 20 of the crew of the Cincinnati were either killed or wounded by the Confederate shot, or drowned when the vessel sank. Gen. Banks's forces, with the forces from Bâton Rouge, have completely invested Port Hudson, and are besieging that stronghold in the rear, while Admiral Farragut's fleet keep up a continual bombardment from the river. The assault commenced on the 27th, and was continued up to the date of the sailing of the steamer. General Banks directed the movements in person. General Weitzel, who commanded the Federal extreme right, had captured a battery and turned the guns upon the Confederates. General Sherman had been repulsed with heavy loss in an attack upon the Confederate right. The 2d Louisiana Native Guard (coloured) lost 600 out of 900 men. The total Federal loss is admitted to be 3000. General Sherman and many other officers of high rank were severely wounded. General Lee has evacuated Fredericksburg, and abandoned the line of the Rappahannock. It is not known whither he has gone. General Hooker has crossed the river and occupied Fredericksburg. In Tennessee the Confederates have thrown nearly all their forces forward from Tullahoma to Shelbyville, and are reconnoitring in front of General Rosencrans at Murfreesborough, where heavy skirmishing has occurred. The Confederate cavalry has also attacked Franklin. Admiral Foote has relieved Admiral Dupont in the command of the South Atlantic squadron. Commodore Lardner is to supersede Admiral Wilkes in the West Indies. It is asserted that Admiral Wilkes has been superseded in consequence of representations made at Washington by Lord Lyons. The Federal Government desires to maintain at this time the most amicable relations with that of Great Britain. An influential committee of Abolitionists has visited President Lincoln, urging him to give General Fremont the command of the coloured troops. The New York Tribune asserts that President Lincoln said he would accept and protect all coloured troops offered, that he looked to them for essential service in ending the war, and that he would gladly offer a command to Fremont. A great peace meeting, convened under the auspices of the Hon. Fernando Wood and the Mozart Hall section of the Democratic party, was held at the Cooper Institute, on the evening of the 3d inst. A vast crowd of people, estimated at from 20,000 to 50,000, was present, and much enthusiasm was manifested. Speeches were made by Mr. Wood, Judge M'Cann, A. S. Sullivan, Marshal Rynders, and others, all advocating immediate peace on any terms, and some of them the recognition of Southern independence. The resolutions adopted denied the right of the Government under the Constitution to coerce the seceded States; asserted that the war was fast consuming all the resources of the country; that by its continuance the South and the North must alike crumble into ruin, and recommended in the name of the people the suspension of hostilities and a resort to Conventions both at the North and South, to determine upon what conditions the contending factions might be reconciled. Mr. Fernando Wood subsequently had a long interview with the President and Mr. Stanton, at Washington, in which he urged that the Government ought to propose an immediate cessation of hostilities. When asked by the President what assurances he had from the South that propositions looking to peace would be favourably received, Mr. Wood replied that the masses of the people, South as well as North, were tired of the war, and would welcome the olive branch if their leaders would let them. Large Valiandigham meetings have been held in Buffalo, Newark, Philadelphia, and other places, at which the conduct of the Government was generally condemned. General Burnside had forbidden the publication of the Chicago Times, and had ordered the military to disregard the writ issued by the Law Courts for the protection of the paper. Great excitement prevailed at Chicago, public meetings were held, and a collision between the military and the people was expected. In consequence of the general indignation throughout the Northern States, the President felt it necessary to disapprove the order, and General Burnside has accordingly revoked it. General Hunter has informed President Davis that unless the order for the execution of white officers commanding negroes be revoked, he will execute every rebel officer and slaveholder in his possession. The officers of Colonel Streight's command, captured at Rome, Alabama, are held by the Confederate authorities, at the demand of the Governor of Alabama, upon the plea that there were negro soldiers in the ranks. The steamer Dolphin has been condemned at Key West, rifles and sabres having been found among her cargo. The Spanish steamer Union and the British steamers Hero and Eagle have been captured. The Sea Queen, which was the subject of Parliamentary discussion about two months back, on account of the course pursued by the Government with regard to her carrying a mail, arrived safely at the Mexican port of Matamoras on the 19th of May.

THE BRAZILS.—The Chamber of Deputies at Rio Janeiro was dissolved on the 12th May. The Minister of War, General Polidore Gordao, has been replaced by Senhor Antonio Manuel de Mello. The insurgents have invaded Cordoba, which has been placed in a state of siege. Late advices, however, are more favourable.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.—The Statute Law.—The LORD CHANCELLOR, in bringing in his Bill for the revision of the Statute Law, said that it was simply a revival of the proposal of Lord Bacon, contained in his essay upon the amendment of the laws of England, but which, from the inertia attending all attempts to improve the legislation of the country for a period of 250 years, had not had any practical effect. As the law stood, the mere opinion of a judge had the force of legislative enactment, and the judges, instead of sitting to expound the law, were in fact the law-givers. He was anxious, therefore, that measures should be adopted for weeding the statute book, expunging such decisions as were palpably erroneous, and reconciling those which were conflicting, so that in future there should be one sound and certain guide. By the Bill he now laid upon the table he proposed to secure the consolidation, arrangement, and abridgment of the statute law; and if he were successful in inducing their lordships to read it a second time, he should next move the appointment of a Committee of Inquiry. In conclusion he pointed out the necessity of instituting an annual revision of the Reports, which might be accomplished by a "Department of Justice," in order to prevent the law from again falling into its present contradictory and chaotic state.—Lord BROUGHAM expressed a general approval of the measure, which he thought would be of great utility. He wished the Lord Chancellor success in the enterprise he had undertaken.—Lord CRANWORTH doubted whether the first part of the scheme propounded by the Lord Chancellor was possible, but cordially supported the second part, for the consolidation of the Statute Law.—Lord KINGSDOWN objected to the proposal of Commissioners to revise the Reports, as he thought that would be to substitute the Commissioners for their Lordships or some other Court. The Bill was then read a first time.—The Redemption of Rents (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee, and the London Coal and Wine Duties Continuance Bill was read a second time.

MONDAY.—The American Blockade.—The Marquis of CLANRICARDE, in moving for copies of reports received from the Admiral on the North American and West Indian station, concerning the protection from seizure or visitation afforded to British merchantmen, asked what had been the result of the remonstrances made to the United States Government by her Majesty's Minister at Washington against the seizure of certain vessels. He referred to the recent condemnation of the Adela as contrary to all principles of international law, and considered that it was the duty of the Government to demand her restoration. He insisted that this country ought to afford adequate protection to her commercial marine, and denounced the seizure of vessels bound to Matamoras and Nassau as a means of monopolising the trade to Matamoras for the benefit of the New York shippers. He protested against the blockade of 2500 miles of coast, and showed, from the practice of the United States themselves in regard to the Spanish blockade of the South American coast, only a few hundred miles in extent, that they deemed such a blockade absurd and unjust. The blockade was ineffective and ought not to be recognised by her Majesty's Government.—Earl RUSSELL did not presume to pronounce an opinion on the condemnation of the Adela, but suggested reasons which might have justified her seizure, and asserted that if a vessel laden with munitions of war had papers on board showing that such munitions of war were intended for a hostile port, that the vessel might be legally captured. He pointed out the inconsistency of at one moment showing that the blockade was easily broken, and at another blaming American cruisers for attempting to seize vessels suspected of such a purpose. In regard to the blockading a line of coast, he showed that this country had formerly proclaimed a blockade of 2000 miles of American coast and thought it would hardly be becoming or wise for England to protest against a course she had herself formerly adopted, and which in the case of a war with the United States she would probably adopt again. In conclusion, he expressed his intention, as Foreign Minister, of being guided, not by a wish to avenge fancied affronts, but to uphold the honour of the country by adhering to justice.—The Duke of SOMERSET did not think it wise to produce all the reports that had been received. He read a letter to show the great cordiality which existed between the officers of the United States' navy and that of Great Britain on the West Indian station; and the invariable courtesy which Commodore Wilkes had exercised towards British officers. The motion was then withdrawn. The House then went into Committee on the Prison Ministers' Bill. On clause 3, Lord LYVEDEN moved an amendment, making the appointment of additional ministers in prisons obligatory instead of permissive. After an animated debate the amendment was negatived without a division. The Bill then passed through Committee. [Case of Sergeant-Major Lilley.—The Earl of SHAFTESBURY asked the Secretary of State for War whether it was the intention of the Government to institute any further inquiry into the case of Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley and Sergeant-Major Lilley.—The Duke of CAMBRIDGE said that the conduct and discipline of the Indian army rested with the Commander-in-Chief in India, and that he himself only stood in the position of referee, or a last appeal. He had however felt it his duty to take notice of the proceedings in Sergeant-Major Lilley's case when officially brought to his knowledge, but he was not then in possession of sufficient information to justify him in doing more than expressing a very strong opinion on the case. He did not then know of the illegal imprisonment of Sergeant-Major Lilley and other circumstances, which had since led him to order a court-martial. He had acted not from a desire to screen any one, but to do justice to all, especially to those implicated. He spurned the idea of any pressure having been put upon himself in reference to this matter.—Earl DE GREY and RIPON said as it had been decided to bring Colonel Crawley to a court-martial it would not be becoming to discuss the question at the present moment.—The Earl of SHAFTESBURY expressed a hope that the court-martial would be held not in India but in England.—The Earl of MALMESBURY vindicated Sir Hugh Rose on account of the remarks he had made on Sergeant-Major Lilley's death being caused by intemperance.

TUESDAY.—The Vaccination (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed. The Bleaching and Dyeing Works Amendment Bill passed through committee.

THURSDAY.—The Indian Navy.—The Duke of SOMERSET, in answer to the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, said that a small local navy would be maintained in India for the conveyance of troops and stores from one port to another, but that the Admiralty would be responsible for the general protection of that portion of her Majesty's dominions, the Governor-General having a limited power over the naval force.—The Duke of RUTLAND called attention to the proposed purchase of the Exhibition building at South Kensington, and expressed his disapprobation of the scheme. He would prefer to see the present building razed to the ground, and another constructed in its stead with some unity of design.—Earl GRANVILLE said that so far as the purchase of the land was concerned that question had been settled by a vote of the House of Commons. He was of opinion that the building was capable of adaptation to the reception of certain national collections, and that the proposed purchase was judicious and economical.—The Earl of DERBY, as one of the commissioners of the Exhibition of 1851, said he had given his assent to the sale of the land for 120,000*l.*, but he thought the discussion of the purchase of the building was premature, before the question of the purchase of the land was finally settled. He wished to know why the Government had only asked for a vote of 67,000*l.* for the purchase of the land—thus incurring the danger of having the remainder of the 120,000*l.* refused by the House of Commons in another year.—Earl GRANVILLE replied that it would be unprecedented for the House of Commons to refuse the balance of a vote a portion of which had already been granted.—Lord REDESDALE and the Earl of HARDWICKE recommended the Government to have nothing to do with the building.—The Duke of ARGYLL expressed his belief that parts of the building were fit for permanent use. The Redemption of Rents (Ireland) Bill, and the Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act Continuance Bill were read a third time and passed. The Local Government Supplemental Bill was read a second time.—In reply to Lord LYTTELTON Earl GRANVILLE said the Government were considering the best means of amending the Vaccination Acts.

FRIDAY.—Poland.—Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE rose to call attention to the cruelties practised in Poland, and asked for information on the subject.—Earl RUSSELL in reply said that on Wednesday last despatches left London for St. Petersburg; and when replies had been received to these, her Majesty's Government would lay the whole of the papers before the House.—Lord BROUGHAM expressed his reprobation of the atrocities committed, but thought that they were only such as were incident to civil war.—Brazil.—The Earl of MALMESBURY moved an address to her Majesty for copies of any papers relating to the diplomatic rupture with Brazils.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.—Lord PALMERSTON stated, in reply to an inquiry of Lord R. CECIL, that there was no plan in existence for the conversion of the International Exhibition Building. All that was intended to be done was to complete the front as it now stood with stucco, and to alter the domes from glass into brick.—On the motion for going into Committee of Supply, Sir H. BRUCE moved that the restrictions placed by the Board of Works in Ireland and the Treasury, on the advance of money for the building of Labourers' Cottages in Ireland, are inexpedient and calculated to render the Act in a great degree inoperative.—After an explanation from Mr. F. PEEL and Sir W. SOMERVILLE, the motion was withdrawn.—Colonel DUNNE brought under notice the present depressed Condition of Ireland, together with the amount of taxation imposed on that country. The public burdens borne by Ireland amounted to nearly 11,000,000*l.* a year, a sum altogether disproportionate to the wealth of the two countries. Other causes of the distress which prevailed were the non-residence of the landed gentry; and the inadequate sum spent for local purposes as compared with England and Scotland. The entire subject was one which called for inquiry, and he therefore moved for a committee to inquire into the causes of the depression which now existed, and the effects of the taxation now borne by Ireland.—Colonel FRENCH seconded the motion.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER could not agree that the sums spent in Ireland for local purposes were inadequate; as compared with Scotland they were excessive. The special votes for Ireland amounted to 1,351,000*l.* annually, whereas for Scotland they only amounted to 300,000*l.* With respect to general taxation, Ireland did not pay an undue proportion of taxation. There was no tax paid in that country to which England and Scotland were not subject, whereas England and Scotland were burdened with taxes from which Ireland was exempt. No want of consideration for Ireland was manifested in the legislation of the united Parliament, and he was convinced that political equality could not be claimed or exercised if equality of taxation did not exist. He was willing to admit, however, that there should be greater liberality in helping public enterprises by loans of money in cases where the security was unexceptionable. Ireland had of late made great progress in manufactures and agriculture; and he believed she had before her a future of increasing prosperity. The appointment of a committee at that period of the session was inexpedient, and could only excite hopes that were sure to be disappointed.—Mr. LONGFIELD, Mr. GREGORY, Sir P. O'BRIEN, and Mr. COGAN supported the motion.—Sir R. PEEL gave statistical details as to the condition of Ireland, the state of agriculture, and the amount of pauperism, to show that there was no call for Parliamentary inquiry or exceptional legislation. As an evidence of the decrease of poverty in Ireland he stated that while population had diminished 12 per cent., crime, the result of poverty, had diminished at the rate of 400 per cent.—Mr. WHITESIDE expressed his opinion that neither the Chancellor of the Exchequer nor Sir Robert Peel had offered any suggestion or held out any hope that an inquiry would be instituted into the condition of Ireland or the grievances of her people.—Mr. MAGUIRE described the maintenance of the Established Church in Ireland as a standing insult to the country, and a gross violation of civil and religious liberty.—Mr. WHALLEY supported the motion.—Lord NAAS could not see that a committee appointed at this period of the session to inquire into so large a question could effect any practical result, though he admitted that considerable distress existed among the small farmers of Ireland.—After a few words from Mr PEEL DAWSON, the motion was withdrawn. Case of Sergeant Major Lilley.—Lord PALMERSTON appealed to Mr. Coningham to postpone the motion of which he had given notice in relation to the case of Sergeant-Major Lilley, as Colonel Crawley, whose conduct was inculpated, was to be brought to a court-martial.—Mr CONINGHAM said it was not Colonel Crawley's conduct only that was in question, but two General Officers in India, the Commander-in-Chief in India, the Commander-in-Chief of the British Army, and the officials at the Horse Guards, were deeply compromised in the question. He insisted that there ought to be a searching investigation of the case, in the interests of the public and of the discipline of the English army.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON justified his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief.—Colonel NORTH suggested the injustice to Colonel Crawley of any strictures upon his conduct after it had been referred to a Court-martial.—Lord PALMERSTON said that Mr Coningham had given an example of the grossest injustice in launching out into an abuse of the Commander-in-Chief, without the slightest ground.—Mr. E. BOUVERIE considered the course taken by Mr. Coningham unwise, imprudent, and unfair. The subject then dropped, and the House went into committee of supply pro formâ. The Drainage of Land (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

MONDAY.—Japan.—In answer to Mr. LIDDELL, Mr. LAYARD stated that her Majesty's Government had made demands upon Japan for reparation for injuries committed on British subjects in that country—that these demands consisted of an ample apology for the murderous attack on Mr. Richardson and other British subjects, and the payment of 100,000*l.* by way of penalty. They also required that the perpetrators of the attack should be tried and executed in the presence of one or more British officers, and that compensation should also be made for the murder of two marines connected with the British Legation at Jeddo.—The House having gone into Committee of Supply, Lord PALMERSTON moved the vote for the purchase of the land and buildings of the International Exhibition at South Kensington. He observed that the purchase, if carried out, would provide for the immediate and prospective wants of the nation upon terms infinitely cheaper than if land were to be acquired nearer to the centre of the metropolis. A patent office and museum, an addition to the British Museum, and a portrait gallery, were among the public buildings which were urgently required, and a site for these could not be obtained in the neighbourhood of existing public institutions under a sum which he believed the House of Commons would not be prepared to sanction. The arrangement recommended by the Government would give the largest possible amount of space at the smallest possible outlay. It was proposed that the Government should purchase 17 acres of land with the new buildings erected thereupon. For these the Commissioners of the Exhibition of 1851 would take 120,000*l.*, and the contractors were willing to accept 80,000*l.* Therefore for 200,000*l.* the public would be put in possession of 17 acres of land with the buildings thereupon. The sum of 154,000*l.* would be required to make the building substantial, and further sums incidental to its adaptation would be requisite, equivalent to 130,000*l.*, making the whole cost for adaptation 284,000*l.*, which, if added to 200,000*l.* for the cost of the site and the present fabric standing upon it, would raise the whole charge to 484,000*l.* He added that it was not proposed to remove the National Gallery from Trafalgar Square to South Kensington; nor was it in contemplation to remove the scientific societies from Burlington House. He concluded by moving the first vote of 67,000*l.* towards the purchase of the land.—Mr. GREGORY moved as an amendment that the vote be rejected. He ridiculed the idea that the Exhibition building of 1862 could be converted to any useful purpose under an expenditure which the House of Commons would not be justified in sanctioning. The building was a hideous erection of brick and mortar, which, he was justified in stating, on the authority of Mr. Mallet, could not be adapted in the manner proposed under an outlay of half a million. He implored the House of Commons not to sanction a scheme of loose and reprehensible expenditure founded on fallacious estimates, merely for the purpose of snatching at a cheap bargain. The whole scheme appeared to him to have been got up by the South Kensington Museum people for their own aggrandisement and self-glorification, and he cautioned the House that, if carried into effect, it would entail perpetual mortification, disappointment, and disgrace.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER declined to admit the fidelity of Mr. Mallet's estimate. He contended that, on the ground of public policy, and in the exercise of a sound economy, it was desirable to effect the purchase. The opinion of the most experienced persons on the subject of enlarging the British Museum was, that an area of several acres would be required for accommodating the natural history collection, and this, with the requisite buildings, would cost, according to calculations made with reference to other purchases of land in the metropolis, the sum of 450,000*l.* The advisers of the Crown had long and anxiously considered the best means of providing for the public wants, and the result of their deliberations was the recommendation of the present plan.—Sir J. PAKINGTON expressed his opinion that the Government would have failed in their duty if, looking to the congested state of the British Museum and other public institutions, they had not recommended the purchase of the land.—Lord ELCHO was apprehensive that the House had not sufficiently considered the subject in reference to the future, and moved that the Chairman report progress.—Lord PALMERSTON was willing to report progress, provided the House came to a decision on the vote for the purchase of the land without the buildings.—Mr. OSBORNE denied that there was any necessity whatever for moving the collections to South Kensington. Art and science were no doubt very desirable in the opinion of those who made their fortunes out of them, but in the present case they might well be apostrophi-ed in the language addressed to the Statue of liberty—"Oh Science and Art, what atrocities are perpetrated in your names!" On a division, the vote of 67,000*l.*, on account of purchasing the land, was carried by 266 to 135.—Lord PALMERSTON then said that he proposed to take the remaining votes for the purchase of the building, cost of adaptation, &c., on Thursday week. Several minor votes, chiefly for Education in Ireland, were subsequently agreed to, and the House resumed. On the report of the Committee of Supply, Sir S. NORTHCOTE called attention to the interpretation put by the Committee of Council for Education on article 51B of the Revised Code, which proposes to give certified teachers a first charge upon the capitation grant; but which, he observed, was not construed in accordance with the arrangement come to last year—the charge being a certainty, and not dependent upon accident.—Mr. LOWE defended the minute and argued that it was in perfect agreement with the meaning of the article.—Sir J. PAKINGTON and Mr. HENLEY thought that there had been a breach of faith.—Mr. A. SMITH moved to reduce the vote (82,821*l.*) for the Department of Science and Art at South Kensington by the sum of 10,000*l.* On a division the motion was affirmed by 147 to 19. The report was then agreed to. On the order for the third reading of the Volunteers Bill, Mr. HENNESSY moved its recommittal, in order that the 20th clause, conferring on the commanding officer of a regiment the power of absolutely dismissing at pleasure any member of the corps, might be struck out, and a court of inquiry be substituted.—Colonel FANE seconded the motion. After some discussion, the motion was negatived by 128 to 31, and the Bill was read a third time and passed. The Regimental Debts, &c., Bill was also read a third time and passed. The London, &c., Dioceses Bill was read a second time. The Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Bill passed through Committee.

TUESDAY.—At the morning sitting the House discussed in committee the 4th and 5th clauses of the Salmon Fisheries (Ireland) Bill, both of which were ultimately agreed to. On the resumption of business in the evening, Lord A. CHURCHILL gave notice that on the 7th July he intended to move for leave to bring in a Bill to amend the law for the recovery of Church Rates.—Mr. H. BERKELEY moved for leave to bring in a Bill to cause the votes of parliamentary electors to be taken by way of Ballot. He contended that, as the practice was uniformly resorted to in clubs, learned societies, and other similar bodies, it ought to be used in parliamentary elections also. In foreign countries the ballot was bearing excellent fruit. In America it was not, perhaps, the most perfect institution, but it was the best they had at present. In France the ballot box had defeated the Government by returning Opposition candidates in the teeth of Ministers, while in Australia it was regarded as one of the most valuable features in the constitution. He was persuaded, from these and other circumstances, that although his motion might not be acceded to, still that the foundation of the structure of the ballot had already been laid in the House.—Mr. AYRTON seconded the motion.—The LORD MAYOR protested against the fallacies of Mr. Berkeley, and declared that in the recent battle at Southampton, where freedom of election had been vindicated in his person, the humbler class of voters did not want the ballot.—Lord PALMERSTON opposed the motion mainly on the ground that secret voting was opposed to the spirit and essence of the British constitution, which was in favour of public opinion and public responsibility. As an illustration of the retrograde nature of the movement, he mentioned that the members of the Reform Club had, at the instance of Mr Bright, given up the ballot, and had vested the power of election in a select committee of their number.—Mr. COX expressed his regret that the House would not devote a single evening to the dispassionate discussion of so grave a question.

On a division the motion was negatived by 122 to 102.—Mr. M'MAHON moved a resolution to the effect that it was expedient to make such alterations in the Assize and Circuit Arrangements as would secure a more speedy trial in the country of local causes. He said that his object was to carry out the recommendations of the commissioners by giving country towns a more frequent opportunity of trying causes arising in their own neighbourhood. There were now but three assizes in the year, and the result was, a tendency to attract causes to London, to the great cost and inconvenience of suitors.—Mr. HADFIELD seconded the motion.—Mr. BAINES said that in the West Riding a very great grievance was felt in consequence of the long interval between the assizes. During his speech the House was counted out.

WEDNESDAY.—Mr DILLWYN moved that the order of the day for the second reading of the Endowed Schools Bill be discharged, in order that the Bill might be withdrawn. He said he had no alternative but to adopt this course, as he felt it would be impossible to pass the measure this session. He denied that in introducing the Bill he was actuated by hostility to the Church of England; on the contrary, it was a defensive measure on the part of the Dissenters against an attack by the Church.—Mr. SELWYN expressed his satisfaction at the withdrawal of the Bill, and his regret that so much of the time of the House had been taken up of late with such little profit or useful result.—Mr. LOWE rejoiced that the Bill was withdrawn, and hoped it would never be re-introduced. If the object which Mr. Dillwyn had in view was the promotion of tolerant feelings between Churchmen and Dissenters, the introduction of so mischievous a measure was not likely to achieve that end.—After a few words from Lord HENLEY, Mr. W. E. FORSTER, and Mr. HADFIELD, the motion was agreed to, and the Bill withdrawn.—Sir J. HAY moved the second reading of the Naval Prize Money, &c., Bill, the object of which is to enable captors to employ naval agents to act for them in obtaining the distribution of the prize money to which they may be entitled.—Lord C. PAGET admitted that the law in reference to prize money required amendment, but as the Government intended to introduce a comprehensive measure next session, he hoped that the measure would not be pressed.—Mr. HARDY did not believe that the passing of the Bill would be an obstruction to future legislation by the Government.—Mr. COLLIER and Mr. STANSFELD were not disposed to deny that reform was necessary, but could not see that it was necessary to proceed in the present session.—Mr. SELWYN and Sir J. ELPHINSTONE spoke in favour of the second reading.—Colonel DUNNE recommended the Government to bring in a similar Bill for the army, as the present tedious, anomalous, and unjust system of dealing with prize money was disgraceful.—Lord C. PAGET said that as the feeling of the House appeared to be in favour of the principle of the Bill, he would give way and content himself with proposing such amendments in Committee as he might consider necessary. The Bill was then read a second time.—On the motion for going into Committee on the Election Petitions Bill, Mr. AYRTON moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee. After some debate the motion was carried on a division by 92 to 91.—The Marriages Registration (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed through Committee. The Offences (South Africa) Bill was read a third time and passed. The Civil Bill Courts (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.—Mr. LONGFIELD then moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee. On a division the motion was negatived by 40 to 36.

THURSDAY.—The London City Traffic Regulation Bill was, after some discussion, read a second time.—In reply to Mr. Heygate, Mr. COWPER stated that a scheme had for some time been under the consideration of Government for erecting a new national gallery at the back of Burlington House, leaving the present building in the occupation of the Royal Academy; but, until a decision had been arrived at, the space would be used as a drill ground for volunteers.—Mr. VILLIERS, in moving that the Public Works Manufacturing Districts Bill be read a second time, said that the measure was the result of an inquiry instituted by the Government, with a view to ascertain whether employment could not be found for the operatives who had been so long suffering in Lancashire and Cheshire. Although it was gratifying that adequate means had been provided for the maintenance of such a large number of persons by the public benevolence, it was impossible to ignore the serious evils consequent upon their continuing for so long a time to derive their subsistence from charitable sources. Various remedial measures had been suggested—such as the dispersion of the people throughout the country, emigration to the colonies, and the finding of employment nearer home. It was the last of these that the Bill proposed to adopt, by means of advances from the loan commissioners to municipal and other local authorities, for the execution of works and improvements in their respective districts; and he believed that the Bill would, as nearly as possible, meet the requirements of the case. It was not intended, however, as a panacea for the evils which had arisen out of the failure in the supply of cotton. It did not strike at the root of the calamity which had befallen the country. It was essentially a precautionary measure designed in some degree to mitigate the sufferings of the people; and he believed that it might be turned to beneficial account if the local authorities availed themselves of its enactments.—Mr. FERRAND approved of the Bill, his only objection to it being that it did not go far enough.—Mr. HIBBERT and Mr NEWDEGATE also approved of the measure.—Mr. HENLEY objected to public bodies being empowered to raise money for the improvement of private estates.—Mr. COBDEN warned the House that in all probability the coming winter would press more severely upon the people than the last, as their own resources would be completely exhausted. He did not regard the present measure as a specific remedy for existing distress, but he hoped that it would materially assist to meet the evil. As to emigration, he thought that to send our cotton population to the colonies would be very cheap philanthropy; but a cotton spinner transferred to a country like Australia or Canada, where there were no mills—a man who could not mow or thresh—would soon sink down into helplessness.—Sir G. GREY said he very much agreed with Mr. COBDEN, and though the Government would not interpose the slightest obstacle to the reception of emigrants by the colonies, any attempt to force emigration would, in their opinion, be a great evil to the emigrants themselves.—After remarks by Mr. SCULLY, Mr. BAZLEY, and Sir F. CROSSLEY, the Bill was read a second time. The House went into a Committee of Supply upon the Civil Service Estimates, when Sir R. PEEL moved the Irish Education vote of 236,000*l.*—Mr. O'REILLY moved the reduction of the vote by the sum proposed for the model school at Enniscorthy. After a debate of considerable length, and an eloquent defence of the Irish model schools by the ATTORNEY-GENERAL for Ireland, the Committee divided, when the amendment was negatived by 122 to 38.—Mr. HENNESSY then moved that the CHAIRMAN report progress. On a division the motion was negatived by 122 to 38. After another division with the same result, the Government gave way, and the CHAIRMAN reported progress. The Charitable Uses Bill passed the Committee. The Mutiny (East India) Act Repeal Bill, Sir Robert Hitcham's Charity Bill and the Ruthin Charities Bill were read a second time.

FRIDAY.—The House went into Committee on the Alkali Works Regulation Bill sent down from the Lords, and agreed to the clauses up to 11. A division took place on clause 12, which was carried by 111 to 67. On clause 13, Mr. VIVIAN proposed an addition, to the effect that owners of mills should be liable in the first instance, preliminary to the punishment of culpable workpeople. On a division the motion was carried by 87 to 61. The clause was then added to the Bill, after which the CHAIRMAN was ordered to report progress.

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

BANQUET TO HER MAJESTY'S MINISTERS.—On Wednesday evening the Lord Mayor gave a banquet at the Mansion House to her Majesty's Ministers and a party of about 250 guests. In returning thanks for the toast of the evening, Lord Palmerston spoke as follows:

"In addressing as I do the representatives of this great commercial capital of the world, I may congratulate you on the healthful and prosperous condition of the commercial interests of the country. In human affairs there are difficulties which appear greater at a distance than when they are boldly faced, and when we approach nearer to meet them. Thus for many years it was supposed that if any event, political or physical, should deprive this country of that great staple of its industry—cotton—ruin, bankruptcy, and desolation would be the inevitable consequence. That difficulty has, however, come; that calamity has fallen upon us. We have survived it, and although I do not mean to deny that in parts of the country, and with regard to a large portion of the manufacturing and commercial industry, it has been accompanied with great and severe distress, yet, taking the nation at large, we are happy to find that our general industry and commerce have not suffered—that our commerce has sustained scarcely any diminution, and that, in spite of that calamity, the revenue of the country has been in a prosperous and healthy state, so much so as to enable the Government to propose important and great reductions in taxation. National prosperity and commercial prosperity depend generally on the continuance of peace, and although there may be questions pending which are of a grave character, yet I trust we may flatter ourselves that those questions are susceptible of friendly, satisfactory, and peaceable solution by means of negotiation instead of by an appeal to arms. This country may boast that its relations with all other nations of Europe, and I will say also of America, in spite of that little outpouring of sentiment which is not quite so friendly—I say we may boast that our relations with other Governments of the world are friendly. There are two Powers upon whose friendship and understanding, or upon whose differences and animosities, mainly depend the question of peace or of disturbance in Europe. I mean England and France, and I am happy to say that on all those great questions upon which the issues of peace or war depend—whether in the Far West or in the distant East—there exists between the Governments of England and France the most friendly and honourable concert. The interests of these two great countries must be identical, and the Governments of both are sufficiently enlightened to know that those interests lie in the same direction. If any pledge were required of the friendly disposition which animates the Emperor of the French, I would point to my honourable and distinguished friend on my left, Baron Gros, the French Ambassador. Baron Gros has had much intercourse in many parts of the world with British diplomatists; his intercourse has invariably been of the most friendly character, honourable to his country and courteous and friendly to his ally. I allude, my lords and gentlemen, to the presence of Baron Gros, as representing the Emperor of the French in London, as a pledge of the sincerity of the alliance between the two countries. I trust that there are no clouds in the horizon which may not vanish and melt into thin air, and that whatever questions may be still pending—and I do not disguise the fact that there are questions of grave importance pending—I trust, I say, that negotiations conducted on the principles of justice and of right may lead those questions to a happy solution, and that nothing may occur to retard that progress of civilisation and industry, of art and intelligence, in which the nations of Europe are, I trust, destined uninterruptedly to follow."

PURCHASE OF THE EXHIBITION BUILDING.—A public meeting was held on Wednesday in the Concert room of St. James's Hall, to protest against the proposed purchase of the International Exhibition building. Mr. Beresford Hope presided, and spoke at great length in opposition to the scheme. He contended that the building had been the by word and mockery of Europe, and he protested against 284,000*l.* being fiddled away on tinkering a gigantic abortion, which had by its unsightly appearance considerably depreciated the value of property in its neighbourhood. Mr. Ferguson then moved a resolution to the effect that the meeting had learned with regret and surprise the proposal to purchase the International Exhibition buildings about to be submitted to Parliament by the Government, and earnestly deprecated so imprudent and wasteful an expenditure of public money. Mr. Seddon, in seconding the motion, said that architects had suffered a great deal of abuse in connection with the Exhibition building. They had borne what had been said against them in silence, but he thought the time had come when they ought to speak out against the proposed purchase. Mr. Hanretty moved an amendment to the effect that it was expedient that the building should be obtained for the use of the people. Mr. Finlen seconded the amendment. On the vote being taken the resolution was carried by a large majority. Mr. Nicholay then moved that a petition be sent to Parliament, praying it not to sanction the proposed purchase of the building. Mr. Alfred Jenoure seconded the motion. Mr. Wall moved, as an amendment, that a petition be sent to Parliament in favour of the purchase, which was seconded by Mr. M'Sweeny. The amendment was negatived by a large majority, and the original motion was then carried. It appears from the correspondence laid before Parliament that in accepting the Government offer of 80,000*l.* for the removable portion of the Exhibition building, Messrs. Kelk & Lucas stated that they could have realised a larger sum from other offers, but identified as they had been with the Exhibition, they preferred taking a course more in harmony with their feelings than making it a mere money question. The Government, on the other hand, "believed that they were making, and indeed going beyond, a most liberal estimate of the value of the materials for removal." In regard to the further proposed purchase from the Commissioners of the Exhibition of 1851, those Commissioners calculate the value of the site of the building at 500*l.* a year per acre, which gives 8250*l.* a year for the whole 16½ acres, representing at even thirty years' purchase a value of 247,500*l.*; and the Commissioners propose to include in the sale the refreshment rooms between the building and the Horticultural Society's gardens, excepting the central portion. Upon these rooms and the arcades about 40,000*l.* has been expended, and the ground is worth a very considerable sum. But considering that the Government intended to devote the Exhibition building, if purchased by them, to purposes entirely analogous with those for which the estate was originally obtained, the 1851 Commissioners consent to sell their interest in the whole of this property for 120,000*l.* They stipulate that access shall be preserved, in the interest of the public, from any public establishments which may be placed within the building to the portion of the refreshment rooms which the Commissioners propose still to retain. They stipulate also that the property shall be permanently used for purposes connected with science or the arts. They declare that the arrangement is proposed exclusively with a view to the public interests.

ARRIVAL OF CAPTAINS SPEKE AND GRANT.—The two travellers to whom the scientific world is indebted for the solution of the great geographical problem of the source of the Nile, Captains Speke and Grant, arrived at Southampton on Wednesday morning from Alexandria. The Mayor and Corporation presented them with an address on landing, and invited them to a public breakfast, but their engagements in London prevented their accepting the invitation. On Monday next they will be received by the Royal Geographical Society at an Extra Meeting at Burlington House, and on Tuesday evening Captain Speke will deliver a lecture on their discovery at the Royal Institution.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that in the week that ended Saturday, June 13, the number of deaths registered in London was 1186. The average number in the corresponding week of the ten years 1853–62, corrected for increase of population, was 1143. The present return is therefore 43 above the average. During the week the births of 995 boys and 1000 girls, in all 1995 children, were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1853–62 the average number was 1791.

Provincial.

LIVERPOOL.—The Great Eastern, which left New York at 2 P.M. on the 6th inst., arrived at Liverpool on the 17th with 391 passengers.

MANCHESTER.—At the meeting of the Central Executive Committee on Monday, the hon. secretary stated that the receipts for the week were 1239*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.*, and the balance in the bank 35*l.*587*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* A subscription was announced of 500*l.* from Honolulu, to which the King of the Sandwich Islands was a contributor. Mr. Commissioner Farnall's weekly report showed a further decrease of the unemployed to the extent of 2645. It was however the opinion of the meeting that the distress next winter will be as severe as it was last year, but that the cotton trade in Lancashire will eventually become more prosperous than it has ever been.

NOTTINGHAM.—For some time past workmen have been employed in altering Welbeck Abbey, the seat of the Duke of Portland. On Saturday a storm visited that place; and about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, while the storm was raging at its height, a thunderbolt descended upon the tower, striking it with such force that the four-dial clock was completely demolished and the tower split down, the report of thunder and the fall of the old pile causing great alarm among the workpeople. There have been several severe thunder storms in Nottingham and the surrounding neighbourhood during the past few days.

OXFORD.—The Prince and Princess of Wales arrived in Oxford on Tuesday, and were received with becoming state and rejoicing, but the event added another to the long list of disappointments as regards the weather where the Prince is concerned, for the morning was ushered in with a damp chilly drizzle, and ended in as heavy rain as ever [spoilt an outdoor holiday in England. This mischance damped a great deal of the enthusiasm of the reception, and quite marred what would otherwise have been a gay and attractive spectacle. The High-street was thronged with spectators; every window and balcony was crowded with ladies; the houses were dressed with rosettes and evergreens; and banners, mottos, and devices, more or less suited to the occasion, fluttered in all directions. The reception took place on Magdalen Bridge, which was, of course, the great centre of attraction. The Archbishops of Canterbury and Armagh, the Bishops of London, Winchester, and Lincoln, followed by the Vice-Chancellor, Deans, Wardens, Heads of Houses, and Doctors of Divinity and Medicine, in their Academic robes, headed the procession, which was brought up by a crowd of Masters of Arts and College dignitaries. The procession had scarcely drawn up in double lines along the bridge when the rain came down with vehemence, and in the midst of it the Royal cortège drew up. It was a plain travelling chariot drawn by four horses, and preceded by two outriders in scarlet liveries; while in front of all rode the Duke of Marlborough, as Lord-Lieutenant of the county. On entering the bridge the Royal carriage stopped, and, though the drenching rain might well have justified their Royal Highnesses in keeping the vehicle closed, the Prince gave orders that the hood should be thrown back, and for the rest of the route to Christ Church they both sat exposed to the heavy rain with the most perfect indifference. Both the Prince and Princess were in plain morning costume, and looked pleased with the extreme warmth of their reception. Unfortunately, just as the cortège reached the bridge, the pressure of the country people who had gathered in the Iffley Road quite overpowered the police and Volunteers in their efforts to keep the pathway clear; and the Royal carriage was instantly surrounded by a mixed crowd, whose cheering and pushing to see the Princess marred the ceremony which constitutes the presentation of an address. The intruders, however, were ultimately checked by the police, and the Royal procession continued its course up the High Street, amid the most enthusiastic demonstrations of welcome, in spite of the drenching rain, which now came down in streams. On arriving at Christ Church the band struck up "God Save the Queen," the Volunteers presented arms, and amid general cheering the Royal procession drove up to the flight of steps at the upper terrace, where they were received under an awning by Dean Liddell, Archdeacon Clarke, the Sub-Dean, and other dignitaries of the College. Giving his arm to the Princess, the Dean led his illustrious guests to the apartments provided for them in his own house. In about a quarter of an hour the Royal party returned to the awning, under which the Volunteer prizes had been arranged. The Princess, who seemed to suffer somewhat from the damp chilly atmosphere to which she had been exposed during her drive through the town, wore a warm woollen wrapper over her mauve silk dress. Lieut.-Colonel Bowyer handed the cups and other articles to her Royal Highness, who presented them to the winners with a kindly courtesy which seemed to bespeak an almost personal interest in the success of each. At the close of the presentation the corps, at the request of the Princess, went through some of their exercises. Shortly before 3 the Prince and Princess left the Deanery for the Sheldonian Theatre, where the undergraduates for nearly two hours had been indulging in the demonstrations and clamour which are their peculiar privilege on such occasions. When their Royal Highnesses entered, the whole assemblage rose, and the undergraduates, starting to their feet with a deafening cheer, waved caps, gowns, handkerchiefs in the air, and stamped their feet in the ecstacy of their enthusiasm till the building trembled in a manner that was almost alarming. Never since the Theatre was built have its walls echoed and vibrated to such a long, hearty, and absolutely deafening outburst as the Prince advanced, bowing with kindly grace from side to side, and leading his young bride, who was quite unable to conceal the expression of absolute astonishment at this astounding welcome. The Prince wore his uniform and riband of the Garter, and over it his academic gown. The Princess was dressed plainly and simply as in the morning. They were accompanied by the Earl of Derby in his splendid robes as Chancellor of the University, the Dukes of Newcastle and Marlborough, Earls Granville, Spencer, Mount Edgcumbe, Lord Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone, Mr. and Mrs. Disraeli, General Knollys, Dean Liddell, &c. The Chancellor occupied his own seat, the Prince and Princess sat on his right in chairs of state; and all having taken their places waited patiently till the long cheering came to an end. The Earl of Derby then rose and delivered a long Latin address, at the conclusion of which he presented the diploma conferring the degree of Doctor in Civil Law on his Royal Highness, amid prolonged applause. After the usual presentation by the Regius Professor of Civil Law, the honorary degree of D.C.L. was conferred on Earl Spencer, the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, Lord Harris, and General Knollys. Congratulatory poems on the occasion of the Royal visit were then delivered by two undergraduates. With this the special Congregation closed, and amid cheers and shoutings the Prince and Princess left the Theatre. Their Royal Highnesses then honoured with their presence a bazaar in St. John's College Gardens in aid of the funds of the Radcliffe Infirmary, and the second show of the Royal Oxfordshire Horticultural Society in the adjoining grounds of Trinity. Both fêtes were celebrated under the depressing influence of a pouring rain. In the evening the Prince and Princess were entertained at a state banquet in the Hall of Christ Church, after which they honoured with their presence a grand Masonic ball, given by the Apollo University Lodge, in the New Corn Exchange. On Wednesday the Encœnia or Commemoration of Founders was celebrated in the Sheldonian Theatre with the usual honours. The undergraduates in the gallery manifested their feelings with still greater energy than on Tuesday, the greatest demonstration being reserved for Professor Kingsley, whose name was said to have been withheld from the list of honours through the influence of Dr. Pusey, who was received with a proportionate amount of hisses. Professor Jowett was also the subject of unbounded admiration. The Chancellor took his seat about 12 o'clock, and almost immediately left the Theatre and conducted the Prince and Princess to the chairs of state which had been prepared for them. The cheering was vociferous, and their Royal Highnesses were evidently touched with the warmth of their reception. The honorary degree of D.C.L. was then conferred on the Duke of Newcastle, Earl Granville, M. de Bille the Danish Minister, the Right Hon. Edward Cardwell, the Right Hon. James Whiteside, Sir Hugh Cairns, Sir Stafford Northcote, and Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald. The Public Orator then delivered his address amidst an unceasing succession of interruptions from the undergraduates, after which the prize essays and poems were recited. The Earl of Derby then declared Convocation closed. At 2 P.M. the Royal party partook of a grand collation in the library of All Souls' College. It was expected that their Royal Highnesses would attend the Freemasons' fête in Worcester College Gardens, but as they had been regularly mobbed at the Horticultural Show on the previous day, they declined to submit themselves a second time to the rudeness of the crowd. The rain, moreover, descended in torrents during the entire fête. The Prince and Princess subsequently witnessed the procession of boats. They were rowed from Folly bridge to the University barge in a new and handsome boat, constructed by Messrs. Salter. They there witnessed an eight-oared race from the Willows to the University barge, followed by the grand procession of boats which is one of the sights of the University. Later in the evening their Royal Highnesses were entertained by the Vice-Chancellor at a grand banquet in Exeter College-hall, and afterwards honoured with their presence a ball given by the Undergraduates of Christ Church in the New Corn Exchange. On Thursday morning the Prince and Princess paid a visit to Frewen Hall, the house occupied by his Royal Highness during his academic residence. They next visited Exeter College, the Bodleian Library, and the New Museum. At half-past 3 their Royal Highnesses left Oxford by railway for Windsor, their departure being marked by the same manifestations of enthusiastic loyalty which had greeted their arrival. The students immediately started off for the Long Vacation; the visitors joined them in a general rush to the railway; and the city rapidly subsided into the stillness and repose of the Long Vacation.

THE MURDER OF MR. JACKSON.—The Limerick Reporter contains further particulars in connection with the murder of Mr. Jackson, which tend to controvert the idea of its having been an agrarian outrage. It states that there could not have been less than 100*l.* about the person of the deceased and in his home on the morning of the murder. Of this sum not one shilling was to be seen on the day the body was found. Search was made in the safe or strong box in which he kept his money, but there was none in it. Search was then made in the drawers and desks in which he was accustomed to keep his accounts, but there were no accounts to be found since 1861. For the years 1862 and 1863 no accounts whatever were to be found. Search was also made for other matters connected with the business of the house and estate, and they were not forthcoming. The Reporter observes that these are most extraordinary and astounding facts. The murder was perpetrated on a Thursday morning. During the whole of that day the murderer was probably engaged in carrying out his scheme of plunder and destroying the accounts, as no great alarm was felt at Mr. Jackson's absence until late at night, and search was not really made for him until next morning. Among the latest arrests is that of the cook, who is said to have uttered some expression which, if unexplained, would go to demonstrate that she had some idea that evil was about to befall her master.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

MONDAY, June 15.

We have rather a larger supply of Beasts than on Monday last, and the demand is not so active; consequently on the average prices are lower. The number of Sheep is scarcely as large, but trade is dull, especially for heavy fat sheep. It is very difficult to maintain late quotations. Good Lambs and Calves are in request at late rates; inferior kinds meet with a dull sale. From Germany and Holland there are 600 Beasts, 4650 Sheep, and 244 Calves; from Spain, 160 Beasts; from Scotland, 150; from Norfolk and Suffolk, 2920; and 400 from the Northern and Midland counties.

THURSDAY, June 18.

The number of Beasts is scarcely as large as on Thursday last; the demand, however, is much smaller, and consequently several remain unsold, although there is a disposition to take rather lower than our quotations. Sheep and Lambs are rather more plentiful; trade is exceedingly dull, and Monday's quotations cannot be realised throughout. We have a large supply of Calves, and on the average prices are lower. Our foreign supply consists of 895 Beasts, 2130 Sheep, and 531 Calves. Milch Cows, 85.

The accounts from a portion of the Weald of Kent and Sussex are still unfavourable, while those received from Mid and East Kent and the eastern part of Sussex state that the bine grows rapidly and not much vermin.

MARK LANE.—MONDAY, June 15.

The supply of English Wheat to this morning's market was small, and met a quick sale at fully our last week's quotations, a portion being taken for France. Foreign was in good retail demand, and in some instances, particularly American for export, commanded an advance of 1s. per qr. Barley, Beans, and Peas were taken freely at the extreme prices of last week. Oats were a slow sale at a decline of 6d. per qr. For Flour there was very little inquiry.

Friday, June 19.

The weather since the 12th inst. has continued to be showery, and occasionally the rain has been very heavy, particularly so this morning. The crops are reported as having been greatly benefited; Wheat in the early districts is coming into blossom. The Wheat trade has been stimulated by a continental demand, and prices generally have recovered the depression of the previous week. Oats in several of the chief markets have declined in value 6d. per qr. No alteration has occurred in the quotations of other kinds of spring corn. Flour continues to attract little attention. Since Friday last 31 vessels have been reported off the coast. The floating trade has become more lively by a good demand for Wheat for the continent. Wheat prices have improved 1s. to 2s., Barley advanced 1s., but Maize and Linseed are 1s. per qr. cheaper. In Paris (June 18), the market is very firm, but the transactions have not been of great extent. Wheat has advanced 1s. to 6d. per 480 lbs., Flour 1s. per 280 lbs. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 40s.6d. p. 280 lbs. The present stock of Flour is reduced to 6670 cwt. The arrivals of English grain are small, moderate of foreign Wheat, large of Oats, none of Barley, of Flour good. To-day's market was very thinly attended. English Wheat met a quick sale at the extreme rates of Monday; foreign was held firmly at full prices, but notwithstanding that there is still an inquiry for the Continent, only a limited business was transacted. Spring Corn was in fair demand at our last quotations.

Liverpool, June 16.—We have had a very fair attendance of buyers at to-day's market, and with a more general demand Wheat has obtained an improvement of 1d. to 2d. per cental on the low rates of last Friday. Flour is held for a slight advance, but does not move freely. Indian Corn meets a good consumptive inquiry at Friday's prices. Oats and Oatmeal dull, but are not to be bought cheaper. Beans, Peas, and Barley are each steady, without alteration in value. The market closes with firmness.

Friday, June 19.—Wheat and Flour in irregular demand at last Tuesday's rates. Indian Corn is held for Tuesday's quotations, but the large shipments from America have caused buyers to act with great caution, and very little business done. Oats and Oatmeal dull. Egyptian Wheat unchanged.

DENNIS'S PATENT HORTICULTURAL BUILDINGS are made from the best Wrought Iron, upon an entirely new principle. The combination of Iron and Glass under this patent is perfect; the possibility of fracture is prevented, and a permanently Water-tight Roof insured.

The leading practical advantages are extreme smallness of Framing, admitting a maximum of light and heat, great strength, durability, and perfect ventilation. They are speedily erected, portable, of more desirable outline, and do not exceed the cost of a perishable wooden structure.

To Noblemen, Gardeners, Farmers, and Others.

AMIES and BARFORD beg to call particular attention to their NEW PATENT WATER BALLASTING FIELD and GARDEN ROLLERS, which have the following advantages over all others. They are made entirely of Wrought Iron, are made water-tight, and are loaded with water to obtain increased weight at pleasure, which is moreover employed with the greatest possible per centage of crushing power directly upon the surface of the soil. The weight of a Garden Roller can thus be doubled in a few minutes, and a one, two, or three Horse Land Roller is secured, as desired, in one implement.

Great numbers have already been sold, and are giving the greatest satisfaction, and whether for Gardens, Lawns, Cricket Grounds, Road-making, or for farmers' use, they will be found superior to all others.

For Illustrated Price Lists apply to Messrs. Amies & Barford, Queen Street Iron Works, Peterborough, Patentees and Sole Manufacturers.

PATENT GUTTA PERCHA SOLES.—Important to Gardeners.—The Gutta Percha Company have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of the following letter from G. Glenny, Esq., the celebrated Florist:—

"Gentlemen,—I have worn Gutta Percha Soles and Heels these two years, and being so much in a garden as I necessarily am in all weathers, and with the ground in all states, I would on no account be without them. As a matter of economy I would recommend Gardeners to use them, for they may repair the worn part at all times by warming the material at the fire, and pressing it from the thick parts to the worn parts, as easily as if it were so much dough. I think it the duty of all persons who must occasionally wet their feet to adopt a material that completely defies damp. Many a gardener would escape colds and rheumatism by the use of Gutta Percha Soles. Your obedient servant, G. Glenny."

Every variety of Gutta Percha articles, such as Mill Bands, Tubing, Soles, Sheet, Pump Buckets, Fire Buckets, Bosses, Union Joints, Flasks, Bottles, Bowls, Chamber Vessels, Toilet Trays, Sponge Bags, Curtain Rings, Galvanic Batteries, Calbotype trays, &c., manufactured by the Gutta Percha Company, and sold by their wholesale dealers in town or country.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday, in answer to Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE, Earl RUSSELL said that despatches on the Polish question left London for St. Petersburg on Wednesday, and when replies had been received he would lay all the papers before the House. In answer to the Earl of MALMESBURY, Earl RUSSELL defended the course he had taken in demanding reparation for the wrongs and insults that had been inflicted by Brazil on British subjects, and expressed an earnest hope that amicable relations would soon be restored. On Monday Lord EBURY called attention to the distinction made by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners in the distribution of the common fund between benefices in public and private patronage, and moved that the necessity of the case, and not the incidents of patronage, should be made the main consideration. After a short discussion the motion was withdrawn. The Prison Ministers' Bill was read a third time and passed. The Volunteers' Bill was read a second time. On Tuesday the Earl of DONOUGHMORE called attention to the report of the evidence on the West Hartlepool Harbour and Railway Bill, and moved for a Select Committee to inquire and report as to what legislative measures were desirable for the purpose of restraining directors of railway companies from exceeding the borrowing powers fixed by their Acts of Parliament. The motion was agreed to after some remarks by the LORD CHANCELLOR, who said that he would at once give directions to the Solicitor to the Treasury to institute an inquiry into the case, and to prosecute the offenders if there were any probability of a conviction. The Security from Violence Bill passed through Committee. The Innkeepers' Liability and the Militia Pay Bills were read a second time. On Thursday the Volunteers Bill passed through Committee, the clauses relating to the compulsory acquisition of land for ranges having been withdrawn by the Government. The African Slave Treaty Bill, the Officers of the Royal Naval Reserve Bill, the Inland Revenue Bill, and the Militia Pay Bill also passed through committee. The Waywardens Contracts Bill was read a second time. The Thames Embankment (North Side) Bill was read a third time and passed.

In the Commons on Friday Mr. STANSFELD stated, in answer to Mr. LIDDELL, that the Admiralty were prepared to adopt many of the recommendations of the Royal Commissioners on Greenwich Hospital, and that a Bill on the subject would be introduced in the course of a few days. The Harwich Harbour Bill passed through committee. The Militia Pay Bill and the Charitable Uses Bill were read a third time, and passed. The ATTORNEY-GENERAL FOR IRELAND was instructed to prosecute Messrs. J. D. and R. BARBOUR for bribery, treating, and undue influence at the late election for Lisburn. On Monday Lord PALMERSTON moved that the orders of the day be postponed until Mr. HENNESSY'S motion on the affairs of Poland had been disposed of. Mr. S. BEAUMONT, Mr. KINGLAKE, and Lord ENFIELD urged Mr. HENNESSY not to press his motion at the present time. On a division, Lord PALMERSTON'S motion for postponing the orders of the day was negatived by 165 to 110. Mr. HORSMAN and other members expressed their dissatisfaction at the result, and charged the Government with a breach of faith. Lord PALMERSTON said that he had been entirely taken by surprise, but as the majority of the House were averse to a debate on Polish affairs at the present moment, he would briefly state the substance of the recommendations which, in concert with France and Austria, her Majesty's Ministers had submitted to the Russian Government. They were first, a general and complete amnesty; second, a national representation for Poland on the principle of the engagement made by ALEXANDER I. in 1815; third, the appointment of Poles alone to public offices, and a Polish administration; fourth, full liberty of conscience; fifth, the use of the Polish language in all public transactions; sixth, a regular system of recruiting. In addition to these propositions, her Majesty's Government had recommended that there should be a cessation of hostilities. Mr. HENNESSY expressed himself satisfied with this statement, and postponed his motion until the reply of Russia has been received. The London, &c., Dioceses Bill, the Passengers Act Amendment Bill, and the Thames Embankment (South Side) Bill passed through Committee. The Walmer Vesting Bill was read a second time. The Mutiny (East India) Act Repeal Bill and the Local Government Supplemental (No. 2) Bill were read a third time and passed. The Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Bill was recommitted when the motion that the provisional order of the Board of Trade for the construction of a pier at Rhyl be reinstated in the Bill was agreed to on a division. The House then went into Committee on the Poor Removal (No. 2) Bill, when an amendment of the first clause moved by Mr. C. TURNER having been carried, Mr. HERBERT, who introduced the Bill, moved that the CHAIRMAN report progress, with the view of considering what course he should take in regard to it. The motion was agreed to. On Tuesday the Thames Embankment (South Side) Bill, as amended, was considered and agreed to. The Vaccination (Scotland) Bill passed through Committee. The Statute Labour Roads and Bridges Bill was withdrawn. Mr. MAGUIRE moved an address to HER MAJESTY, praying for a Royal Commission to inquire and report on the state of the agricultural classes of Ireland, and to suggest such improvement in the relations between landlord and tenant as might seem necessary and expedient. The motion was opposed by Government, and negatived on a division by 128 to 49. Sir F. KELLY moved for a Select Committee to consider the effect of the malt duties on the cultivation and price of barley, the manufacture and price of malt and malt liquor; and the application of malt to the feeding of cattle and sheep. The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER assented to the motion, which was agreed to. On Wednesday, on the motion of Mr. BOUVERIE, the order for the second reading of the Uniformity Act Amendment Bill was discharged. The Misappropriation by Servants Bill was read a second time. Mr. DALGLISH after a short debate withdrew his motion for the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the constitution of the Board of Admiralty, on the understanding that he will renew it early next session. Mr. COX'S Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act Amendment Bill, the object of which was to enable Sir THOMAS M. WILSON to build on Hampstead Heath, was lost on the question of the second reading by 78 to 54. On Thursday Mr. DILLWYN moved that the order for resuming the adjourned debate upon his motion on Religious Endowments in Ireland be discharged. The motion was agreed to. The House went into Committee of Supply, and agreed to the Education vote for Ireland, the vote for the National Gallery, and other votes. In a Committee of the whole House, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved a resolution authorising the Lords of the Treasury to issue, out of the Consolidated Fund, an amount not exceeding 1,200,000*l.*, on the security of local rates, for facilitating the execution of public works in certain manufacturing districts. The motion was agreed to. Sir ROBERT HITCHAM'S Charity Bill, the Ruthyn Charities Bill, the Walmer Vesting Bill, and the Postmaster-General (Sale of Land) Bill were read a third time and passed.

The EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH has this week effected some important changes in the French Ministry, the real meaning of which is not at present understood. Count WALEWSKI, M. DE PERSIGNY, M. ROULAND, and M. DELANGLE, have been removed from office, and have been replaced by MM. BOUDET, DURUY, and BEHIC, who have hitherto been unknown to public life. M. FOULD, the Minister of Finance, remains in office.

On Thursday morning the Prince presided at a meeting of the Council of the Duchy of Cornwall. His Royal Highness afterwards rode on horseback. The Princess took a drive in an open carriage. In the evening their Royal Highnesses had a dinner party at Marlborough House.

VISIT OF THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES TO SCOTLAND.—The Prince and Princess, on the approach of grouse shooting, will pay a visit to the Highlands. Their Royal Highnesses will not go to Balmoral, but will occupy Abergeldie Castle, formerly the residence of the Duchess of Kent.

PRINCE ALFRED.—On Saturday evening Prince Alfred left London for Portsmouth, and joined his ship, the Racoon, as Junior Lieutenant. The Queen, as Sovereign of the Order of the Garter, has by letters patent under the Great Seal of the Order, bearing date June 10, dispensed with all the statutes and regulations observed in regard to installation, and granted to Prince Alfred full power and authority to exercise all rights and privileges belonging to a Knight of the Order in as full and ample a manner as if he had been formally installed.

THE CABINET.—A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury in Downing Street. Another Council was held on Wednesday.

THE PEERAGE.—The Queen has directed letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of an Earl of the United Kingdom to the Duke of Somerset, K.G., and his heirs male, by the title of Earl St. Maur, of Berry Pomeroy, in the county of Devon.

PARLIAMENTARY MOVEMENTS.—The Lisburn election has terminated in the return of Mr. Verner, the Conservative candidate, by a majority of 61 over Mr. Richardson, the former member, in whose favour Mr. R. Barbour, who had been put in nomination by the Liberals, retired on the day of election. The numbers were 151 to 90.

THE CANONRY OF CANTERBURY.—The Rev. Drinkwater Bourne having declined to accept this canonry, Lord Palmerston has conferred it upon the Rev. Joseph W. Blakesley, B.D., of Trinity College, Cambridge, vicar of Ware.

THE IRON NAVY.—The Royal Oak, 35, screw iron-cased frigate, Captain A. A. Campbell, sailed from Spithead on Thursday for Portland, to join the Channel fleet. In her preliminary trials she attained an almost unparalleled degree of success, both in her steering and steaming qualifications, though she is said to be about the ugliest vessel afloat. She made upwards of 12½ knots an hour with ease, being 1 knot more than she had been calculated to make; and she even went faster with all her guns and stores on board than she did in light draught. It is also said that she answered her helm as quickly and as sensitively as a cutter, and that her steering capabilities cannot be approached by any vessel above the size of a gunboat on the list of the Royal Navy.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—A modification of the French Ministry has taken place this week. Count Walewski, Count de Persigny, M. Rouland, and M. Delangle have retired from office; M. Billault has been appointed Minister of State; M. Boudet, Minister of the Interior; M. Baroche, Minister of Justice; M. Duruy, Minister of Education; M. Behic, Minister of Agriculture, Commerce, and Public Works; M. Rouher, Minister President of the Council of State; Count de Morny, President of the Corps Législatif. The decree nominating M. Billault Minister of State, places among his functions those exercised by the Ministers without portfolio. Part of the functions appertaining to the Ministry of State are transferred to the Ministry of the Household, and another part to the Ministry of Education. Public Worship is assigned to the Ministry of Justice. The direction of the Moniteur is assigned to the Minister of the Interior. In reference to these changes the Moniteur says that the Emperor has thought proper to modify the position of the speaking Ministers who, without portfolio, represented and spoke for their colleagues in the Chambers. Henceforward the Minister of State, freed from administrative functions, and the Minister President of the Council of State, are to defend the policy of the Government in the debates of the Legislative Bodies. It is rumoured that the Corps Législatif will assemble shortly for the purpose of confirming the elections of the new members. It is generally reported that M. de Persigny will proceed to St. Petersburg on a special mission; and that MM. Boudet and Baroche will be nominated senators. It is asserted that M. Thuiller has been appointed prefect of Lyons, and M. Dureau prefect of Arras. La France, speaking of these Ministerial changes, says that they will in no way affect the foreign policy pursued by the Government; and the Nation asserts that Count de Morny was not unconnected with them. The Patrie says that the Cabinet of St. Petersburg will accept the Austrian proposals in regard to Poland, declining in some respects those of France and England, in order to destroy the combination of the three Powers. The Constitutionnel of Monday publishes an article on the Polish question, signed by M. Paulin Limayrac, in reply to the assertion that England would not proceed beyond diplomatic action. It says:—

"It should be understood that as the question is an European one it must be resolved by the common action of Europe. Should the assertion alluded to mean that England (if by some mischance, and against all probability, the intervention of the three Cabinets should remain without result) would refuse to proceed further, even if the two other Powers were prepared to march with her, then we must lower the praises given to a false enthusiasm, the consequence of which was to drive the unfortunate Poles to certain death. We are convinced that England will dispel all equivocation. Her honour and the interests of Europe and humanity demand it."

Orders were sent on Saturday to Vincennes to prepare for immediate service three batteries of 12-pounders and 100 artillery waggons. The news was speedily communicated to the Paris garrison and created immense sensation. The officers at Vincennes think that war will probably break out before the end of July, and boast that the French army will be ready for any emergency before that time. At a Cabinet Council held on Thursday week, at which the Emperor presided, it was resolved that the French ambassador in London should be instructed to renew the proposals of the Emperor to the English Government for joint diplomatic action in America. Mr. Lindsay and Mr. Roebuck arrived at Fontainebleau on Monday, and had an audience of the Emperor, who received them most graciously. The conversation lasted some time, and the Emperor declared that he entertained the same views as before with respect to the civil war in America; that he was desirous again to interpose his good offices, and equally desirous that England should join him; that he believed the joint intervention of France and England would be attended with good results; and that, in again proposing to England to act with him, he was moved by no unfriendly feeling towards the North—quite the contrary. His only motive was to put a stop to the horrible carnage in America, the more so as it was productive of no results; and the more to be deplored as there was no chance of restoring the Union. A Paris letter in the Indépendance Belge states that Mr. Slidell, the Confederate Commissioner, was received at Fontainebleau last week, and was well satisfied with his visit. The Prince and Princess Napoleon are expected in France in about 10 days. Garibaldi is expected at Neris, in the department of Allier, to take the baths. The trial of M. Casimir Perier commenced on Thursday at Grenoble. M. Berryer appeared for the defence, and the Procureur Imperial conducted the prosecution. The Court deferred giving judgment until the next sitting, which will probably take place on Monday next. The members of the bar gave a banquet on Thursday evening to M. Berryer. The Moniteur of Friday publishes the report of General Forey to the Emperor. It states that the speeches of MM. Picard and Jules Favre had been translated into Spanish and distributed through Mexico, and that thousands of copies of these speeches were found in the enemy's quarters. With the view of facilitating commercial operations in Mexico, General Forey has decided that merchandise consigned to ports occupied by the French, and destined for portions of the country in French occupation, shall only pay half of the import duty to which they are liable by the regular tariff. The Nord says that a French vessel has been despatched to take possession of the State of Sonora. The France of Saturday evening says that the French Government has offered, at London and Madrid, to undertake the settlement of the English and Spanish claims on Mexico. The papers of Friday state that the Mexican prisoners taken at Puebla are confined in Forts Guadaloupe, Loreto, and Carmen. The health of the French army continues satisfactory.

SWITZERLAND.—The Federal Council has passed a special resolution securing to England the advantages stipulated in the commercial treaty concluded between Belgium and Switzerland.

BELGIUM.—The King of the Belgians on Sunday sent to the Ministers of England and Brazil his award in the difficulty between the two countries, which was referred to his Majesty's arbitration. This award is believed to be more favourable to Brazil than to England. It is said that his Majesty has decided that, notwithstanding certain irregularities on the part of the Brazilian authorities, which he points out and censures, the treatment of which the English officers complained did not constitute an insult to the British navy. The ratifications of the Prusso-Belgian Treaty of Commerce of the 28th of March were exchanged on Saturday at the Foreign-office at Berlin, between the President of the Ministry and the Belgian Ambassador. The treaty will therefore take effect from and after the 1st of next month.

FRANKFORT.—The fortresses of the Germanic Confederation have been ordered to be put in a complete state of defence in the shortest possible time, more especially to afford accommodation for troops in the casemates, in the event of the army being placed on a war footing.

PRUSSIA.—The King of Prussia arrived at Carlsbad in Bohemia on the 19th inst. It is said that the Emperor of Austria will shortly visit his Majesty at that place.

AUSTRIA.—The draught of the Address from the Upper House, in reply to the Speech from the Throne, dwells principally upon the necessity of Austria supporting the national and religious interests of the Poles; and at the same time advocates a pacific policy and the maintenance of the integrity of the Austrian empire. The draught of the address of the Lower House advises a policy of justice for Poland, expresses the necessity for German Federal reform, and warmly desires the success of the task of establishing the constitution in Austria. On Thursday the Address of the Upper House was adopted almost without debate exactly as reported by the committee. In the Lower House it was resolved that there was no reason for the absence of the Czech members from the sittings of the Reichsrath, and that they were to be summoned to make their appearance on pain of having their title to sit as members cancelled. The discussion on the Address was then commenced. All the members who spoke on the subject expressed great sympathy for Poland, and were enthusiastically cheered. M. Grocholski advocated the complete independence of Poland. Mr. Jewett, who came to Europe from America on a mission the object of which was to restore peace in America, had a private interview on Monday with Count Rechberg on the subject of mediation, on the basis of the proposals made by the Emperor of the French. Mr. Jewett asked for Austria's friendly co-operation for the restoration of peace. Count Rechberg promised to comply with this request in the event of the North and South expressing a wish to that effect.

ITALY.—In the sitting of Friday General Bixio advised the interruption of relations with France, who while occupying Rome, does not prevent the organisation of brigandage. Signor Buoncompagni then moved that the Chamber should express its confidence in the policy of the Ministry. In the sitting of Saturday Signor Sella gave explanations arising out of the personal remarks exchanged between Signori Minghetti and Rattazzi on Thursday. The subject then dropped, and the debate on the policy of the Ministry was resumed. Signor Chiaves moved a resolution approving the conduct of the Ministry in dissolving the Democratic Society of Genoa, and commending the declaration of the Cabinet with regard to the Roman and Polish questions. Signor Minghetti, the President of the Council, was opposed to every proposition except that of Signor Buoncompagni, expressing entire confidence in the policy of the Ministry. The motion of Signor Buoncompagni was accordingly put to the Chamber, and carried by 202 to 52 votes. In consequence of the personalities which took place during the debate, a duel was fought on Tuesday between Signori Minghetti and Rattazzi in the Royal Park of Stupinigi. Signor Minghetti, who had the choice of weapons, selected the sabre, and inflicted a slight wound on Rattazzi's arm. The late and present Prime Minsters then shook hands, and the matter terminated. King Ferdinand of Portugal has arrived at Turin. The Marquis Pepoli left on Thursday for St. Petersburg, to resume his functions as Italian Ambassador at the Russian Court. The Turin evening papers assert that France has made fresh remonstrances at Rome to obtain the withdrawal of Francis II. from that city. Despatches from Rome announce that, by order of General Dumont, the French gendarmes have arrested the brigand chiefs Stramenga and Tristany.

Russia.—The Notes of the three Powers on the Polish question arrived at St. Petersburg on the 23d inst. It was believed that they would be remitted to Prince Gortschakoff on Thursday. Private letters state that an Imperial ukase has been issued authorising the issue of notes to the amount of 10 millions of roubles, in order to cover the deficit and the additional expenditure which have been caused by the insurrection in Poland. Great preparations continue to be made at Cronstadt and other naval and military arsenals.

Poland.—Archbishop Felinski has arrived in St. Petersburg, and it is rumoured that he has been exiled to the Government of Vologda. A great sensation has been caused throughout Poland by the execution of Count Léon Plater, who was shot by the Russians in the square of the Fortress of Dunaburg. He was only 26 years of age, and was an intimate friend of the Emperor Napoleon. Three insurgent officers have been shot at Warsaw. The insurgent leader Bialozor has been shot at Kowno. Frankowski, having recovered from his wounds, has been executed at Lublin. Prince William Radziwil has been arrested at Lemberg. Madlle. Lakinska has been confined in the prison for the lowest criminals at Pleszew. 869 gentlemen are confined as prisoners in the fortress of Dunaburg. 600 persons, partly public functionaries and partly gentlemen, are shut up in the barracks at Mobilew, while ladies and aged men have been brought bound into the city. M. Krzywicki, the Polish Minister of Public Worship, has sent in his resignation. The National Government has published a warning to the citizens of Warsaw that the Russian Government is desirous of exciting a rising in that capital. The revolutionary town captain of Warsaw issued a proclamation on the 19th, stating that the list of bonds published as having been stolen from the Bank of Warsaw is incomplete and false. On the 20th inst. 20,000 persons followed to the grave the body of the insurgent Szarnianski, who had died of his wounds. Two detachments of insurgents crossed the Galician frontier on the 20th inst. The insurgent leader Dunajewski attacked the Russians near Chosciakiewicz, and was repulsed with loss, being five times outnumbered by the enemy. The battle lasted nine hours, and was fought with much desperation. The losses on both sides were large, the insurgents having, it is said, 200 killed. Dunajewski himself is reported to have been drowned in the retreat. The Invalide Russe states that several engagements have taken place in Lithuania. A body of Poles attacked a detachment of Russians at Biala, and took the Russian General Maniukin prisoner. He was immediately tried by court-martial for ordering the massacre of the innocent inhabitants of the town of Siemiatcze, in Lithuania, and sentenced to be shot. The Poles, under Swientorzecki, have gained another victory in the neighbourhood of Minsk. On the 12th Krysinski was again victorious at Wiechon in Podlachia. A detachment of light Russian cavalry has been defeated, and 100 Cossacks lost their arms and horses at Mienoryszey. Wielunskie and 140 insurgents have cut their way through 600 Russians, by whom they had been surrounded. Boncza and his followers have had a skirmish with a cavalry force at Gory. The losses on both sides were trifling, but Boncza was wounded. A detachment of Polish mounted gendarmes has defeated a troop of Cossacks on the Warta, near the village of Kaliskie. The Cossacks lost 30 killed. Lelewel encountered the Russians at Korytnica on the 10th, but being attacked by a superior force retired in order. An entire detachment of insurgents has been driven across the Austrian frontier near Maniow. Many were drowned in the Vistula, and 150 of the remainder were detained in Galicia. The Cossacks of the Don are discontented, and intend to return to their own country with the large quantity of booty they have obtained by pillage. Some doubts having arisen as to the alleged threat of General Mouravieff to punish the Polish ladies with the knout, the French papers publish the original instructions issued by the Russian Government to General Mouravieff, on his appointment to the chief military command in Lithuania. The following are extracts from these instructions:—

"His Excellency should take every opportunity of acquainting the peasants with the paternal intentions of the Czar towards them, and of demonstrating that the landowners are their enemies and oppressors. If his Excellency considers it advisable, he can also furnish arms to those among the peasants who are attached to the Czar and to Russia. His Excellency should oppose certain demonstrations of the women, and for their hindrance will even adopt severe measures against them."

Greece.—The National Assembly has voted, by a majority of 130 to 52, the indemnity claimed by the French Minister, M. Bourré, in favour of M. Soulié, a Frenchman, who was ill-treated by some Greek soldiers.

Ionian Islands.—The Lord High Commissioner, Sir Henry Storks, issued a notice on the 17th, announcing the proposal of England for the annexation of the Ionian Islands to Greece, after which a Te Deum was sung, and general illuminations took place in the evening.

Turkey.—The supplementary loan of 2,000,000*l.*, authorised at the time of the negotiation of the late loan, will shortly be issued, for the purpose of withdrawing the base currency from circulation. Four frigates and 50,000 rifles have been ordered by the Turkish Government in England.

India.—A despatch has been received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Persia, dated June 11, stating that intelligence had that day been received of the capture of the city of Herat by Dost Mahomet Khan. The Oesterreichische Zeitung of Monday publishes intelligence from the East, stating that Dost Mahomed has died before Herat.

China.—A despatch from Shanghai of May 7 says that Colonel Gordon has besieged and captured Taitsan. The previous surrender was a snare, and half the Imperial force sent to take possession of the city were murdered.

Japan.—News received at Shanghai from Japan announces that the Japanese Government had been granted 15 days to reply to the English ultimatum. War appeared probable. The British minister had remonstrated with the United States minister at the large importations of arms and ammunition which American subjects were supplying to the Japanese, and which the extension of time would enable the Japanese to make available. Foreigners were embarking in expectation of hostilities.

Cape of Good Hope.—In honour of the marriage of the Prince of Wales the 15th of May was proclaimed a public holiday, and the event was celebrated with great éclat in all parts of the colony. The Colonial Secretary introduced his annual budget in the Cape Parliament on May 9. The estimated expenditure of the year falls short of the estimated revenue by 95,000*l.* To meet the cost of services not included in the estimates and to defray temporary loans, the Government proposes to impose additional taxes to the amount of 150,000*l.* Bills had already been introduced for that purpose, but their fate was considered doubtful, the general feeling of the colonists being against any heavy increase of taxation in the present depressed state of the colony. All was quiet on the frontier, but cattle-stealing by the natives was still prevalent.

United States.—There is nothing decisive from Vicksburg. An early attack upon General Grant's rear is considered probable. The Southern advices are very hopeful. They state that General Pemberton has reported he could hold Vicksburg, and that General Johnstone was to take his time to organise his forces. They also assert that Kirby Smith, with 10,000 men, has occupied Miliken's Bend, 20 miles above Vicksburg, cutting off General Grant's supplies. The Northern accounts state that there was fighting along the river from Lake Providence to within sight of Vicksburg, and that a severe fight occurred at Miliken's Bend on the 6th inst., the Federal forces, consisting mostly of negro regiments, being driven to the bank of the river under cover of the gunboats. A report, requiring confirmation, has been received from the South that General Kirby Smith has driven General Banks from Port Hudson, and was still pursuing him on the 5th. Despatches from Mobile, in giving the news of this repulse, state that General Banks has lost an arm. Official despatches state that the Federal General Keyes, with a large force, left Yorktown some days since. Federal gunboats have been sent up the James River as far as the Chickahominy. The report of the Northern journals that General Lee had evacuated Fredericksburg, and that Hooker had occupied the city, is untrue. Generals Lee and Longstreet are still at Fredericksburg, and occupy the city and heights in force. Three brigades of Federal cavalry and 2000 infantry crossed the Rappahannock at Beverley Ford, and had a severe engagement with General Stuart's cavalry, lasting all day, when the Confederates received heavy infantry reinforcements, and the Federals recrossed the river, bringing away their dead and wounded. The object of the expedition was to frustrate the plans of General Lee, who had assembled a force of cavalry at Culpepper Court House, with the view of making a raid into Maryland. The expedition is said to have succeeded in its object. General Lee has received heavy reinforcements, and the impression still prevails that he will shortly assume the offensive. The New York Daily News asserts that General Hooker was to move against General Lee on the 11th, and street rumours were current on the 12th that a battle was progressing on the Rappahannock. Great preparations for defence are making in Pennsylvania. A meeting had been held to raise 10,000 negroes for General Fremont. President Lincoln, in reply to a Missouri committee of Germans, stated that Generals Fremont, Sigel, and Butler were not systematically kept out of command, but had by their own action placed themselves in their present positions. He said that he favoured gradual emancipation. His being President might be a misfortune, but, having been elected, he meant to be President and perform his duty if he died for it. The New York Herald urges the nomination of President Lincoln for the next Presidency, in order to prevent a reign of terror and a revolutionary election campaign in 1864. The Enrolment Commissioners have been driven out of some counties in Indiana, and the Provost-Marshal and his assistant have been shot. Considerable excitement prevails, and a military force has been sent to the scene of disorder. Mr. Vallandigham has been unanimously nominated candidate for the Governorship of Ohio by the Democratic State Convention. He is said to have reached a Southern port, intending to sail for Nassau. In consequence of the general indignation throughout the Northern States, the President has felt it necessary to disapprove General Burnside's order suppressing the Chicago Times, and General Burnside has accordingly revoked it. The Prize Court at New York in the case of the Dolphin has decided that a vessel bound to Nassau, with the intention of sailing thence to a blockaded port, was equally liable to capture as if she was bound direct to a blockaded port. The Commissioners who superintended the discharge of the Peterhoff's cargo have presented their report. The case was to be argued on the 15th inst. The privateer brig Coquette has burnt the bark Whistling Wind. The Federal steamer Rhode Island chased and fired at the steamer Margaret and Jessie within 250 yards of the shore of Nassau. Several shots reached the shore alarming the inhabitants. The Margaret and Jessie escaped.

Mexico.—Advices from Puebla to the 1st inst. state that the Mexicans who surrendered at that place numbered 12,000. Their surrender was necessitated by hunger. It was rumoured that General Ortega and several officers had escaped whilst upon the road to Vera Cruz. They had refused to sign a pledge to remain neutral during the war. The French were at Cholula, six miles beyond Puebla, on the way to Mexico. The Mexicans asserted that the approaches to the city of Mexico would be vigorously defended.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Friday.—Brazils.—The Earl of Malmesbury moved an address to her Majesty for copies of any papers relating to the diplomatic rupture with Brazils. The Brazilian people were unanimous in supporting their Government in resisting the demands of this country, and were making every effort to obtain reparation. He charged Earl Russell with not having made due allowance for the state of Brazil, and with having allowed himself to be unduly influenced by the representations of his subordinates. He also charged him with having used arbitrary and imperious language in his communications with the Brazilian Government and with having resorted to illegal and impolitic reprisals. He complained strongly of the conduct of Messrs. Christie and Vereker for having hastily jumped at the worst construction of the facts, and resorted to threats most insulting to an independent Government. He maintained that there was no proof of the murder of the crew of the Prince of Wales, and that the Brazilian Government had done all in their power to institute an inquiry and punish those who might be guilty. In regard to the Forte, he was of opinion that the subject had been taken up with a gravity not warranted by the circumstances. The account of the squabble between the officers of that ship and the Brazilian sentry did not agree, and it seemed to be a most extraordinary thing to ask the King of the Belgians to decide whether an insult had been done to the British navy. He believed that if the noble earl had communicated with the Brazilian Minister in London, whom he had never consulted, the question would have been settled without difficulty.—Earl Russell said the principle upon which her Majesty's Government had acted was, that it was the duty of one Government to protect the subjects of another State living within their jurisdiction. He readily admitted the commercial importance of Brazil, but that was not sufficient to debar the British Government from asking reparation for a wrong that had been committed. Since the year 1831 there had been no fewer than 21 cases in which France, 22 in which Great Britain, and 23 in which the United States had resorted to force in order to obtain reparation. With regard to the wreck of the Prince of Wales, he especially commended the conduct of Mr. Vereker, who repaired to the spot, and, finding suspicious signs that the crew had been murdered, asked for an inquest, which was at first refused though subsequently granted. Some of the plunder was found in the house of the chief official, and if the wrecking had been the work of the wild inhabitants of the coast the officials must have been accomplices to it. This was what her Majesty's Government complained of, more especially as the Brazilian Government did not take any steps either to institute an inquiry or protect the cargo of the wrecked vessel. If her Majesty's Government had done otherwise it would have neglected a clear and imperative duty. He denied that the tone or language of his despatches was imperious, or that he could with justice be accused of having acted arbitrarily or with precipitation. In conclusion, he said there was no objection to produce the papers, and he earnestly hoped that amicable relations would soon be restored.—Lord Chelmsford commented upon the legal part of the question, and contended that the proceedings of her Majesty's Government in enforcing reprisals were altogether unjustifiable.—After a few words from Lord Lyttelton in defence of Mr. Christie, the subject dropped.—The Duke of Newcastle laid a Bill on the table to provide for the government of the colonies of British Columbia and Vancouver's Island.

Monday.—Liberated Slaves in Brazil.—Lord Brougham asked for papers connected with the treatment of liberated slaves in Brazil. He said that the conduct of Brazil in reference to the abolition of slavery had been admirable, and contrasted favourably with that of Spain, who had hitherto done nothing except receive the compensation.—Earl Russell had no objection to produce the papers. Parliamentary Oaths.—Lord Stratheden called attention to the oaths required to be taken by members of the Legislature, with a view to legislation on the subject. He laid a Bill on the table for the purpose of amending the oaths now administered, but stated that it was not his intention to proceed with the Bill this session.—Earl Granville thought no advantage would accrue from discussing the question, unless it was intended that some practical result should follow. The Bill was read a first time.—Lord Ebury called attention to the distinction made by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners in the distribution of the common fund between benefices in public and in private patronage, and moved that in the opinion of the House the necessity of the case and not the incidents of patronage should be their main consideration, as laid down by the directing statute.—The Earl of Chichester said the principle adopted by the Commissioners in the distribution of the common fund was in strict accordance with the Acts of Parliament, and he did not think they could substitute any others with advantage.—Lord Portman was of opinion that the utmost vigilance should be exercised by Parliament in looking after the commission, which was not only too costly but too large and unwieldy to be manageable.—After some remarks from the Earl of Harrowby in defence of the Commissioners, the motion was withdrawn.—The Thames Embankment (North Side) Bill passed through committee. The African Slave Trade Treaty Bill and the Regimental Debts, &c., Bill were read a second time. The Prison Ministers Bill, the Bleaching and Dyeing Works Act Amendment Bill, and the Local Government Supplemental Bill were read a third time and passed.—Earl de Grey, in moving the second reading of the Volunteers Bill, explained the nature of its provisions, and added that the condition of the Volunteer force at the present moment was most satisfactory.—The Duke of Richmond thought that several of the clauses of the Bill would require amendment in committee.—Lord Hardinge approved of the clause which gives a commanding officer power to dismiss at will, on the ground that it was necessary in order to maintain discipline.—Lord Melville complained that some of the provisions of the Bill were of an arbitrary character, and gave powers which were not exercised either in the regular army or the militia.—Lord Truro, on the whole, approved of the provisions of the measure. The Bill was then read a second time.

Tuesday.—Case of Mr. Bishop.—Earl Russell, in reply to the Marquis of Normanby, stated that the Italian Government had decided not to pardon Mr. Bishop in the present state of Southern Italy, but would release him at the first fitting opportunity.—The Earl of Derby gave notice that on Tuesday next he should call attention to the proclamation said to have been issued at Corfu in regard to the Cession of the Ionian Islands to Greece.—Earl Russell doubted the authenticity of the proclamation.—The Duke of Newcastle also warned Lord Derby against too implicit a credence in the proclamation. The Brazilian Difficulty.—The Earl of Malmesbury read a letter from Mr. Christie, regarding remarks made by him on Friday last.—The Innkeeper's Liability Bill, and the Militia Pay Bill was read a second time. The Security from Violence Bill passed through committee.—The Earl of Donoughmore called attention to the report of the evidence on the West Hartlepool Harbour and Railway Bill, and moved that the report and evidence be referred to the Attorney-General, with directions to inquire into the alleged illegal conduct of the late directors of the company, and to institute proceedings against such persons as in his opinion could be convicted of illegal and fraudulent conduct. He said that the directors were charged with having raised sums of money in excess of their borrowing powers from 1856 to 1860, and had never presented a true statement of their accounts to the shareholders. This having been reported by a committee, it was incumbent on the House to take further steps, and as chairman of that committee he brought the matter before the House. He also moved that a select committee should be appointed to inquire and report as to what legislative measures are desirable for the purpose of restraining directors of railway companies from exceeding the limits of the borrowing powers fixed by their Act of Parliament.—The Earl of Airlie moved an addition to the resolution, extending the inquiry to the evasions of the Acts requiring a certain amount of capital to be subscribed before the borrowing powers came into operation.—The Lord Chancellor stated that the Government had determined to take immediate proceedings in the matter, and he had given instructions to that effect to the Solicitors of the Treasury. With this explanation he hoped the motion would be withdrawn.—Lord Ravensworth presented a petition from Mr Ralph Ward Jackson, vindicating himself from the charges which had been brought against him.—Lord Donoughmore withdrew his first resolution, and incorporated Lord Airlie's addition in his second motion for a Select Committee. After some remarks from Lord Overstone and Lord Stanley of Alderley, in favour of inquiry, the resolution for the Select Committee, as amended, was agreed to.—Lord Chelmsford then moved that the Bill of the Company be referred to the Select Committee, with a view of affording relief to the bondholders and shareholders, without exempting those persons who had been implicated in the illegal proceedings.—Earl Granville said that as it was a case of hardship, he would not oppose the motion.—Lord Redesdale also expressed his concurrence. The motion was then agreed to. Overworked Milliners and Dressmakers.—The Earl of Shaftesbury called attention to the recent melancholy death of Miss Walkley, the seamstress, caused by overwork and unfit sleeping apartments. He asked whether the Government were prepared to introduce a measure for the ventilation and sanitary regulation of the workrooms in which seamstresses were employed.—Earl Granville was not prepared to state that the Government intended to introduce any Bill on the subject; but if Lord Shaftesbury himself would bring in a Bill, it would meet with full consideration.

Thursday.—The Duke of Somerset, in reply to Lord Carnarvon, stated that the Admiralty had abandoned their objections to the New Milford Docks Bill, and that there would be no opposition on their part. The Waywardens Contract Bill was read a second time. The Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act Amendment Bill passed through committee. The Drainage and Improvement of Land (Ireland) Bill was read a second time, and ordered to be referred to a Select Committee. The African Slave Trade Treaty Bill passed through committee. The Volunteers Bill passed through committee, after Clauses 35 and 36, relating to the compulsory acquisition of land for rifle ranges, to which the Duke of Richmond and the Earl of Derby objected, had been struck out. The Thames Embankment (North Side) Bill was read a third time and passed.

Friday.—The Regimental Debts, &c., Bill passed through Committee. The Innkeepers' Liability Bill passed through Committee. Bethlehem Hospital.—The Earl of Shaftesbury moved for several returns relating to the removal of the hospital. 1. The annual amount of the revenue during the last ten years administered by the authorities of Bethlehem. 2. Amount received by the hospital from Parliamentary grants. 3. Average number of patients in each year for ten years, apart from criminal patients. 4. Total number of governors of the hospital. 5. Number of special meetings since January, 1863, in reference to the removal of Bethlehem, and number of governors present on each occasion. 6. The questions proposed at such meetings, and the divisions taken.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Friday.—Poland.—Mr. Scully inquired if it were true that the Russian General Mouravieff had issued an ordinance proclaiming that the penalty of the knout would be inflicted on all Polish ladies dressed in mourning.—Mr. Layard replied that he wished he could deny the statement, but that the Government had not received any official information on the subject.—On the motion for going into committee of supply, Mr. Hubbard called the attention of the House to the state of the Law for Rating to the Relief of the Poor, and moved for returns in connection with the Union Assessment Committee Act.—Mr. Villiers admitted that there were apparent anomalies in the law, but he did not think further legislation necessary. The motion was withdrawn.—Mr. Liddell called attention to the report of the Royal Commission on Greenwich Hospital, presented to Parliament in May, 1860, and inquired what were the intentions of the Government in respect to carrying out the recommendations of that commission, either by a bill to amend the law relating to the hospital or by regulations of the Board of Admiralty.—Mr. Stansfeld said he rejoiced that this important question had been brought to the attention of the House. He agreed that the report of the commission of 1860 was a most valuable document, and many of its recommendations had guided the Board of Admiralty; but he could not undertake to say that the Board were prepared to accept, in all their details, every one of the suggestions in that able report. They intended, however, to make the hospital more conformable with the intentions of the founders, to extend its benefits to the wives, widows, and families of pensioners, and to reduce the expenditure. In conclusion he said that he intended to bring in a Bill upon the subject in the course of a few days.—Sir J. Pakington said that reforms were necessary in the management of the hospital, and that the growing expenditure called for inquiry and correction, but he believed that this might be done without legislation, full power being in the hands of the Board of Admiralty.—Sir J. Hay, as one of the Commissioners of 1860, adhered to their recommendations and trusted that, if legislation was necessary to alter the government of the Hospital, a bill would be introduced without delay; or, if not, that the Board of Admiralty would lose no time in effecting reforms.—After some remarks by Mr. Briscoe, Mr. Angerstein, Mr. Ingham, and Lord C. Paget, the subject dropped. At midnight the House went into Committee of Supply pro formâ. On the order for going into Committee on the Harwich Harbour Bill, Mr. Clay objected to the principle involved in the measure, of expending public money on one harbour to the prejudice of others, and moved that the Bill be committed that day three months.—Mr. M. Gibson explained that, unless steps were taken to prevent the formation of a bar at the entrance of the harbour, it would soon become useless. The motion was ultimately withdrawn, and the Bill passed through committee. The Militia Pay Bill and the Charitable Uses Bill were read a third time and passed. The Watchmen in Towns (Ireland) Bill was withdrawn.—Mr. Collins moved that the Attorney-General for Ireland be instructed to prosecute Mr. J. D. Barbour, Mr. R. Barbour, and Mr. T. Barbour for bribery, treating, and undue influence at the late election for Lisburn.—Mr. Baines moved the adjournment of the House, on the ground that, although he was prepared to concur in the motion, the subject was much too serious to be considered at two o'clock in the morning. On a division the motion for adjournment was negatived by 142 to 19.—Mr. Collins then moved a formal resolution that the Messrs Barbour be prosecuted.—Mr. Evans, chairman of the Lisburn Election Committee, moved as an amendment that the name of Mr. T. Barbour, whom there was no chance of convicting, be omitted from the resolution.—The Attorney-General concurred, and after some discussion the motion, as amended, was agreed to.

Monday.—In answer to Lord Hotham, Lord Palmerston said that he intended to postpone the motion for the purchase of the Exhibition Building to Thursday week. Case of Sergeant-Major Lilley.—The Marquis of Hartington stated, in answer to Mr. Coningham, that Colonel Crawley, of the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons, would be recalled from India in order to be tried by court-martial in this country, and that this proceeding had received the approval of the Judge Advocate General.—Mr. Layard stated, in reply to Mr. Baines, that the Commercial Treaty with Italy had not yet been signed, and that Mr. Mallet, who had been entrusted with the negotiation, had returned from Turin for further instructions. The Knout in Poland.—In reply to a question relating to the alleged order of General Mouravieff subjecting Polish ladies to the knout, Mr. Layard said that the Russian Government had declared the order to be a fabrication, but he felt bound to say that great cruelties had been committed.—Lord Palmerston also strongly condemned the manner in which hostilities had been carried on on both sides.—Lord Palmerston moved the postponement of the orders of the day until after the motion on the Affairs of Poland, of which Mr. Hennessy had given notice, had been disposed of.—Mr. S. A. Beaumont appealed to Mr. Hennessy not to proceed with his motion, on the ground that the House was not as yet in possession of all the information which it required on the subject, and that consequently the discussion would be premature.—Mr. Kinglake and Lord Enfield also urged the postponement of the discussion, on the ground that the House was not in a condition to discuss the question. The House then divided on Lord Palmerston's motion, which was negatived by 165 to 110.—Mr Horsman protested against what had just taken place, as novel, irregular, and unparliamentary. The Prime Minister had made a contract in the name and with the consent of the House, and it ought to have been respected. Mr. Beaumont's motion was a surprise and a breach of faith, alike injurious to the Government and treasonable to the public interest.—Lord Enfield denied the right of Mr. Horsman to question the action of independent members.—Lord R. Cecil, Mr. Coningham, and Mr. Bentinck deprecated the course which had been adopted by the House as calculated to shake confidence in the arrangements made by those who were supposed to have the control of the public business.—Mr. Newdegate did not approve of the House taking the control of foreign affairs into its own hands, and opposed further discussion.—Lord Palmerston said that he himself was taken entirely by surprise both by the motion, and the result of the division. With regard to the motion of Mr. Hennessy, he was bound to say that, although the discussion would not in his opinion be injurious to the public service, an address to the Crown would render negotiation altogether impossible. It would, he thought, be desirable to postpone the discussion until time had been given to Russia to answer the recommendations forwarded to her on the 17th of the present month by Great Britain, France, and Austria. The substance of these recommendations were—1. A general and complete amnesty; 2. National representation on the principle established by Alexander I. in 1815, in conformity with the Treaty of Vienna; 3. That Poles alone should be appointed to public offices, and that an administration should be formed which would command the confidence of the people; 4. Full liberty of conscience in religious matters; 5. That the Polish language should be used in all public transactions and in the education of the people; and—6. A regular system of recruiting, so as to prevent a recurrence of the proceedings which had led to the present revolution. Her Majesty's Government had also urged upon Russia the cessation of hostilities. He was quite prepared to give Mr. Hennessy every facility for renewing his motion, but he still remained of opinion that the proposed discussion was premature.—Mr. Disraeli feared that the propositions described by Lord Palmerston would, if adopted, leave matters very much as they were before. They were in his opinion undistinguished by prescience, sagacity, or firmness, and unlikely to lead to any satisfactory result. Russia in all probability would not accept them; but even if she did, their effect would be merely to conjure up a phantom of Polish liberty fraught with new difficulties and fresh complications.—Mr. Hennessy expressed himself willing to defer to the opinion of the House, and not to renew the subject until the answer of Russia had been received. The London, &c., Diocese Bill passed through committee. The Mutiny East India Act Repeal Bill was read a third time and passed. The Passenger Act Amendment Bill and the Thames Embankment (South Side) Bill passed through committee. The Sir Robert Hitcham's Charity, the Ruthen Charities, and the Inclosure (No. 2) Bill passed through committee. The Local Government Supplemental Bill was read a third time and passed. In committee on the Poor Removal Bill, Mr. C. Turner moved an amendment to clause 8 to limit the power of removal to the case of the children of English or Scotch parents, or of Irish parents, having acquired a settlement in England or Scotland, or being irremovable therefrom by reason of length of residence. After some discussion the amendment was carried by 73 to 43.—Mr. Maguire and Mr. Hennessy declared that the amendment destroyed the principle of the measure.—Mr. Herbert, by whom it was introduced, said he should like to consider the course he should pursue, and for that purpose moved that the Chairman report progress. The motion was agreed to, and the House resumed.—Lord Raynham obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Nuisances Removal Act for England, 1855, with respect to the seizure of diseased and unwholesome meat; a Bill to prohibit unqualified persons from the Practice of Midwifery; and a Bill for the Prevention of Accidental Poisoning.

Tuesday.—The Thames Embankment (South Side) Bill, as amended, was considered and agreed to. The Vaccination (Scotland) Bill passed through committee. The Statute Labour Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Bill, after some discussion, was withdrawn. State of Ireland.—Mr. Maguire moved an address to her Majesty, praying her to issue a royal commission to inquire into and report upon the state of the agricultural classes of Ireland, and to suggest such improvement in the relations between landlord and tenant as might seem necessary and expedient. He said that the agrarian disturbances and distressed condition of Ireland were sometimes attributed to the religion of the majority of the people, and at others to the existence of a religious establishment which was the church of the minority; but in his opinion the evil was rather to be traced to the present state of the law of landlord and tenant; and the object he had in view was to do for the Irish tenantry that which had already been done in this country, and provide security for the enjoyment by the tenant of the improvements he might have effected, and the adoption of an equitable law to induce him to put forth his energies in the cultivation of the soil.—Mr. Bagwell seconded the motion, which was supported by Dr. Brady, and opposed by Sir E. Grogan.—Mr. Roebuck said that the term "tenant right" suggested the idea of taking from a man the power over his own property. He would allow the landlord and tenant to make what contract they pleased; but if there was no contract, he would allow the law to step in and say what the outgoing tenant was to receive and what the incoming tenant was to pay.—Sir G. Colthurst argued that the law of 1860, referred to in the motion, went far enough, and that it could not have been carried farther without affecting the rights of property.—Sir R. Peel admitted the importance of the question, but contended that not a single argument had been adduced to justify the House in accepting the motion of the hon. member for Dungarvon, and disturbing the existing relations between landlord and tenant. There was no doubt that distress prevailed in Ireland, and that the land tenure there was not satisfactory; but he protested against the Irish people being told that it produced their ruin. The proper way of dealing with a people who were suffering from the dispensations of Providence was to endeavour to awaken the spirit of hope in their breasts by showing them that returning prosperity would replace them in that position which their energy, industry, and perseverance entitled them to occupy. He regretted that the Bill of 1860 had proved inoperative, and he could only say as regards the future, that he would not be indisposed when the proper time arrived to consider whether further legislation in the same direction might not be attempted.—The O'Donoghue laid the whole charge of the misery which afflicted the Irish people to the door of the British Government.—Mr. O'Reilly supported the motion.—Mr. Cardwell reminded the House that Mr. Maguire had not made any practical suggestion for the remedy of the evils of which he complained. The Bill of 1860 had, it was true, hitherto proved a dead letter, but he believed that when returning prosperity visited the country the tenantry of Ireland would not fail to avail themselves of it.—Mr. O'Reilly, Mr. Blake, and Mr. Scully supported the motion, Mr. Packe opposed it.—Mr. Hennessy said that the Government had lamentably failed in their attempt to legislate for Ireland, and asserted that it did not command the confidence of any portion of the people but a few antediluvian Whigs and energetic place-hunters.—Lord Palmerston said the British Government had done all it could to secure property in Ireland, and he had no hesitation in saying that it was quite as secure, and that life was more secure in that country than in England, because there were not committed in Ireland those social crimes which, he regretted to say, too often disfigured the character of the people in England. The evils of Ireland in past days were to be traced in great part to the system of middlemen, to a redundant population, and to the minute division of holdings. He was happy to say that those evils had been greatly diminished, and that there was reason to believe that the material prosperity of the country would be restored on the return of productive harvests. In his opinion the true policy to be adopted in reference to the tenure of land was to give full liberty to the landlord and to the tenant to settle their own affairs without legislative interference. Speaking as a landlord, he would ask what right had any tenant to come to him and say that it was his intention to effect certain improvements on his land, whether his landlord wished it or not? He regretted that the Act of 1860 had not been carried further. Its intention was to enable the tenant to make improvements on his holdings; but what improvements could a tenant with 10 or 15 acres be expected to make? Why, the only improvement in his power was to dig up the stones, and render the land available for the plough.

After a few words from Colonel GREVILLE in support of the motion, the House divided, when the motion was negatived by 128 to 49.—Sir F. KELLY moved for a select committee to consider the effect of the Malt Duties on the cultivation and price of Barley, and upon the manufacture and price of malt liquors; also on the application of malt to the feeding of cattle and sheep.—Colonel BARTTELOT seconded the motion, which was also supported by Mr. COBBETT.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he was quite prepared to accede to the appointment of a committee. The motion was then agreed to. —Mr. TITE moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the improvement of the approaches to the New Palace of Westminster.—Mr. COWPER did not object; but a division was called for, when the motion was carried by 40 to 15. The other orders of the day were then disposed of.

WEDNESDAY.—Mr. BOUVERIE moved that the order of the day for the second reading of the Uniformity Act Amendment Bill be discharged, on the ground that there was no prospect of getting it through Parliament this session. He said that his object in bringing the measure forward had been very much misrepresented. He did not wish to injure either the Church or the universities, but to improve and strengthen them.—Sir W. HEATHCOTE and Mr. WALPOLE, on the part of Oxford and Cambridge, referred to the petitions presented from those universities as showing the very strong feeling which existed against the Bill.—Mr. HADFIELD deplored the necessity of withdrawing a most useful measure.—Mr. NEWDEGATE thanked Mr. Bouverie for withdrawing the Bill. —Mr. GÖSCHEN did not regard the measure as an assault upon the stronghold of the Church, but rather in the light of an auxiliary, for it would enable her to fight her enemies with a freer hand.—Mr. R. MILLS denied that the Dissenters were animated with a desire to pull down the Church.—Mr. HENLEY said that all the ability of the universities was in favour of the Bill. It was always the cry of a minority that all the talent and all the good sense were on their side.—After a few words from Mr. MONSELL and Mr. DUNLOP, the order for the second reading was discharged and the Bill was withdrawn. The Misappropriation by Servants Bill was read a second time. The adjourned debate on Mr. DALGLISH's motion for a select committee on the Board of Admiralty was resumed by Sir H. WILLOUGHBY, who expressed his opinion that at the present period of the session it would be useless to appoint a committee on so large a subject as Admiralty reform.—Sir J. HAY was of opinion that something should be done to secure if possible unity of action and individual responsibility in the 13 departments of the Admiralty. —Mr. C. BERKELEY opposed the motion, on the ground that there had already been sufficient inquiry.—Mr. STANSFELD said that the First Lord of the Admiralty was responsible for the conduct of the heads of all the departments which were in constant communication with him, and he did not believe any First Lord would ever attempt in Parliament to disclaim that responsibility. He did not, he said, wish to rest the defence of the Admiralty on broad generalities, but he contended that a great deal had been done to carry out the recommendations of the select committee, and to comply with the requirements of the House. The finance and building departments had been placed on an improved and satisfactory footing, and other reforms were in progress.—Sir J. PAKINGTON thought that the real question was not what individual reforms had been introduced into separate departments, but whether the present constitution of the Board of Admiralty was satisfactory, and such as the House could approve of.—Sir F. BARING recommended the withdrawal of the motion.—After a few words from Mr. HENLEY and Sir M. PETO, Mr. DALGLISH said that in accordance with the general wish he would withdraw his motion, but gave notice that he intended to renew it next session.—Mr. COX moved the second reading of the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act Amendment Bill, which he said would not in any way interfere with the enjoyment by the public of Hampstead Heath.—Lord ENFIELD moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read a third time that day three months, on the ground that the object of the measure was to enable Sir Thomas Wilson to build over a portion of Hampstead Heath, and that it was not expedient to legislate in a public act for the benefit of a private individual.—Mr. AYRTON and Sir M. PETO supported the Bill; Mr. HANBURY, Mr. ALCOCK, and Sir J. V. SHELLEY opposed it. On a division the second reading was negatived by 78 to 24. The Bill was therefore lost. The Thames Embankment (South Side) Bill was read a third time and passed. Leave was given to bring in a Bill to continue the Poor Law Board, and a Bill to make perpetual an Act to amend the law relating to Loan Societies.

THURSDAY.—Sir G. GREY stated that in consequence of the absence of Lord Palmerston on account of indisposition, the Vote for Fortifications and Works would be postponed until Thursday next; and when it was disposed of, the vote for the purchase of the Exhibition Building at South Kensington would be submitted. —Mr. BENTINCK inquired whether any precedent had been found for directing that the Court Martial on Colonel Crawley should be held in this country, a course which amounted to a censure on the Commander-in-Chief and the highest military authorities in India.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON replied that he had not been able to find any precedent, but he did not consider that the course intended to be pursued implied any censure upon the authorities in India.—Mr. DISRAELI asked who was to pay the expenses incidental to bringing witnesses from India; the trial of Col. Crawley might be quite as protracted as that of Warren Hastings.—Sir D. EVANS suggested that the better course would be to order the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons home, as the country would not be satisfied unless the inquiry took place in England. —Sir G. GREY said that, as the Commander-in-Chief in England had ordered the inquiry, all officers whose attendance might be required as witnesses would be considered as on duty, and would receive full pay during their absence from India.—Mr BENTINCK and Sir J. FERGUSON disapproved of the course pursued by the Government in ordering the inquiry to be conducted in England.—Sir F. SMITH thought that no other course would satisfy public opinion. In answer to a question from The O'Donoghue, Mr. DILLWYN said that he was prepared to withdraw his motion on the subject of Religious Endowments in Ireland, in favour of the motion on the same subject of which notice had been given by Mr. B. Osborne. The order of the day for the resumption of the debate was then discharged. Brazils.—In reply to Mr. BRIGHT, Mr. LAYARD said that the award of the King of the Belgians, in reference to the misunderstanding with Brazil, was received on Wednesday, and would be laid upon the table, together with the "case" as submitted to his Majesty. On the order for going into Committee of Supply, General PEEL directed attention to the receipt and expenditure for Army and Militia Services for the past year, and addressed inquiries to the Government relative to the expenditure on account of native Indian troops employed in China.—Mr. T. J. BARING explained the causes of excess in certain items, and said that the excess had been properly paid out of the vote of credit for China, the transactions being brought to the notice of the House in the Appropriation Act.—Mr. H, VIVIAN alluded to the recommendations contained in the Report of the Committee on Small Arms, and asked what action her Majesty's Government proposed to take thereon.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that when the Enfield rifle was adopted for the Government pattern it was the best small arm then in existence, and it was still a useful and serviceable weapon. Experience of the small bore Whitworth rifle had, however, determined the War-office to give it a trial, and they had ordered it to be supplied to the Rifle Brigade and the 60th Rifles; 2000 breech-loading rifles had also been ordered for distribution among the troops in all parts of the world; not for actual service, but for trial under every possible variety of condition and circumstance. The House then went into Committee of Supply, and the vote of 236,016*l.* for Education in Ireland was considered, and agreed to after considerable debate. The votes for the National Gallery, the National Picture Gallery, and the Settlement at Lagos, also had a long discussion, but were ultimately agreed to. Several votes for civil establishments abroad were also agreed to, and at midnight the Chairman reported progress. In committee on Public Works, Manufacturing Districts, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved that the Commissioners of the Treasury be authorised to issue, out of the Consolidated Fund an amount not exceeding 1,200,000*l.* upon security of local rates, for facilitating the execution of public works in certain manufacturing districts. The balances in the Exchequer were in excess of the demands upon it, and although a million of Exchequer Bonds and a similar amount of Exchequer Bills had lately been paid off, there were still ample funds out of which the proposed advances could be made. The motion was agreed to. The Newcastle-upon-Tyne (St. Mary Magdalen Hospital) Bill passed through committee. Sir Robert Hitcham's Charity Bill, the Ruthin Charities Bill, the Walmer Vesting Bill, and the Postmaster General's Sale of Lands Bill, were read a third time and passed. The Police and Improvement (Scotland) (Provisional Order) Bill was read a second time. The Howth Harbour Bill passed through committee.

FRIDAY.—Public Works (Manufacturing Districts) Advances Bill.—Mr. VILLIERS brought up the report on this Bill, when the resolution empowering 1,200,000*l.* to be devoted to the purposes of the Bill was agreed to. The House then went into committee on the Bill, and various minor amendments were introduced into several of the clauses. The remaining clauses were agreed to, with the exception of Clause 11, which was struck out, with several amendments and additions.

Metropolis and its Vicinity.

ELECTION OF SHERIFFS.—Wednesday being Midsummer day the liverymen of London were convened in common hall to elect Sheriffs of London and Middlesex for the ensuing year. The Common-Serjeant read the names of six gentlemen eligible in rotation for the office:—Aldermen Dakin, Besley, Gibbons, and Waterlow, Mr. H. R. Nissen, and Mr. Richard Mitchell, and a seventh was put in nomination in the person of Mr. Thomas Cave. It is usual to have one alderman elected to the office; but on this occasion the ordinary course was departed from, and on a show of hands the choice of the liverymen fell on Mr. Nissen and Mr. Cave, who were accordingly declared to be duly elected.

THE PALACE OF WESTMINSTER.—The following is the thirteenth and last report of the Commissioners on the Fine Arts:—

"We, the Commissioners appointed by your Majesty under a Commission bearing date the 22d day of November, 1841, for the purpose of inquiring whether advantage might not be taken of the rebuilding of your Majesty's Palace at Westminster —wherein your Majesty's Parliament is wont to assemble—for the purpose of promoting and encouraging the fine arts in your Majesty's United Kingdom, and in what manner an object of so much importance might be most effectually promoted, beg leave to submit to your Majesty a report respecting the progress of the works recommended by us to be undertaken, and, at the same time, to bring under your Majesty's notice the position in which the commission is at present placed. Bearing in mind the warm interest which our late chairman, his Royal Highness the Prince Consort, at all times took in the labours of the commission and in the progress of works undertaken under its direction, we should have deemed it our duty to proceed to the election of another chairman, difficult, nay impossible, as we should feel it to be to supply in any adequate degree that combination of knowledge in art, of tried experience in business, and of high personal authority, by which his Royal Highness was distinguished. But we feel ourselves relieved from the necessity of this most difficult selection, since, in our opinion, the term of our prescribed duties has now arrived. The whole scheme of decoration for the Palace of Westminster has been considered and decided; and, trusting that the series of works now in progress can be carried on to their completion, it does not appear to us that the commission need be continued to superintend the execution. In our 12th report, dated the 25th of February, 1861, we entered so fully into the history of the labours of the commission from the first that it will be sufficient on the present occasion to specify the works that have been completed since the date of that report, and to submit our view as to the extent to which various series of works, both in painting and sculpture, now begun should be continued. We have the pleasure to report that Daniel Maclise, R.A., has brought to a successful and highly satisfactory termination the large wall-painting, executed in the water-glass method, representing the meeting of Wellington and Blucher after the battle of Waterloo; and that he has already begun the corresponding painting representing the Death of Nelson. Those works, measuring each 45 feet in length, occupy the principal compartments in the Royal Gallery. Referring in our last report to the vast scheme of decoration proposed for the Royal Gallery, we observed that while so extensive a plan cannot be completed in the lifetime of one artist, it would be desirable that the necessarily partial execution should so conducted as that the works when interrupted, should, as far as possible, present a symmetrical arrangement. On this principle we recommended that the two large compartments facing each other in the Royal Gallery should be completed first. Anticipating the same industry on the part of Mr. Maclise as he has hitherto manifested, we by no means recommend the limitation of his labours even to the two vast surfaces referred to. On the contrary, believing that a painter combining so much skill with so much energy is especially qualified for such undertakings, we recommend that, assuming willingness on his part, such other portions of the Royal Gallery be subsequently intrusted to him, as may, according to the principle above explained, still produce a satisfactory arrangement and a relative completeness. In the apartment called the Queen's Robing Room, William Dyce, R.A., has, since the date of our last report, been occasionally employed on the largest of the frescoes belonging to the series of subjects he has undertaken to treat in that place from the legend of King Arthur. The stipulated remuneration for the entire series having been long since received by him, we have only to express our earnest hope that he will see the importance of prosecuting the work with greater assiduity; more especially since his exclusive occupation of the apartment must, as we have observed in our last report, occasion great inconvenience to your Majesty. We next come to the decoration of another apartment—the Peers' Robing Room—which is also required for the meeting of one of the standing committees of the House of Lords. Here the general subject is 'Justice on Earth and its Development in Law and Judgment.' John Rogers Herbert, R.A., who has undertaken the series, and who has prepared sketches for several of the subject, has nearly completed a large wall-painting, representing 'Moses bringing down the Tables of the Law to the Israelites.' The delay that has taken place in the execution of this, the first of the series, has been chiefly in consequence of frequent experiments by the artist in the water-glass method of painting. We are informed, however, that the Committee of the Lords finds its business at present most seriously obstructed, and we think that, as Mr. Herbert now appears to be satisfied as to the technical process to be adopted, there is no reason why in future he should not proceed much more rapidly. The subjects proposed for the Peers' and Commons Corridors are illustrative of that great contest which commenced with the meeting of the Long Parliament and terminated in 1689. Charles West Cope, R.A., who has undertaken the Peers' Corridor, has prosecuted his work with equal ability and industry. Five out of the eight paintings of which the series is to consist have been already finished, and the designs for the remaining three have been approved by us, The work last completed—'Basing House defended by the Cavaliers against the Parliamentary army"—has been satisfactorily executed in the water-glass method. The Commons' Corridor, consisting of the same number of compartments, has been allotted to Edward Mathew Ward, R.A., whose name is so highly distinguished by his able treatment of subjects from modern history. Four of the paintings, executed in fresco, have been completed, and a sketch for a fifth has been approved. In sculpture, the works now in progress consist of statues of British Sovereigns in chronological order. Twelve of those statues (to be executed in white marble), from James I. to William IV., are proposed to be placed in the Royal Gallery; commissions have been given for six, and the completion of the remaining six may be regarded as indispensable In our last report we stated that the whole series of statues of British Sovereigns proposed to be placed in the Royal Gallery and its immediate precincts admits of being subdividd into four distinct classes, occupying respectively the Royal Gallery, the Queen's Robing Room, the Vestibule, and the Lower Landing-place. Should the series be continued beyond the Royal Gallery, we recommend that the five statues intended for the Queens' Robing Room should be undertaken next. The remaining statues in the Vestibule and Lower Landing-place, to be executed in metal, would be of much less cost. The above may be said to comprehend all the works that are in progress. In some instances—for example, in the series of statues and in the series of paintings in the Royal Gallery and Peers' Robing Room—we have not presumed to define how far any of the works should or should not be deferred. In the other cases—the Queen's Robing Room and the two Corridors—it is obviously desirable that they should be completed without interruption. Among future undertakings, requiring less time, may possibly be included the re-painting of some of the earlier experimental frescoes in the upper Waiting Hall. The partial decay of some of those works induced us to appoint a committee in the last year to inquire into the causes of the deterioration. The members of that committee, assisted by an able chemist, after careful and repeated inspections of the paintings, not only in the Upper Waiting Hall, but throughout the building, having examined various artists and other competent witnesses, but up to this time they have not been able to arrive at any satisfactory result. With regard to to the amount that may for a time be required to meet the cost of works in progress, although there has been for some years an understanding that a vote for 4000*l*. would be annually proposed to Parliament for carrying on the objects of the commission, it does not appear probable that so much will be required hereafter. The estimate which we have this year submitted to the Lords of the Treasury to be proposed, with their approval, to Parliament, amounts to 3700*l*. We have included in the appendix, a detailed statement of the works now in progress for which further payments will be required. We cannot conclude this our final report without desiring to offer our testimony to the professional skill, as well as the activity, the zeal, and the uprightness with which our secretary, Sir Charles Eastlake, has, during a period of 21 years, fulfilled an important and sometimes an invidious task. We know that Sir Charles Eastlake's services were fully appreciated by his Royal Highness the Prince Consort, and we venture to hope that some regard may be shown to those long and meritorious services.—STANHOPE (in the chair), NEWCASTLE, PALMERSTON, RUSSELL, WILLOUGHBY DE ERESBY, EVERSLEY, LYNDHURST, JOHN EVELYN DENISON (Speaker), JOHN MANNERS, LLANOVER, WILLIAM COWPER.—Palace of Westminster, March 11, 1861."

BETHLEHEM HOSPITAL.—A meeting of the Governors of Bethlehem Hospital, the largest that has occurred for years, was held on Monday, to consider a letter from the Secretary of State for the Home Department, enclosing one from the Commissioners in Lunacy, stating their views in reference to the proposed purchase of Bethlehem Hospital by the Governors of St Thomas's, and the removal of the former institution to a suitable locality in the neighbourhood of London. Alderman Copeland, M.P., President of Bethlehem, took the chair. The letters of Sir George Grey and of the Commissioners in Lunacy were first read. The letter of the Commissioners said they had watched with much interest the discussion in reference to the purchase of Bethlehem Hospital by the Governors of St. Thomas's, and the removal of Bethlehem to a healthy and suitable locality. They had earnestly hoped that the protracted negotiations which had so long occupied the attention of the governors of both these important and wealthy charities would before this have resulted in an arrangement so desirable, and recommended by such obvious considerations of the great benefits which would thence be derived by the unfortunate objects of the respective institutions. Before it might be too late, they urged upon the Governors of Bethlehem Hospital, through the Home Secretary, the expediency and duty of availing themselves of the present favourable opportunity to give the insane the advantages of pure air and cheerful scenery, so essential to health, mental and bodily. It had for many years been the opinion of the Commissioners that the site of Bethlehem, as respected its limited extent and situation, in the centre of a dense and rapidly increasing population, was most unsuited to the care and treatment of the insane, for whose sole benefit the administration of its ample property and income was intrusted to the Governors. The Commissioners dwelt upon these points in detail, and hoped that the new hospital would be built in the country, and upon a plan embodying all the improvements suggested by modern experience and the advanced state of science. The letter of Sir George Grey, in forwarding this letter of the Commissioners to the Governors of Bethlehem, expressed his concurrence in their views, and a hope that the Governors would carefully consider the subject of the unfitness of the present site and buildings of Bethlehem for the purposes of the institution, and not allow the opportunity now offered of removing the hospital to a suitable locality to escape. The Clerk to the Governors having read a number of documents describing the negotiations which had taken place between the authorities of the two hospitals, Mr. Johnson, the treasurer, read the draught of a letter he had prepared in answer to the Home Secretary, appending to it letters from Drs. Hood and Lawrence in opposition to that of the Commissioners, and in defence of the present site and buildings for the treatment of the insane. The Right Hon. R. C. Hamilton thought it would be undesirable to come at once to a decision on a matter so important, and moved as an amendment that the treasurer's letter, with the accompanying ones, be printed and circulated among the members, and an early day be appointed for their consideration. Alderman Phillips said that the question was simply one of money, and that the Governors of Bethlehem were disposed to fall in with the proposal of those of St. Thomas if the latter would pay the price that was asked. Alderman Sidney said that the Governors of Bethlehem had now an opportunity, such as might never occur again, of doing a great public service in the interest both of the sick poor and the insane of the metropolis, and he counselled them to avail themselves of it while the chance remained. After some remarks by Mr. Harwood, Sir Walter Stirling, and the Chairman, Mr. Hamilton's amendment was put and negatived. A long discussion ensued, in which Mr. A. Hankey, Dr. Webster, Mr. Thompson Hankey, M.P.; Mr. Williams, M.P.; Mr. Briscoe, M.P.; Mr. H. Pownall, Mr. Beck, and Alderman Waterlow took part, and after two further amendments had been negatived, the consideration of the reply to the Home Secretary was adjourned to a future meeting, and it was resolved that the President, Treasurer, and five of the Governors of Bethlehem and St. Thomas's Hospital should meet in the meantime for a preliminary discussion.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL.—A General Court of the Governors of this hospital was held on Tuesday, when it was resolved on the motion of Mr. Tite, M.P., seconded by Alderman Finnis, to appoint a deputation, as suggested by the authorities of Bethlehem Hospital, to meet a similar deputation from their body, for the purpose of ascertaining whether it is probable that an arrangement can be made for obtaining the Bethlehem site on terms mutually advantageons. It was also resolved that the deputation should consist of the President, the Treasurer, Mr. Tite, M.P., Mr. Deputy Elliott, and Dr. Leeson. Previous to this meeting a deputation from the grand committee of the Hospital had had an interview with the Thames Embankment Committee of the Metropolitan Board of Works at their offices in Spring Gardens on the subject of a site for the new hospital. The deputation was introduced by Mr. Tite, M.P., who explained the anxiety of the committee to obtain as a site for the hospital a piece of ground on the Surrey side of Westminster Bridge, and immediately opposite the New Houses of Parliament, which is about to be reclaimed from the river, and may be rendered available by the proposed embankment of the south side of the Thames. The Board of Works Committee discussed the subject with the deputation in a kindly and accommodating spirit. The whole matter, they said, was then under the consideration of the Parliamentary Committee, but as the medical staff of the hospital was in favour of that particular site, they would do all in their power to give effect to the wishes of the deputation, and so endeavour to solve the difficult problem as to a suitable position for the reconstruction of this great metropolitan institution in the midst of a dense population. The site suggested would also commend itself to those who had regard to ventilation, by being open to the river on one side and having a great thoroughfare at the back leading from London Bridge, by way of the York Road, to Lambeth and Vauxhall.

LOSS OF ANOTHER CANADIAN STEAMER.—The Montreal Steam Company's mail steamer, Norwegian, 1800 tons, which left Liverpool for Montreal on the 5th inst., was lost on the night of the 14th inst. on St. Paul's Island, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The mails, passengers, and crew were saved. The Norwegian was sister ship of the ill-fated Anglo-Saxon, which was lost about two months since off Cape Race, and is the seventh steamer the company has lost since its formation.

ST. BOTOLPH, BISHOPSGATE.—The rectory of St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, vacant by the death of the Rev. Dr. Russell, has been conferred by the Bishop of London upon the Rev. William Rogers, M.A., incumbent of St. Thomas, Charterhouse, Chaplain in ordinary to the Queen, and Prebendary of St. Paul's. The living was in the first instance offered to the Rev. F. G. Blomfield, rector of St. Andrew Undershaft, and son of the late Bishop of London. It is proposed to make such alterations in the benefice as will reduce the rector's income in future to 1200*l*. per annum.

DRESSMAKING AND DEATH.—An inquest was held at the St. James's Workhouse a few days since on Mary Anne Walkley, aged 20, in the employ of Madame Elise, Court dressmaker, 170, Regent Street. It appeared from the evidence that deceased, who was of a delicate constitution, and who worked in a room with nearly 30 others, was taken ill on Friday week, and on the following Sunday became much worse, when medical assistance was called in. She afterwards appeared to fall asleep, and her bedfellow, Miss Santry, who was examined as a witness, lay down by her side, but on awakening in the morning was shocked to find her dead. A post mortem examination showed that death resulted from apoplexy, the surgeon stating in answer to the coroner, that long hours of work in a crowded apartment, and sleeping in a close, badly ventilated room, would have a great tendency to produce the symptoms which he described. Another surgeon confirmed this evidence and described the bed-rooms, which were divided by partitions into small compartments, as being just large enough to contain two beds placed end to end. With two young women in each bed, he considered they were decidedly unfit places to sleep in, and more particularly in the state of health in which deceased had been. A third medical man, who had attended deceased during her last illness, expressed his opinion that the rooms in which she died were overcrowded and badly ventilated. The jury returned a verdict that deceased died of apoplexy; but there was too much reason to fear that her death was greatly accelerated by working long hours in a crowded workroom, and sleeping in a close badly ventilated bed-room. On Thursday the case was brought before the St. James's Vestry. Dr. Lankester, who had visited the premises, reported that the work and bed rooms were scrupulously clean and otherwise well managed, but that the ventilation was defective. It was referred to a Committee to consider how far it would be desirable to inspect houses where more than a certain number of persons work or sleep.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Registrar-General's Weekly Return states that in the week that ended Saturday, June 20, the number of deaths registered in London were 1191. The average number in the corresponding week of the 10 years 1853-62, corrected for increase of population, was 1143. The present return is therefore 48 above the average. Scarlatina was fatal in 97 cases, and smallpox in 64. During the week the births of 938 boys and 941 girls, in all 1879 children, were registered in London. In the 10 corresponding weeks of the years 1853–62 the average number was 1864.

CLAYDON.—Brother Ignatius, who has been inhibited from preaching in this parish by the Bishop of Norwich, has circulated among the parishioners the following explanation of the English Order of S. Benedict, to which he belongs:—"It is a newly formed society, strictly Church of England, formed because many members of the English Church feel called to devote themselves entirely to God's service, though not desirous of the yoke of the priesthood. 2. Because many have left the English Church for want of a monastic society in which to lead a regular life. 3. Because the Church of England did not at the Reformation abolish religious orders. 4. Because the dissolution was a violent proceeding of Henry's, unjust, wicked, and never approved by the authority of our Reformed Church. 5. Because the rule of S. Benedict is entirely scriptural, and in harmony with the doctrines of the Reformed English Church. 6. Because as long as the English Church is without such institutions she is in this respect unlike the universal primitive church. 7. Because she desires to afford her sons the regular means of acting out those counsels of perfection enjoined by Christ to those who are able to receive them—celibacy, voluntary poverty, perfect obedience. 8. Because the English Church, in her prayer book and canons, refers us to the Catholic bishops and ancient fathers as our best guides to a true understanding of Scripture, and they unanimously, and even in councils, authorised monastic orders. 9. Because such institutions are required now-a-days more than ever—first, to insure the services of literature in the cause of the Church against the attacks of heresy and infidelity (this work the secular clergy have no time for, their numbers being sadly insufficient for the wants of our increasing population); secondly, to supply in a well-organised 'regular,' colleges of home missionary helpers, there being an alarming dearth of labourers in the Lord's vineyard, and which dearth is fast increasing with the population; thirdly, to supply places of retreat for the overworked and poor among the parochial clergy, whose place during their period of rest might be supplied by a member of the monastic order."

Loughborough.—On Wednesday, before a bench of magistrates in this town, the Marquis of Hastings was charged with causing a cock to be cruelly tortured, and Edward Platts, Joseph Farebrother, and James Dumelba, his gamekeepers, were charged with aiding and abetting in the offence. Mr. Sleigh conducted the prosecution on behalf of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The principal constable of the society said that he had gone down to make inquiries regarding this charge. On the 4th of June, accompanied by an officer of the Society, he called on Platts, who told him that the Marquis of Hastings had had some good cock-fighting at Donnington Hall on a Sunday three weeks before. He said they fought six pairs of cocks, that there were six cocks killed, that they had all steel spurs on, and that the Marquis was one of the persons who put the cocks together to fight. The other persons accused were present. The Secretary of the Society and an officer in their employ stated that they had called on Lord Hastings on the 8th of June. They stated who they were, and told his Lordship that he and other gentlemen were accused of having been present at a cock-fight at Donnington Hall, and he admitted that the fight had taken place. Mr. Merewether, who appeared for the Marquis said, after the admission made to the secretary, he thought he could not say that there had been no cock-fighting, but his Lordship denied altogether that there had been any cruelty used in the sense of the words of the information. As far as Lord Hastings and the three keepers were concerned, he should relieve the Bench from any further trouble. A conviction against them was then entered. The magistrates ordered the Marquis to pay the full penalty of 5*l.*, and the three gamekeepers to pay a fine of 2*l.* each. The secretary stated that it was not the custom of the society to take the moieties of penalties allowed by the Act to complainants, and in this case he would be glad to hand such moieties, amounting to 5*l.* 10*s.*, to the Loughborough Dispensary.

Slough.—The new building of the British Orphan Asylum at this place was inaugurated on Wednesday by the Prince and Princess of Wales. In the course of the proceedings Mr. Edward Mackenzie, of St. Paul's Wharf, placed in the hands of the Prince the munificent sum of 12,000*l.* to pay the cost of the building, which is thus, in fact, given free for ever to the institution.

Manchester. — At the weekly meeting of the Central Relief Committee on Monday, the Hon. Secretary reported that the amount received last week was 2101*l.*; and the balance in the bank was 355.282*l.* Mr. Commissioner Farnall's report stated that there was a decrease of 1556 in the number of persons receiving relief in the 27 unions as compared with the previous week, and that since the 6th of December there had been a total decrease of 106,587. Grants of nearly 12,000*l.* were voted to various places.

Murder in Dundee.—On Sunday morning, about 4 o'clock, the residents in Gibbs' Land, Dundee, were alarmed by William S. Grant, a clerk in the employment of Mr. Stephen, shipbuilder, knocking at their doors and informing them that his wife was dead in the house. On proceeding with him she was found lying dead on her back across the threshold of the bedroom door, and on a post-mortem examination it was found that she had been murdered, every rib in her body being broken, and her lungs and bowels much contused. It is said that she had been a confirmed drunkard for some years, and that her husband had been rendered miserable by her. On Saturday evening Grant himself arrived home in a state of intoxication, and about seven o'clock the neighbours heard a loud noise in the house, and it is supposed that at that time the murder was committed. The husband, who has hitherto borne a very respectable character, has been apprehended on the charge of Wilful Murder.

Law.

Judicial Committee of Privy Council.—Rev. W. Long v. The Bishop of Cape Town.—This was an appeal from the Supreme Court of the Cape of Good Hope, and was regarded with much interest in the Church, inasmuch as it was known that the Bishop of Cape Town, who is Metropolitan of the Church in Africa, has been waiting for a delivery of this judgment in order that it may afford him a guide as to the proceedings he shall take in reference to Bishop Colenso, who is one of his suffragans. The Rev. W. Long, the appellant, was the incumbent of St. Peter's Church, Mowbray. In the year 1856 he disputed the right of the respondent, the Bishop of Cape Town, to hold a diocesan synod of the clergy and representatives of the laity of the colony, and persisting in his refusal to obey the laws adopted by that synod, he was suspended and ultimately deprived of his living. He appealed without success to the Supreme Court of the colony, and now appealed to this Committee. Lord Kingsdown in giving judgment said that the diocesan synod and its acts were illegal, and that the bishop had decided wrongly. They therefore annulled the sentence, and condemned the bishop in the costs.

Court of Exchequer.—The Alexandra.—The case which has been so long pending respecting the seizure of the steamer Alexandra was begun in the Court of Exchequer on Monday. It will be remembered that the vessel was seized by the Custom-house authorities at Liverpool on the plea that she was built and fitted out for the Confederate States, contrary to the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act. The prosecution, which was instituted by the Government, was conducted by the Attorney-General in person, and many witnesses were brought up from Liverpool in support of the case, including some of the spies engaged by the Federal authorities, and a person who had been employed up to a recent period by the Confederates' agents in Liverpool. The case for the prosecution closed on Tuesday. Sir Hugh Cairns on Wednesday addressed the jury for the defence, but called no witnesses, contending that no reliance whatever could be placed on the evidence of the principal witness for the Crown, who had commenced his career in the Confederate Navy and was now a spy of the Federal Government. The Lord Chief Baron in summing up, said that the Foreign Enlistment Act was intended to prevent the enlistment or engagement of His Majesty's subjects to serve in Foreign Armies, and to prevent the fitting out and equipping in His Majesty's dominions vessels for warlike purpose without His Majesty's license. The question in this case was whether the Alexandra was merely in course of building to be delivered in pursuance of a contract that was perfectly lawful, or whether there was any intention, in the port of Liverpool, or any other English port, that the vessel should be fitted out, equipped, furnished, and armed for purposes of aggression. Now, surely, if Birmingham, or any other town, may supply any quantity of munitions of war of various kinds for the destruction of life, why object to ships? Why should ships alone be in themselves contraband? The jury were lawyers enough to know that a man may make a vessel and offer it for sale. If a man may build a vessel for the purpose of offering it for sale to either of the belligerent parties, may he not execute an order for it? That appears to be a matter of course. The statute is not made to provide means of protection for belligerent Powers, otherwise it would have said you shall not sell powder or guns, and you shall not sell arms, and if it had done so all Birmingham would have been in arms against it. The object of the statute was this—that we should not have our ports in this country made the ground of hostile movements between the vessels of two belligerent Powers, which might be fitted out, furnished, and armed in those ports. The Alexandra was clearly nothing more than in the course of building. It appeared that, according to "Webster's Dictionary," equipping is furnishing with arms, and furnishing is given in other dictionaries as the same thing as equipping. It appeared to him that if true that the Alabama sailed away from Liverpool without any arms at all as a mere ship in ballast, and that her armament was put on board at Terceira, which is not in her Majesty's dominions, then the Foreign Enlistment Act was not violated at all. After reading some of the evidence, his Lordship said if the jury thought that the object was to furnish, fit out, equip and arm that vessel at Liverpool, that was a different matter; but if they thought the object really was to build a ship in obedience to an order in compliance with a contract, leaving those who bought it to make what use they thought fit of it, then it appeared to him that the Foreign Enlistment Act had not been broken. The jury immediately returned a verdict for the defendants. The Attorney-General tendered a Bill of exceptions to the Chief Baron's ruling.

Obituary.

Admiral the Hon. Sir George Elliot, K.C.B., died on Wednesday at his residence at Prince's Terrace, Knightsbridge, in his 79th year. He was the second son of the 12th Earl of Minto, by the eldest daughter of Sir George Amyand, and was consequently brother of the late, and uncle of the present, Earl of Minto. He was born in 1784, and married in 1810, the youngest daughter of Mr. James Ness, of Osgodrie, Yorkshire, by whom, who died in 1848, he had a numerous family, including Admiral George Elliot, the Countess of Northesk, Lady W. Compton, and Mrs Drummond, wife of the Hon. Capt. Drummond, one of the Lords of the Admiralty. The late Admiral entered the navy in 1794, in the St. George, flag-ship of Sir Hyde Parker, and was present in Lord Hotham's actions in 1795, and was on board the Goliah when that ship led the British fleet into action, on the 1st of August, 1798. For some time he was on board the San Josef and the St. George, flagships of Lord Nelson and Sir Charles M. Pole, in the latter of which, under Captain Masterman Hardy, he was present at the action off Copenhagen in 1801. In 1808 he captured La Jena, French corvette, of 18 guns and 150 men, and subsequently, when in command of the Aurora, in an action of three hours, he captured three Spanish gunboats near Tarifa. At the reduction of Java he was recommended to the notice of the Admiralty for the ability he displayed in superintending the landing of the troops. After chastising the pirates of Sambas, in Borneo, and assisting Col. Macgregor in reinstating the Sultan of Palambang, he returned home, and was for some time unemployed, his next appointment being, in 1827, to the Victory guardship at Portsmouth. In 1837, the year he obtained his flag rank, he was appointed Commander-in-Chief at the Cape of Good Hope, and in 1840 assumed the command of the fleet in China, where, in the additional capacity of joint plenipotentiary with Captain Charles Elliot, R.N., he superintended the earlier operations of the war from July to November. He returned home in 1841 in ill health, from the combined effects of the climate and over exertion in the discharge of the duties attached to his command. He filled the office of First Secretary to the Admiralty from December, 1834, until April, 1835, and was subsequently, until his appointment to the command at the Cape, a Junior Lord of the Admiralty. In 1830 he was appointed a naval aide-de camp to King William IV.; in 1831 he was nominated a Commander of the Bath, and made a Knight Commander of the Order in November last.

Sir Joshua Jebb, K.C.B., died suddenly yesterday morning at Charing Cross, under very melancholy circumstances. It appears that he was proceeding with a friend from his residence, The Elms, Parson's Green, Fulham, towards his offices in Parliament Street. They were both seated on the outside of one of the Fulham omnibuses, and when at about 11 o'clock, the vehicle had reached the Haymarket, Sir Joshua complained of being unwell. It was considered advisable to continue the journey to Charing Cross, and indeed, he expressed a desire to do so, but on approaching the Strand he fell backwards and became insensible. He was immediately lifted down and conducted to the shop of Mr. Starkie, the chemist, at the corner of Northumberland Street, where in a very few minutes he ceased to breathe. Summonses were immediately sent to the relatives, and the body still lies at Mr. Starkie's, until arrangements can be made for the coroner's inquest. Sir Joshua Jebb was born in 1793, and was therefore 70 years of age; his present wife is the daughter of the second Earl of Chichester. He had seen much service in the Royal Engineers, in Canada, America, and the West Indies, and became a Major in 1860. Latterly he has been more prominently known by his labours and writings as surveyor general of convict prisons.

Miscellaneous.

The Source of the Nile. — On Monday evening an extra meeting of the Royal Geographical Society was held at Burlington House, to welcome back to England Captains Speke and Grant, and to hear from them a short account of their discovery of the source of the Nile. An hour before the time of meeting the large room was crammed in every part, and large numbers were unable to obtain admission. In opening the meeting, Sir Roderick Murchison stated that the Queen and the Prince of Wales had expressed the greatest possible interest in this marvellous achievement of human enterprise. The King of Italy had sent two gold medals specially struck in honour of the occasion for presentation to Captains Speke and Grant, accompanied by a most flattering letter, which he would read to them. The French Geographical Society having given Captain Speke their gold medal for his discoveries in the Lake Nyanza district in 1858, Captain Speke had shown his sense of the honour done to him by naming the principal channel leading from the lake after the Emperor Napoleon. He then introduced Captain Speke, who would, he said, on behalf of himself and his companion, Captain Grant, read to them a paper on the "Nile and its Tributaries." On coming forward Captain Speke met with a most flattering reception, the whole meeting rising and cheering loudly. When silence was at last restored, Captain Speke said that before reading his paper he begged to introduce to them a little boy belonging to one of the most intelligent of the Equatorial tribes. It was through the friendliness and fidelity of a man of this tribe that he was able to complete his great work, and he thought it only just that the Government should educate some of the most intellectual of this race and send them back to their native country as consuls, to assist in spreading our commerce and civilization throughout Eastern Africa. The little fellow, a fine boy of about 14, is an excellent specimen of the intellectual black type, his nose being as straight and his forehead as high as those of an European, although his woolly head and dark skin were thoroughly characteristic of his African blood. He seemed in no way disconcerted at his reception, and was as cool and collected as if he had attended the meetings of the society all his life. Captain Grant had a similar companion with him. Captain Speke commenced his paper, "The Nile and its Tributaries Compared," by describing the Lake Nyanza, the principal head of the Nile. This lake is situated in lat. 3 deg. S., and from that point to its debouchure, in the Mediterranean, in lat. 31 deg. N., the Nile traverses a distance of over 3000 geographical miles, or nearly one-tenth of the circumference of the earth. When he discovered the Nyanza Lake in 1858, he found it to be a large sheet of sweet water, lying about 3500 feet above the level of the sea, and he at once felt certain that it could only be the source of some vast river such as the Nile. The natives had traditions, too, of its great extent, and certain Arab merchants of Zanzibar, who penetrated those regions in search of ivory, assured him that Nyanza was the source of some great river. Other traditions heard from the natives confirmed him in this opinion; and he believes he would have settled the question of the source of the Nile in 1859, by travelling to Uganda with an Indian merchant, had not the chief of the expedition fallen ill. On his return to England he found Sir Roderick Murchison deeply imbued with the necessity of at once completing the work he had left undone. He himself could not rest satisfied until the world had accepted his views, now happily confirmed by actual inspection and observation. On returning with his brave companion, Captain Grant, to Unyanyembe, 5 deg. south of the lake, in 1861, he hit upon a new route, which he supposed, from the accounts of the ivory merchants, would lead to a creek in the western flank of the lake; but owing to the confusion existing in the language of the country with regard to the terms river and lake, it turned out to be a new lake, the Luero-lo-Urigi, which once contained large quantities of water, but is now fast drying up. It is to the west and north of Karagwe that the great lake receives its largest supply of terrestrial water, through the medium of the Kitangule river, which drains off the Luero-lo-Urigi and many minor lakes. These lakes are all mere puddles compared to the Nyanza; but the Kitangule is a noble river, sunk low in the earth, like a huge canal, and measuring 80 yards across. The question now arises—what forms these lakes without number? The Mountains of the Moon, from whence they derive their water, are in the middle of the rainy zone, where he observed in 1862 that no less than 233 days out of the year were more or less wet days. The first place from which he obtained a view of Lake Nyanza during the second expedition was from the town of Mashonde, in the Uddu portion of the country of Uganda, on the western side of the lake. Pursuing his way northward along the shore to the valley of Katonga, which is situated on the Equator, the land above the lake becomes very beautiful, being composed of low sandstone hills deeply scored and seamed by the heavy rains, covered with gigantic grass of unsurpassed verdure, and by dells of trees as tall and straight as the blue gums of Australia. Travelling, however, is most irksome in this part of the country, for, owing to the gradual subsidence of all the streams, the moorlands surrounding them are mere networks of rushes covering unfathomable soft bogs. Crossing the Equator he reached the Mworango, a stream of moderate size, and said to flow out of the lake. It runs north, and joins the Nile in the kingdom of Unyoro, when its name is changed to Kafu. Further on, the Luajerri follows its example, and still further on, at the centre of the northern coast of the lake, issues the parent stream of the Nile, falling over rocks of an igneous character, and forming falls 12 ft. high, which he had christened by the name of the "Ripon Falls," in honour of the President of the Geographical Society at the time of the starting of the expedition. The escape of the Nyanza's waters, 20 miles north of the Equator, was the only outlet examined, owing to the barbarous restrictions placed on travellers by the king of the country. They, however, saw the junction of the Nile with the Kafu and Asua rivers, and crossed the Luajerri half-way between its escape from the lake and its junction with the parent stream. Proceeding down the Nile from the Ripon Falls, they first passed through a row of sandstone hills, after which the river rushes down due north with the beauty of a mountain torrent, running off at last into long flats, more like a lake than a river. In Unyoro it is increased by the contributions of the Kafu and Luajerri, and continues navigable as far as the Karuma Falls, where it rushes on with boisterous liveliness. They could not continue their passage beyond this point, owing to a war that was raging in the country. They next met the old river in the Madi country, where it still bears the unmistakable character of the Nile—long flats and long rapids. Here it is that another great feeder from the Nyanza lake, the Asua river, joins it on the eastern side. On the other side a long flat extends far into the country—as far, Captain Speke believes, as the little Luta Nzigi lake. With the rest of the Nile we ought to be well acquainted, but little is really known about it, owing to the fact of no one having yet taken the trouble to place Nilometers at proper spots. Proceeding onwards, the next great affluent is the Bahr-el-Ghazal, which joins the Nile with hardly any visible stream, having more the appearance of a lake than of a river. The second is the Geraffee river, which may be said to be only one-third of the Nile in size at its point of junction. Its source has yet to be discovered. Its character suggests the possibility of its coming from Lake Nyanza. The third affluent is the Southern Sobat river, also full and navigable. The Northern Sobat they passed without knowing it. Captain Speke then went on to describe some other tributaries of the Nile, concluding by giving an account of his meeting with Mr. Baker, who had nobly come up the Nile to meet him, with no less than three ladies. Mr. Baker and his party intended following out the stream supposed to lead to the little Luta Nzigi lake to its source. They would be pleased to hear that Mr. Petherick was in perfect health and excellent spirits, and trading energetically when last he heard of him. Captain Grant, who met with a similar round of cheering to that given to his companion, then addressed the meeting. He said that, nothing could give him greater pleasure than to bear witness before the eyes of the world to the energy of his friend, Captain Speke, during the whole expedition. Not one man in 10,000 who attempted such a journey would have come home victorious, and he felt proud at having had the honour and privilege of serving under such a chief. They had collected specimens of natural history, and had made many sketches. They were neither of them artists, so the sketches must not be judged too critically. He would, however, vouch for their accuracy. Sir Roderick then called on the meeting to give three cheers for the heroes of the evening, which was responded to by at least a dozen ringing rounds.—On Tuesday evening Captain Speke delivered another lecture at the Royal Institution in the presence of the Prince of Wales, the Comte de Paris and several other members of the ex-Royal family of France. This lecture was devoted chiefly to an account of the Wahuma and some of the other tribes inhabiting the shores of Lake Nyanza. He said that judging from the physical characteristics of those tribes, he considered them to be descended from the ancient Abyssinians. This idea was in a great measure confirmed by the traditions of the people, who, when questioned about their origin, always replied that they came from the north. The Abyssinians sprang from the union between the children of Shem and Ham, the negro blood being modified and toned down by the Shemitic admixture. He then went on to describe how the aboriginal inhabitants of Abyssinia, who were essentially an agricultural people, had been conquered and enslaved by nomad races, who lived on the produce of their flocks and herds. These ancient Abyssinians came down by degrees from the north, carrying all before them, and founding the great kingdom of Kittara, which was now split up into several minor kingdoms through continual internal wars. A singular tradition of the double origin of these people was repeated to him by one of the chiefs, who gravely told him that at one time the inhabitants of Kittara were half black and half white, one side of their heads having curly hair, the other straight. The largest portion of Kittara consists of the kingdom Unyoro. He gave a long and interesting account of the history of this people, tracing their Kings down to the present monarch. On the most fertile part of the shores of Lake Nyanza is the kingdom of Uganda, which is the most interesting of all the nations of equatorial Africa, being better cultivated and better governed than any other. The customs of Uganda are many of them most irregular. The Princes having large harems of women, their progeny is, of course, most numerous. When a King dies all his sons are burnt except his successor and two others, who are kept in case of accident until the coronation, after which one is pensioned off and the other banished to Unyoro. Untidiness in dress is a capital crime, unless the offender possesses sufficient riches to pay an enormous fine. Ingratitude, or even neglecting to thank a person for a benefit conferred, is punishable. The Court customs are also curious. No one is allowed to stand before the King, and to touch him or look at one of his women is death. They believe implicitly in magic and the evil eye, and the Kings are always attended by a certain number of women crowned with dead lizards, and bearing bowls of plantain wine in their hands. The King of Karagwe is the most civilised of all these native chiefs; before entering Uganda Captain Speke spent many days with him. In manners, civility, and enlightenment he might be compared with many Europeans. He owes much of this to the influence of an Indian merchant named Moussa Mzouri, who helped him by his advice to conquer his brother, with whom he was at war. He was much entertained with many of the King's questions, as to what became of the old suns and why the moon made faces at the earth. He also wanted to know whether England, of which he had heard from the ivory traders, could blow up the whole of Africa with gunpowder. The moment the King heard that he was desirous of going north he sent messengers to the King of Uganda to prepare the way for him. The King was most anxious to afford him every possible information about the country. While at the palace the King took him yachting on Murchison Creek for several days, and he frequently went shooting with the Princes of the Court, who, when he had shot anything, would rush up to and shake him heartily by the hand—a custom little known in that part of Africa. Before leaving they heard from the King Kamrasi that a body of white men had been seen to the north, who had killed numbers of the natives with a wonderful gun. This made him most anxious to push on, as he supposed the party of white men to be that of Mr. Petherick, who had appointed to meet him. He then started for Uganda, with a numerous retinue. Before leaving King Rumanika's palace at Karagwe he had noticed on several occasions three or four lofty mountain peaks, more than 10,000 feet high. The King of Uganda sent an armed body of men to meet him, who conducted him through the kingdom. Everywhere they went the people left their huts, leaving their provisions behind them. The fertility of this part is very great, and the scenery on the shores of the lake most beautiful. On arriving at the King of Uganda's capital he found it necessary to wrap up all his presents in chintz before sending them to the King, as nothing bare or naked could be looked at by his Majesty. He found the palace to consist of hundreds of conical tents, spread over the spur of a hill. Thousands of courtiers and attendants were to be seen engaged in every conceivable occupation, from playing on musical instruments to feeding the Royal chickens. On sending word to the King that he wished for an interview, that monarch sent back a sharp message that he was to sit on the ground and wait until he was at liberty. But he sent back word that he was a Prince, and not accustomed either to sit on the ground or to wait. A courtier followed him, prophesying all kinds of evil from his presumption. He however terrified the whole Court, King and all, into submission by merely opening his umbrella, which they took to be a deadly weapon, killing by magic. A chair was consequently allowed him, and he was received by the King surrounded by the Court, and having by his side the women crowned with dead lizards to ward off the effects of the evil eye. The King stared at him for about an hour, at the end of which time his Majesty said, "Have you seen me?" and retired to another tent, where the same process of staring was followed by a similar inquiry. The King went into a third tent, and Captain Speke followed. This time however, the monarch deigned to examine Captain Speke's Whitworth rifle. Captain Speke told him that it was the custom of the inhabitants of the country of which he was a prince to make presents of everything that they possessed to any King into whose country they entered. He accordingly left him several rifles and watches, and a quantity of gunpowder. He endeavoured to engage his Majesty in conversation about Petherick's party, and the possibility of opening trade through the north. It was a long time, however, before he gained his confidence. On leaving the King presented him with numerous valuable presents. He concluded by describing two drawings of Lake Windermere and the Ripon Falls, the scenery of which is most picturesque. The Prince of Wales remained for some time after the end of the lecture, examining the numerous specimens of arms, photographs, and drawings on the table.

HOPS.—Borough Market, Friday, June 26.

Messrs. Pattenden & Smith report the trade in a quiet state, the only demand being to supply the immediate wants of consumers. The plantation accounts are not altogether favourable; fly and lice increase, and the bine grows rapidly. Mould is also spreading in parts of Mid Kent. Prices remain without alteration.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE MARKET.

Monday, June 22.

The number of Beasts is considerably smaller than on Monday last. The demand is good, and in some instances our top quotations are exceeded. The supply of Sheep is about the same as of late; the demand is rather larger, and prices on the average are better. Choice Lambs are in request at rather higher prices. Trade is very dull for Calves at reduced rates. From Germany and Holland there are 680 Beasts, 4670 Sheep, and 350 Calves; from France 34 Calves; from Scotland, 106 Beasts; from Ireland, 60; from Norfolk and Suffolk, 2600; and 500 from the Northern and Midland counties.

Thursday, June 25.

We have a good supply of Beasts both as regards number and quality. The trade is not very active, yet prices on the average are about the same as on Monday last. We have exactly the same number of Sheep and Lambs as on Thursday last. The demand is rather larger than on that day, and Monday's quotations are well maintained. Trade is exceedingly heavy for Calves. Prices are lower, and many remain unsold. From Germany and Holland there are 340 Beasts, 2760 Sheep, and 553 Calves; and from Spain, 37 Beasts. Milch Cows, 90.

MARK LANE.—Monday, June 22.

The supply of English Wheat to this morning's market was unusually small, and met a quick sale at an improvement of 1s. per qr. The market was only moderately attended, and foreign Wheat was taken but slowly and in retail at late rates. Barley and Peas were steady at last week's quotations. Beans were rather dearer. With a large supply of Oats, the trade was slow, and prices were fully 6d. per qr. cheaper. Flour was unaltered in value.

Friday, June 26.

During the week the weather has been fine and hot, favourable to the growing crops, with the exception of Wednesday night, when we had a severe storm of thunder and lightning accompanied with heavy rain. The Wheat trade here, and in most of the country markets during the last few days has been dull, and rather lower; the demand for the Continent being for the present satisfied. Spring corn was firm with a good inquiry, excepting Oats, which were rather cheaper. Of American Flour some quantity has been taken for the Continent early in the week, but for consumption the trade was dull, and prices are unaltered. Since Friday last 20 vessels have been reported off the coast. The floating trade has been quieter this week. Wheat prices were not fully maintained. Spring Corn remained unaltered. Rye was in good demand and advancing; Linseed and Cottonseed rather lower. In Paris (June 25), holders asked late rates for Wheat and Flour; business remained limited. A few parcels of inferior Wheat have been sold at a small reduction. The present stock of Flour is estimated at 7750 cwt. The six marks for delivery this month are quoted equal to 40s. 6d. per 280 lbs. The arrivals of English grain and foreign Barley during the week have been small, of foreign Wheat and Oats good. This morning's market was very thinly attended, and scarcely any business was transacted in either English or foreign Wheat. Prices must be considered nominally the same as on Monday. Beans and Peas bring Monday's quotations. The Oat trade was dull, and to effect sales it was necessary to submit to a slight reduction.

Liverpool, June 23.—Wheat only in retail demand at a decline of 1d. since Friday. Flour slow sale, 6d. per barrel easier; a good deal offering ex quay. Indian Corn, sellers at 27s. 6d. for mixed American. Egyptian Beans offering at 30s. with a limited business. Oats and Oatmeal quiet at late rates.

Friday, June 26.—The market continues very dull, and prices are going down in all articles, as the quantity of stuff offering is considerably in excess of the demand.

News of the Week.

IN the House of Lords on Friday, in reply to the Marquis of CLANRICARDE, Earl RUSSELL said there was no truth in the report that the EMPEROR of the FRENCH had renewed his overtures to her Majesty's Government for the purpose of offering joint mediation in the civil war in America. On Monday, in answer to Lord LYTTELTON, the Duke of NEWCASTLE said that the Government had no intention of abandoning the colonists of New Zealand in their difficulties, and that the war with the natives was begun with the cordial support of the colonists themselves for their sole benefit. On Tuesday Earl RUSSELL stated that the French Ambassador had called on him and contradicted the rumour that the EMPEROR of the FRENCH was desirous of making propositions to Her Majesty's Government with a view to bring about a cessation of hostilities in America. The Earl of DERBY moved for a copy of the proclamation issued by Sir H. STORKS for the annexation of the Ionian Islands to Greece, and expressed his opinion that the cession would be neither advantageous to England, beneficial to the Islands, nor likely to conduce to the harmony of European arrangements. Earl RUSSELL defended the proposed cession, which was opposed by Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE and approved by Lord TAUNTON. The motion was ultimately withdrawn. On Thursday, on the motion of the Duke of NEWCASTLE, the British Columbia Boundaries Bill was read a second time.

In the Commons on Friday Mr. OSBORNE moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the present Ecclesiastical Settlement of Ireland. Mr. CARDWELL, on the part of Government, opposed the motion, and the debate was ultimately adjourned to Monday. On Monday, in answer to Mr. PEACOCKE, the SOLICITOR-GENERAL said that the practice of the American prize courts was identical with that of this country, and that her Majesty's Government had, so far, no reason to complain of the decisions of those tribunals. The adjourned debate on Mr. OSBORNE's motion for a select committee on the ecclesiastical settlement of Ireland was resumed, when Mr. GRANT DUFF and Mr. HENNESSY spoke in favour of the motion, Mr. P. DAWSON, Sir R. PEEL, Sir H. CAIRNS, and Sir G. GREY against it. Colonel GREVILLE moved the adjournment of the debate, which was negatived on a division by 228 to 67. Mr. LANIGAN then moved the adjournment of the House, which was agreed to without a division. On Tuesday Mr. ROEBUCK moved an address to the QUEEN, praying HER MAJESTY to enter into negotiations with the Great Powers of Europe for the purpose of obtaining their co-operation for the recognition of the independence of the Confederate States of North America. Lord R. MONTAGU moved an amendment expressing the earnest desire of the House that an impartial neutrality should continue to be maintained. After a long discussion the debate was adjourned to Thursday. On Wednesday Mr. EWART moved the second reading of the Weights and Measures Bill, the object of which was to apply the metrical system to all our weights and measures. The motion was opposed by Mr. HENLEY and Mr. HUBBARD, and supported by Mr. COBDEN and Mr. ADDERLEY. Mr. M. GIBSON and other members objected to the compulsory clauses of the Bill, and recommended that it should in the first instance be permissive only. Mr. EWART expressed his willingness to adopt the suggestion. On that understanding the second reading was carried by a majority of 110 to 75. On Thursday Mr. LAYARD stated that there was no truth in the statement of Mr. ROEBUCK that Her Majesty's Government had communicated to the Government of Washington the despatch of the EMPEROR of the FRENCH in November last in reference to intervention in America. Her Majesty's Government never had a copy of that despatch, and it was communicated to the Federal Government not by Lord LYONS, but by M. MERCIER, the French Ambassador at Washington. The House resolved itself into a Committee of Supply, when the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved a vote of 105,000*l.* for the purchase of the International Exhibition buildings at South Kensington. Lord ELCHO moved, as an amendment, the rejection of the vote, and Sir S. NORTHCOTE moved an amendment to reduce the vote by 25,000*l.* After a long and excited discussion, both the amendments were withdrawn, and the vote was negatived on a division by 287 to 121, being a majority of 166 against the Government. The Duchy of Cornwall Management Bill was read a second time.

From the United States we have the important news that the Confederates have invaded the Northern States. General LEE, with an army of 100,000 men, has crossed the Rappahannock in three divisions, and is threatening the cities of Washington, Baltimore, and Philadelphia.

PARLIAMENTARY MOVEMENTS.—The Berwick Election terminated on Monday in the return of Mr. Cargill the Conservative Candidate, by a majority of 18 over Mr. Mitchell, the numbers being 328 to 310.

CONVOCATION.—The Convocation of the Province of Canterbury met again on Wednesday after the recess. In the Upper House a report was presented from the Lower on the subject of joint action between the Provinces of Canterbury and York, in which it was suggested that although the two Convocations could not sit and vote together, they might appoint joint committees to deliberate together, and each report to its own body. Their lordships highly approved of this report, which was unanimously adopted. It was resolved on the motion of the Bishop of Oxford to appoint a committee to communicate with a committee appointed by the General Episcopal Synod of the United States, to consider the propriety of opening intercommunion with the orthodox branch of the Eastern Church. It was also agreed to memorialise the Queen on the propriety of dividing the diocese of Exeter, by creating a bishopric of Cornwall. In the Lower House the debate on Dr. M'Caul's resolution of last Session, "That it is not expedient to relax the rule of subscription to the Act of Uniformity," was resumed by Archdeacon Sandford, who moved as an amendment, "That the declaration required at ordination and on induction to a cure is sufficient for all clergymen." The Rev. J. Bramston moved the following amendment:—That the Prolocutor be requested to nominate a committee to consider the question of clerical subscription, and whether there are grounds for considering the subscription burdensome on the clergy, and whether it might be relaxed or modified without endangering the definitive faith of the Church of England." Archdeacon Sandford withdrew his amendment in favour of Mr. Bramston's, which was opposed by Archdeacon Denison. After a long discussion the House divided, there were for the amendment, 24; against it, 14. The amendment was declared carried. On Thursday in the Lower House the subject of the burial service, and the pledge made by the bishops in the House of Lords to consider whether any alterations could be made in it, was discussed. Some surprise was expressed that the bishops had made no communication to the Lower House on the subject, and a committee was appointed to consider the whole question, the Prolocutor being instructed to inform the Upper House of their readiness to concur with their lordships in the inquiry. The report of the committee of 1860 on cathedral chapters was adopted with some modifications.

Foreign.

FRANCE.—The Emperor arrived in Paris at 11 o'clock on Monday night, and presided at a Council of Ministers on Tuesday, returning in the evening to Fontainebleau. His Majesty will return to Paris to-morrow, and will leave for Vichy on Tuesday. An imperial decree has been published for an Universal Exhibition of Agricultural and Industrial Products of All Nations, to be held in Paris in May, 1867. The Emperor has addressed a letter to the President of the Council of State, in which his Majesty says:—

"Our system of centralisation, despite its advantages, is attended by the serious inconvenience of leading to an excess of administrative action. It is impossible to understand why an unimportant communal affair should require investigations lasting at least two years, owing to the intervention of 11 different authorities. The Emperor further expresses himself convinced of the urgency of this reform necessitating the revision of numerous laws, decrees, ordinances, and Ministerial instructions. His Majesty intrusts this labour to the different sections of the Council of State: 'for if,' continues the letter, 'the Council of State does not administer, it observes the acts of the Administration.' The Emperor concludes by saying:—'As I attach great importance to this reform, I rely upon the enlightened zeal of the Council of State to arrive very soon at a satisfactory solution.'"

An imperial decree has been published proclaiming
